VOL. 38. BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, ~~SATURDAY,~~ Monday MAY 2, 1904. NO. 1

NO SECRET.

There is no secret about Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. The label tells the whole story. There is a knack in making it. The only secret about it is the secret of its success.

This year, when cod liver oil is very scarce and high, all kinds of cheap, inferior oils are used to take its place, and all sorts of things presented as substitutes. Think of petroleum being taken as a substitute for cod liver oil!—too absurd. Think of the so-called wines, extracts and cordials of cod liver oil!—they are simply the shadow without the substance; no food value in them.

Its quality and purity can be absolutely depended upon at all times.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Toronto, Ontario.

Thorold, May 2.—Saturday morning as the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto electric engine was hauling a freight train on the trestle over the ravine near here, Robert Leary, the engineer, stepped out on the side of the motor to attend to the sand pipes. He slipped, falling to the ground, a distance of more than thirty feet. He was removed to the hospital at St. Catharines suffering from internal injuries.

Mrs. Farrow's Suicide.

Windsor, May 2.—Mrs. Mary E. Farrow, wife of H. W. Farrow, mail clerk on the Grand Trunk Railway, a patient at the Hotel Dieu, jumped from a second-story window at that institution Saturday morning, striking on her head and sustained injuries from which she died two hours later. Mrs. Farrow became ill about a week ago with typhoid fever.

THE JAPANESE WON FIRST LAND BATTLE OF THE WAR.

In a Gallant Infantry Charge They Drive Russians Back.

Little Fellows Put the Enemy to Rout North of the Yalu, and in Their First Land Victory They Captured 28 Quick Firing Guns—Russian New Formation Broken and the Japanese Hold a Dominating Position.

Tokio, May 2.—After five days of fighting, largely with artillery, the first Japanese army under Gen. Kuroki has forced a crossing of the Yalu River and yesterday, with a gallant infantry charge covering a frontage of four miles, it drove the Russians from Chiutiencheng and the heights on the right bank of the Iho or Aida River, which enters the Yalu from the north, almost opposite Wiju. The Japanese turned the left flank of the Russian position, and in the battle of yesterday they swept away the new front interposed by the Russians to check their onward movement.

Japs Dominant.

The present position of the Japanese is a dominating one, and they may force the abandonment of the defences erected by the Russians at Antung and other points lower down the river. Gen. Kuroki began the movement on Tuesday by ordering a detachment of the Imperial Guards division to seize the Island of Kurito, which is in the Yalu above Wiju, and a detachment of the second division to seize the Island of Kinteito, below Wiju, and establish their headquarters. One battery of Japanese artillery which had taken a position on a hill to the east of Wiju fired three volleys at Kosan, and at noon of Thursday the Russian batteries behind Chiutiencheng shelled Wiju, pounding one Japanese soldier with shrapnel. On Wednesday the Russians resumed the bombardment of Wiju, firing at intervals throughout the day. The Japanese artillery did not respond to this fire.

Fortifying the Iho.

Gen. Kuroki has received reports to the effect that the Russians are fortifying the heights on the right bank of the Iho River. These new defences are declared to extend from Chiutiencheng through the Village of Makao to Koshoki, a distance of three and a quarter miles. The Russians resumed their bombardment on Tuesday, but it was generally ineffective. Subsequently Gen. Kuroki ordered two companies of the Imperial Guards to cross the Yalu and make a reconnaissance along the left bank of the Iho for the purpose of discovering the character of the Russian fortifications along the heights on the right bank of the river. The Japanese force advanced toward Kosan and then detached a small detachment to the village, where a party of Russians were encountered. In the engagement which followed five Russians were killed. The Russians shelled the reconnoitering party from an emplacement in the hills in the southeast part of Yoshoko. This fire was without effect.

Fired All Night.

The Russian artillery on the hill behind Chiutiencheng, first at a high angle, opened on Wiju, the Island of Kurito and Seikodo, to the south of Wiju, where some Japanese batteries had taken possession. This firing continued into Thursday night, and Gen. Kuroki reports that while it was ineffective it disturbed his preparations for an attack. The Russians resumed the shelling of Wiju on Friday, but the Japanese guns did not reply.

The 12th division of the Japanese army was chosen to make the first crossing of the Yalu. It began its preparations on Friday by driving the Russians from their position on the bank of the river opposite Suikochin, which is eight miles above Wiju and the point selected for the crossing. This division constructed a pontoon bridge over the river and at 3 o'clock Saturday morning it began crossing. The entire division passed over the river during the day, and by 6 o'clock Saturday evening it was in the position assigned to it for the battle of Sunday. The movement of the 12th Japanese division was covered by the second regiment of field artillery and another artillery regiment of heavy guns.

Silenced Russ Fire.

At 10 minutes of 11 o'clock Saturday morning the Russian artillery posted to the north and to the east of Chiutiencheng began shelling the patrols of Japanese infantry, which had been despatched from Kinteito Island to Chuchodi, another island north of Kinteito, and under Chiutiencheng.

The Japanese batteries replied to this shelling and silenced the Russian fire. Later eight Russian guns posted on a hill to the east of the Village of Makao opened upon the Imperial Guards.

In this shelling the Japanese artillery to the east of Wiju responded and the Russians ceased firing. Then both the Chiutiencheng and the Makao batteries re-opened, and this fire brought a vigorous response from the chain of Japanese batteries on the Corean side of the river. The Russian guns fired for two hours before they were silenced. In his report Gen. Kuroki expresses the belief that his shelling was very effective against the Russians.

Aids to Infantry.

The Japanese losses in the bombardments of Saturday were two men killed and five officers and twenty-two men wounded. A flotilla of gunboats from the squadron of Admiral Hosoya participated in the fighting of Saturday. It encountered a mixed force of Russian infantry and artillery on the Manchurian bank of the Yalu, below Antung, and, after a sharp fight, scattered them to the hills.

A bridge across the main stream of the Yalu, just above Wiju, was completed at 6 o'clock Saturday night, and the second Japanese division and the Imperial Guards immediately began crossing.

They advanced and occupied the hills back of Kosan, facing the Russian position on the right bank of the fiver. All through Saturday night regiment after regiment of Japanese solhiers poured across the bridge, and at a late hour Saturday night Gen. Kuroki telegraphed to the general staff of the army: "I will attack the enemy on May 1 at dawn."

Attack at Daylight.

True to his promise, Gen. Kuroki, at daylight yesterday, centred all his artillery on the Russian position between Chiutiencheng and Yoshoko. To this fire the Russians made reply with all their batteries.

At 7 o'clock in the morning the Russian battery at Yoshoko was silenced, and half an hour later Gen. Kuroki ordered his line, stretching for four miles, to attack. The Japanese infantry, on the word of command, charged across the Iho, wading that stream breast deep, and began storming the heights at 8.15.

At 9 o'clock they had swept the Russian line back across the plateau.

Antung Burned.

Tokio, May 2.—11 a.m.—The Russians were forced to abandon Antung yesterday. They burned the town, and retreated to Fenghuancheng. The Japanese now control the estuary of the Yalu River.

Jap Loss 700; Russians 800.

Tokio, May 2.—(7 a.m.)—A supplemental report from Gen. Kuroki covering Sunday's fighting, says: "The Russians made two stands. The enemy's strength included all of the third division, two regiments of the sixth division, one cavalry brigade, about 40 quick-firing guns, many rifles, much ammunition, more than 20 officers and many non-commissioned officers and men as prisoners. I am informed that Major Kashtalinsky, commander of the Third East Siberian Rifles Brigade, and Lieut.-Gen. Kassalitch, commander of the Second Siberian Corps, were woundtd. Our casualties number about 700, and the Russian loss is more than 800 men."

Russians Admits Defeat.

St. Petersburg, May 2.—The general staff's account of the operations on the Yalu yesterday is as follows: "At 4 a.m. Japanese field batteries with 47 guns opened a terrific fire on our position at Turenchen and our troops posted near Potientsky. The overwhelming superiority of the Japanese in artillery and the heavy losses their fire inflicted on our troops occupying these positions made it clear to Gen. Sassulitch that it was impossible to hold Turenchen. Consequently the troops were ordered to retire from Turenchen; while still holding the Potientsky road. When Gen. Sassulitch despatched his telegram the Russian troops were retiring in good order from Turenchen and Schakhedzy to their second position and the battle was continuing at Potientsky and Tchingu."

ON THE VERGE OF HOSTILITIES

The desire of Russia to get its Black Sea fleet through the Dardanelles recalls the fact that the Black Sea fleet passed through the Dardanelles on one occasion and the act brought England and Russia to the verge of hostilities. It was in 1878 that Russia declared war against Turkey in consequence of the Bulgarian massacres. The Russians pressed forward to the very suburbs of Constantinople, and in order to prevent the capture of that city the British fleet passed through the Dardenelles notwithstanding all the treaties. Of course in Canada everyone is at liberty to use Dardenelles Turkish cigarettes, and whether they have cork silver or plain tips will not affect

MR. S. H. BLAKE AND THE BIBLE.

At the annual convocation of Wycliffe College, Toronto, Mr. S. H. Blake, in an address delivered to the students and others who were present, is reported to have said in reference to the introduction of the Bible into the public schools of the province, that "Canada had had 50 "years of schools without a Bible. "and the result was ballot-stuffing, "perjury, and a state of general "corruption, which was a seething "mass of infamy. If the Church "would only do its duty, not a year "would pass before the people would "demand that their children should "have placed in their hands the "book which was the basis of Chris"tianity, civilization and education."

There is too much truth in the statement that "ballot-stuffing, perjury and a state of general corruption, which is a seething mass of corruption" existed in Ontario in the past, which proper teaching may remove in the future. What is wanted at the present time is a union of the honest men of both parties and a firm resolve to stamp out at future elections every vestige of corruption. Let this be done and we shall have a more morally healthy public sentiment in the country.

The days of chivalry are evidently dead in Peterboro.

J. ARTHUR MARSH

Rev. Mr. Heeney's sermon, preached last night and published in another column, will be found highly interesting, particularly by Church of England people. That the latter will unanimously agree with him we take the liberty of doubting. But no one, we think, will deny him the meed of praise which right-minded people always render to a man with the courage of his convictions, who fearlessly grapples with a grave problem, and assuredly there is no graver problem than that which confronts the clergy of to-day, namely, "Why is the church losing its hold upon men and women?"

The Hamilton Spectator sticks to its belief that the Port Hope terminus would be best for the Trent Canal, and says:

"The Intelligencer's main objection can very easily be overcome. Any barge that is safe to cross Lake Simcoe is safe on Lake Ontario. Any barge that is safe to voyage in the stormy end of the lake—Trenton to the St. Lawrence—is safe in the western waters."

But Lake Simcoe, in size, is no more to be compared to Lake Ontario than the Hamilton mountain is to Mont Blanc. That fact, we think, would appear to effectually dispose of the question of rough water. As to "the stormy end of the lake—Trenton to the St. Lawrence," our esteemed contemporary will see, if he looks at the published map of the route of the Trent Canal, that, with Trenton as the terminus, the barges will not have to touch Lake Ontario at all between Trenton and Kingston; the voyage is all made through the beautiful and pacific Bay of Quinte.

Substitute For Candles.

There were two substitutes for candles. The one was the ancient oil lamp, the croosie (French creuset), a triangular metal saucer with an upright hook at the base to be hung up by. There was an inner saucer, movable, to graduate the use of the oil. At the apex of the angle was flame, coming from a wick made of pitch of rushes, which must be cut at full moon, as the flame was thought to wax and wane with the moon if cut at any other time. The other substitute for the candle was the bog candle. It was made by splitting up the resinous logs of the primeval firs that are found imbedded in the bogs.

They were left to dry at the fireside over the cruck or chain that held up the pot over the fire. The candlestick, called the peerman, was a stone with a hole in its center, into which was fixed a pillar of wood about four feet high and tipped with a cleft piece of iron, into which the candle fitted. The nose of the candle was always turned to the door.

When Japanese Maids Are Jilted.

When she no longer has any doubt as to his faithlessness, she gets up in the middle of the night and puts on a pleasing dress and wooden sandals. Attached to her headdress she carries three lighted candles, and suspended to her neck hangs a small mirror. She takes in her left hand a small straw effigy of the faithless one, and in her right a hammer and nails.

Walking gravely to the sanctuary, she selects one of the sacred trees, and nails the effigy securely to the trunk. She then prays for the death of the traitor, vowing that if her wish is granted she will take out the nails which trouble her god, since they are fastened to a sacred tree. Night after night she comes to the tree, adding one or two nails and repeating her prayers, persuaded that the god will not hesitate to sacrifice the man to save the tree.—London Mail.

A Floral Mystery.

The Chinese, Japanese and Siamese are peculiarly skillful at botanical feats. One of their wonderful achievements is known as the "changeable rose." This bloom is white in the shade and red in the sunlight. After night or in a dark room this curiosity of the rose family is a pure, waxy white blossom. When transferred to the open air, the transformation immediately steps in, the time of the entire change of the flower from white to red depending on the degree of sunlight and warmth. First the petals take on a kind of washed or faded blue color and rapidly change to a faint blush of pink. The pink gradually deepens in hue until you find that your lily white rose of an hour before is as red as the reddest peony that ever bloomed.

Auctions In China.

To a stranger a Chinese auction is a most curious spectacle. The auctioneer leans over a slightly elevated counter and exhibits his wares. He says nothing, neither does the bidder, who merely steps forward to the auctioneer and runs his fingers up his sleeve, making pressure on the salesman's arm, thus indicating how much he will pay for the article. Then another and another repeat the action until the one signifying the highest price receives the article without a word being exchanged on either side. Only the auctioneer and the successful bidder know the price offered and accepted.

Kindness.

Be kind no matter if you are on the honest run to catch your interests in life. While you run let your fleeting presence prove a blessing to those whom you must pass in the race to reach the goal. Leave behind you a trail of golden remembrances of words and smiles of good cheer that have cost you nothing at all in self sacrifice or money or physical strength or mental effort.

Sensitive.

"Ah," he protested, "my love for you is the greatest thing in the world. It is larger than the world. It is wider than the sea. Let me pour it into your ears."

"Sir," ejaculated the fair maid, "do you mean to insinuate anything about the size or shape of my ears?"

A Great Composer.

"It was a mistake to ask that man if he thought America would ever produce a great composer. I am afraid you hurt his feelings."

"I don't see why," responded the musical young woman.

"He is the inventor of a soothing sirup.".

Sheer Waste.

Wife—John, is there any poison in the house? Husband—Yes. But why do you ask? Wife—I want to sprinkle some on this piece of angel cake and put it where the mice will get it. Wouldn't that kill them? Husband—Sure; but it isn't necessary to waste the poison.

Wanted Details.

"It was like this," said the private citizen. "Just as the three burglars crawled in at the kitchen window the clock struck 1, and"—

"Excuse me," said the great detective, "but which one of the three did the clock strike?"

Impartial.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"A COUNTRY GIRL" PLEASED LORD AND LADY MINTO.

When "A Country Girl" first appeared in Ottawa in December, Lord and Lady Minto and party occupied a box and congratulated the manager of the company in producing such a magnificent piece, and said that the second act scene, which is a duplicate of the interior of the Palace of Fine Arts, London, was an exact reproduction. The company returned to Ottawa in six weeks time and Lord and Lady Minto witnessed the performance for a second time, which is considered a compliment in the theatrical field. It is a pleasure to commend "A Country Girl." This great attraction will be at the Carman to-morrow night, and should receive a crowded house.

ROSELLE KNOTT REALLY A CANADIAN.

Misinformed dramatic writers have since Roselle Knott burst upon the theatrical horizon as a star, persisted in speaking of her as a product of california. References to this now much advertised young lady are almost invariably accompanied by some remark concerning her early life. It is true that Miss Knott made her first professional appearance in California as a leading lady with Robert Mantell's company but her first appearance was in an amateur performance of "Pinafore" at the Grand Opera House in Hamilton, Ont., her home, where Miss Knott was born June 26th, 1878—not so long ago that she need be deceptive about the exact date; so after all Miss Knott is really a Canadian girl. This splendid actress will appear at the Carman on Wednesday night, in a magnificent production of the great play, "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

Scents That Affect Breathing.

The perfumes of certain flowers affect the digestion or breathing or cause dizziness and even fainting fits. Vanilla is troublesome to many, so is the white flower of the Ligustrum japonicum and the pitosperum. The tuberose, jasmine and lilac are objectionable to some. The Datura arborescens makes people drowsy. This action of flowers is due to the scent and is distinct from the influence of pollen, which produces hay fever.

Joy and Sorrow.

Joy, they say, is a sensation similar to sorrow. It merely hurts along lines that we enjoy. We go to the theater, weep over a teary play and are delightfully sad. Some people's greatest joy lies in being sad.

Red Pepper For Ants.

A small boy who lived with his aunt and grandma noticed that the regular black pepper shaker was filled with red pepper. This startled him, and, turning to his aunt, who sat next at the table, he said: "You better not eat any of that red pepper, Aunt Harriet. Grandma says that red pepper kills ants."

The Jilt In Italy.

In some countries a betrothal is considered only a degree less sacred than a marriage and therefore a breach of promise, especially on the girl's side, is regarded as very shocking. This is very much the case in Italy, where a girl who after betrothal has changed her mind is known for life as a civetta (owlet) and has rarely another chance of matrimony. The term "owlet" conveys no idea of reproach here, but in Italy it is significant, because owlets are there used for insnaring other birds.

I received great benefit from one bottle, and five bottles completely cured me—and there has never been a symptom of kidney disorder since that time." 86

Japanese Traits.

In no country is William Morris' golden rule, "Have nothing about you but what you know to be useful and believe to be beautiful," so scrupulously followed as in Japan. The politeness of the Japanese—a sign of "equality"—the politeness of this hierarchical east, is in surprising contrast with the aggressive rudeness of our democratic communities. Gentleness and cordiality are the Japanese rule; no scenes of violence. The readiness with which Europeans fly into a passion stupefies the Japanese, appears to them to be a sign of innate coarseness. In his consideration for others a Japanese habitually refrains from making any show of his personal sorrows. Only her vanity has led Europe to fancy that the Japanese regard western civilization as superior to their own and that therefore they are "Europeanizing" themselves purposely. The western diplomatist who described modern Japan as a "bad translation" of Europe merely shared the delusion and conceit of foreigners generally.—F. Challaye in Revue de Paris.

"The Dog Will Have His Day."

In "Hamlet," act 4, scene 1, we read:

Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew, the dog will have his day.

The latter line has become a popular saying, but we are naturally inclined to ask what it means. Why should a dog have a day all to himself any more than any other four footed creature? Is not the passage a piece of silly slang, and ought it not to be suppressed, like any other cant phrase that is born in the streets? To harmonize the verse with sense and Shakespeare a friend has suggested that the last word ought to be changed to bay. We should then read, "The cat will mew, the dog will have his bay." I have no doubt that Shakespeare wrote it so and that the word day is a misprint and nonsense. The analogy between the cat's mewing and dog's baying is self evident and intelligible.

Bismarck's Wonderful Eyes.

No one ever came into the presence of the chancellor without a deep sense of the mind power reflected from those large gray blue orbs. Their flashing brilliancy and the piercing penetration of the glances shot from them were never to be forgotten. They seemed incapable of expressing affection, and their steel-like hardness only inspired awe for the towering intellect, the irresistible will, the defiant courage, the fiery energy of their owner. To watch the lightning changes of expression mirrored in them, reflecting the strong emotions evoked by humbled pride, wounded ambition and thwarted selfishness, and, above all, by the loss of his absolute sway, was indeed an enviable privilege.—Henry Villard in Century.

Eating at Night.

Every living bird and beast strives its utmost to cram itself with food before retiring for the night, and this food is digested as the night progresses. A Chinese child is considered a year old at its birth, and its age is reckoned not from its birthdays, but from its New Year's days. If it is fortunate enough to be born on Feb. 1, the day before the Chinese New Year's day, it is said to be two years old when it is two days old. It is one year old when born, and another year is added on its first New Year's day.

JAPS WIN FIRST LAND BATTLE

from the front say that Japanese forces began an attack on the Russians on the Yalu River last Tuesday. The battle was continued Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. A decisive struggle is anticipated to-day (Sunday). On Thursday the Japanese effected a crossing of the Yalu and secured a lodgement on the right bank of the river. The fighting on Saturday was at long range, and there was a duel with heavy guns across the river. Fighting was resumed at daylight to-day (Sunday). The Russian force is estimated at 30,000 men. The Japanese loss is reported to have been small thus far.

2 p.m.—Advices received here state that the 12th division of the Japanese army forced a crossing of the Yalu River, above Wiju, just before dawn Saturday. The second pontoon bridge across the river Saturday night and the Imperial Guards of the second division crossed during the night. The Russians left flank has been turned, and a general attack began at dawn (Sunday), nearly all the Japanese batteries on the south of the river and a flotilla of gunboats co-operating with the army. The Japanese have advantages of position and numbers, and are confident of routing the enemy.

3 p.m.—The Japanese to-day captured Chiutencheng, ten miles north of Antung, which is regarded as the key to the Russian position on the right bank of the Yalu River. It is expected that the Russians will retreat to Fenghuancheng, which is on the road to Liaotung.

Private advices say that the Kurds attacked two villages north of Sassun, losing 26 killed.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Hooray! for May.

Did you see me out with my torpedo hat on yesterday?

It was over 80 in the shade yesterday afternoon.

Who said anything about the price of coal?

This is the season of the year when the high ball has to take a back seat for the moth ball.

Thanks, Miss May, you brought us just the weather we've been waiting for.

Seemed like a shame to be in doors yesterday.

No use talking, people are queer. There's the man on the next block, now. He didn't go to church in the winter sometimes because the weather was too inclement. Yesterday he stayed away because it was too fine to be cooped up in doors.

The grass, these days, is growing like the interest on a note.

A few weeks of this weather and we'll feel like forgiving Laurier for sending us that 20 below zero winter.

Goodness gracious! But didn't the footbridge wobble yesterday when all us church-going people got on it! Surely it wasn't the weight of all our sins that made it shake so.

Church union is in the air. In fact there will be a whole lot of church unions next month, unless all signs fail.

Did you ever notice what an attractive appearance a little paint gives to a dwelling? Of course you have. And did you ever notice what a number of dwellings there are on the outlying streets of Belleville which would be the better for it? And the reason the people don't paint them, we are told, is because their assessment would be at once raised on account of "improvements." Now, if that is correct, is it the right system to work on? Everybody will admit that it is desirable to have the buildings beautified, why, then, penalize a man who goes to the expense of painting his house and fences? Would it not be more reasonable to reduce his assessment as a reward for his enterprise? Such a proceeding might be unorthodox, but it would contain a large amount of good horse sense.

GOOD-BY KING BACHUS

Toronto Junction Vivid With Degradation and Beastliness.

Rowdyism a Mild Term to Describe the Incoming of the New Temperance Measure—Drinking on the Streets Because There Was No Room in the Inns—"Dead Men" Thrown Promiscuously Everywhere—Eight Arrests.

Toronto Junction, May 2.—The animal nature was visible in no small degree among the thousands of people who thronged this town's streets on Saturday afternoon and evening. The event was the ushering in of the local option bylaw and giving a parting salute to King Bachus and six of his satellites, the bars. There is no denying that the crowd made it a success, if debauchery, fighting and ill-temper constitute features worthy of the term celebration. Rowdyism is a mild term for the disgraceful scenes which witnessed the incoming of this temperance measure. Men who seldom drank to excess, eagerly grabbed at bottles, flasks, even pails and buckets filled with liquor, and hied themselves to back lanes, where others helped them to swallow the contents.

Herbert's liquor store handed out thousands of bottles of various kinds of liquor. Much of it was drunk on the open streets, but more of it in the back lanes and around Batt's old lumber yard. The "dead men" were thrown promiscuously everywhere.

Police Had Their Troubles.

The crowds thronged Dundas street from the Occidental Hotel to the corner of Keele street, the main corner of the town. Special constables were sworn in by Chief of Police Royce and were kept constantly busy dispersing the gangs which congregated on the corners and around the hotels. The bars were so crowded that fighting in them was impossible. A fight started at the Avenue Hotel; but there was not room for a man to lift his arm, and less room in which a man could be knocked down. The fighting was done on the street.

About the same time Chief of Police Royce was having his troubles near the Occidental Hotel. No sooner did he lay hands on his man than two men in the crowd jumped for him and tried to effect a rescue. Chief Royce held on to his man until two more policemen broke through the mob, and Royce handed his prisoner over to them. He then tried to get the crowd to move back and allow the prisoners to be taken to the station, and while doing this another fellow in the crowd seized the arm of the second man arrested in an endeavor to pull him loose.

Chief Drew Revolver.

He was a big fellow, but Royce tackled him, and with the situation approaching a somewhat desperate shape, drew his revolver and threatened to arrest more of them if they continued to be riotous. Cowed by the glistening barrel and determined appearance of the officers, the mob fell away. The prisoners were then conveyed to the station, followed by several thousand people who surrounded the building and made verbal demonstrations of violence, but took no means to carry them out. Other arrests were also made, and by 8 o'clock there were eight prisoners in the cells. They were:

John Smith, Brantford.

William Crews, Toronto.

Henry Robb, 149 Strachan Avenue, Toronto, aged 18.

John Farrell, bartender at the Subway House, is minus a ticket for Winnipeg and his coat. He hung it up in the hotel, and some sneak thief ran off with it. A man at the Avenue Hotel is said to have lost his watch in the crowd, but he hasn't given his name to the police.

Hotels Closed Early.

It is reported that the license inspector was pretty vigilant, and that one hotelkeeper may be charged with selling after hours.

Considering the amount of drinking done, it is surprising that more helpless men were not seen on the streets. The crowd was a pretty orderly one, but in back lanes and out-of-the-way places the orgies of the half-drunken youths were something awful. Scenes the most revolting were witnessed, and those participating in them seemed to take delight in making the last of liquor in Toronto Junction vivid with degradation and beastliness.

The hotels were closed fully half an hour before the time required by law.

The police were called in to all the hotels except the Avenue, before 7 o'clock, and the barrooms rid of their maudlin crowd.

After the hotels were closed and the supply of liquor cut off, the pugnacity of the revelers began to ease off.

Mayor Chisholm's house was serenaded, and a group of young fellows outside treated him to the chorus "How Dry I Am."

JAMES MASSIE DEAD.

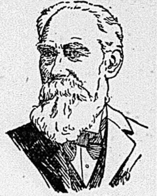
Toronto, May 2.—James Massie, registrar of East and West York, died at his residence, 68 West Bloor street about 4 o'clock Sunday morning after an illness of a day and a half. He was stricken on Friday evening about 7 o'clock with uremic convulsions and was found unconscious by members of the household. Though he partially recovered consciousness he lingered in a critical condition until death ensued.

In the death of James Massie Toronto loses one of the most upright and respected citizens. He was connected with many charitable institutions, his activity in religious and benevolent work being such as to cause sincere regret that one so useful to his fellows should be suddenly removed. James Massie was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, 71 years ago, and removed to Canada with his parents in 1852, being then in his 19th year. He settled in Guelph, where for years he carried on business as a wholesale grocer and biscuit manufacturer. Twice he served the citizens of Guelph as mayor, and in 1876 was elected a member of the Legislature for the riding of South Wellington. Subsequently he was appointed registrar of Wellington, and in October, 1880, was appointed warden of the Central Prison, succeeding the late Captain Prince. This office he held until January, 1896, when he was appointed registrar of East and West York.



JAMES MASSIE.

It was in the discharge of his duties as warden of the Central Prison that his splendid powers of organization were manifested. Under him most of the industries within that institution were inaugurated. Being a skilled mechanic he invented a bed which is in use in the Sick Children's Hospital and other institutions of the kind, and the bed industry was one of those he established at the prison. He also inaugurated the broom factory, the binder twine factory, the woollen mill, the woodenware department and the green houses which have proven to be a source of considerable income to the province.

Deceased was connected with numerous charitable institutions, being treasurer of the Associated Charities, a trustee of the Prisoners' Aid Society, and a member of the boards of the Children's Aid Society and the House of Industry. He took a lively interest in these and other movements for the amelioration of the condition of society. He was also treasurer of the Caledonia Society and a member of St. Andrew's Society. Since coming to Toronto he has been connected with new St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. His widow and four children survive. The interment will take place at Guelph on Tuesday.

Shaw Beats Richardson.

Toronto, May 2.—Saturday John Shaw, ex-Mayor, beat F. H. Richardson for the controllership consequent upon the latter's resignation owing to the recent ballot box scandals. Mr. Shaw received 7,498 votes, and Mr. Richardson 2,506, giving Mr. Shaw a majority of 4,992.

Mr. Richardson appealed to the electors of Toronto to pass judgment on his connection with the municipal election frauds. The answer of the people is one of want of confidence in Mr. Richardson.

Dante Rossetti's Practical Joker.

One day Howell picked up a treasure in the form of a piece of old blue Nankin. He invited a party of friends to come and admire it, and Rossetti surreptitiously carried it home with him and invited the same party to come and view an equally fine piece of china in his own possession. But Howell had his revenge. Guessing what had happened, he found his way to Rossetti's hiding place, took away the china and put another dish in its place. When the party assembled Rossetti was challenged to produce the china.

He returned to the dining room with the package and began to carefully remove the wrappings. As the dish became uncovered a curious puzzled expression came over his face, and when it was entirely exposed to view he stood still in blank astonishment. For a few moments he was silent; then his pent up feelings burst out in a wild cry:

"Confound it! See what the spirits have done!"

Every one rose to look at the dish. A dish it was certainly, but what a dish! Instead of the beautiful piece of Nankin that was expected there was only an old delft thing, cracked, chipped and discolored through the numerous bakings it had undergone.

If the world would only give a man credit while he is doing things there would be more incentive to those who hustle.

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOUM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

As is natural, all this fuss and feathers has drawn considerable attention, and quite a good sized ring is formed around the duelists. They find themselves surrounded by a mixed audience of Jew and Gentile, Moslem and pagan, black faces, brown faces and white.

The world is pretty much the same, take it as you will. When men come to blows there is no question about the audience if others are within reaching distance.

Even on the piazza a number of the guests belonging to the hotel can be seen, having been attracted by the rumpus. As Mynheer Joe notes this with a glance, somehow he finds himself wondering whether she is there, and if Molly will understand that he is in this street brawl simply as the defender of her paterfamilias—the insignificant but belligerent little aggressor. He hopes she may learn the truth.

No time is given for reflection, since the other means business from the word go. Having prepared himself for the work in hand by rolling up his sleeves, the Western cyclone now comes at the explorer with great fury.

His force seems irresistible; so does that of the giant waves that come rolling in with tremendous energy, and yet the result is ever the same when they strike against the wall of rock that marks the shore. There is a concussion, a splendid picture; the rock is there just the same as before, but the wave has been beaten back, baffled, into the trough of the sea whence it sprang.

So in this case, Mynheer Joe represents the steadfast rock of Gibraltar. He meets the furious onset of his powerful antagonist coolly, and for a brief period blows rain between.

Then the assailant backs out to get a new lease of breath. Astonishment is marked upon his face. He has believed himself an expert in the use of his fists, but in this quiet man he finds one who can give him points.

Although baffled in his first endeavor to down this champion of the little terrier that snapped at his heels, the other does not give up the fight yet. He is still in it, to the extent of his two hundred pounds' avoirdupois, and if he can only put one of his sledge-hammer blows just where it is wanted, he will ask for nothing better.

Thus, when the first round ends in the rough Western cyclone being hurled back, winded and baffled, if not badly used, a murmur of gratification arises from the crowd.

They have already sized the two duelists up, and although Mynheer Joe is not near so heavy as his antagonist, the victory is in his grasp, according to their way of thinking.

As for Joe, himself, he means to injure the other just as little as possible. Circumstances and his love of fair play have thrown him into the arena, and since he has taken a hand in the game, he must carry it out to the end.

This sort of business is not to his liking; he has never posed as a gladiator or a prize-fighter before an audience, but he firmly believes he is doing his whole duty.

While he regains his breath and prepares for a second round, the Western tornado gives vent to his feelings in his explosive way:

"Ginger, I reckon I've bit off more 'n I can chew this time. Looks like something of a trap hereabouts But you'll find me game to the backbone. I come of a game family, and we don't give up the ship. Rather like the cut of your jib, stranger, and your style in taking the part of that little bantam tells me you're a Yankee, every inch of you. Sorry to spoil your looks, but understand what you invited when you ripsawed me."

"Come on; I'm tired of this," is the only answer he can get from Joe.

It is a plain invitation, and the other accepts it in the spirit it is given. He again advances to the attack, his face showing a determination to end the battle then and there.

Once more the air seems to be full of flashing arms as the two engage in a hot series of blows and counters, side-shoots and parries. Neither appears to be getting the better of it, and yet one experienced in the craft of boxing can readily see a difference in their work. The assailant is putting in his best work, endeavoring to win; while Mynheer Joe does not seem to be exerting himself to the utmost. When the time comes for him to do so, something will give way in Denmark.

Joe is waiting for a chance. It is his desire to get in a knock-out blow. This, to be quite successful and end the affair, must be delivered in a certain quarter, and it is with this idea in view that he dallies.

Fiercer grow the efforts of the other to get in behind his guard. Those who look on see that the fighting is almost wholly done by one man, and if inexperienced, they believe he has the matter all in his own hands. They will learn something presently.

Watching the panting cyclone make a last desperate rush upon Joe, they see an arm suddenly shoot out straight from the shoulder, and hear a resounding whack as the knuckles come in contact with the other's head.

That ends it.

The blow has been adroitly given, and Joe stands there alone on the flags. His antagonist has reeled back in the arms of a friend. There is no more fight left in him; that is positive.

Loud exclamation arise; they mark the approbation of the audience. The affair has ended just as nearly as every one has wished—if we except the defeated participant himself. Mynheer Joe has no desire to remain there the centre of attraction. He is modest by nature and seeks no notoriety.

As he turns to move away he feels his hand squeezed. Turning, he finds the little man whose champion he became. The weazened up face of the bantam glows with pleasure.

"A thousand thanks, my good fellow! You gave him all he deserved—the beast! Just what I would have done for him, if you had let me get at him! Oh, you needn't smile; size doesn't cut a figure in it. All depends on scientific skill, sir—on skill!"

"No doubt. Glad to have done you a service. See you some time later," says Joe, conscious that the crowd is pressing round them again and feeling very unpleasant.

"But, my dear sir, you must allow me to publicly thank you for your services. Here is my card"—Joe rams it in his pocket without even a glance at it—"and I beg that you will not be offended if I offer you this."

Before Mynheer Joe realizes what he is about, the other has filled his hand with gold pieces. So indignant is the explorer at the act that he does not even note the fact of their being English sovereigns, but with an explosive ejaculation, hurls the precious metal out upon the square.

This causes a wild stampede of the crowd; excitement reigns supreme; donkey drivers tussle with dragomans, fakirs roll over Arab sheiks—all filled with the mad greed of gold. Never before in the history of Cairo has the precious metal been sown broadcast like this.

The little man, whose idea seems to be that money can pay for any service, looks surprised at first, but shows no signs of anger. He is something of a philosopher on a small scale and accustomed to meeting strange people.

"Very well," he chatters with a wave of the arm; "we will consider the obligation settled by my thanks, then. If I can do you a favor at any time, call upon me, good fellow."

With this, he marches off. His arrogance is really amusing. Mynheer Joe would be tempted to use the toe of his boot to accelerate the fellow's departure, only that he remembers one important factor—this little man is the "dear old governor" of the charming Molly, and any indignity offered to him will be sure to recoil on his own head. So he allows the dwarfed pugnacious specimen to depart in one direction, while he starts to leave the scene in another.

Neither of them gets five feet away ere some acquaintance brings them up. With Joe it is Mr. Grimes. The silver king has not known of the duel on the flagging until it is over. Then some one tells him that the gentleman who so lately accompanied him in his walk is engaged in a fight near by.

As he meets Joe face to face, his eye glances up and down the other's figure. There is not a sign of his having been in a fracas.

"All a mistake," he mutters aloud.

"What is?" asks Joe smiling.

"They told me you were engaged in a street brawl. I came hurrying up, supposing you had been marked already by secret sympathizers of the False Prophet, known to be in Cairo, only to find that they have deceived me."

"Not at all, my dear fellow."

"Do you mean to say you have been in it?"

"I must plead guilty."

"They pitched on to you?"

"On the contrary, I think I did the aggressive. Never could see a big dog set on a small one."

"Oh, that's the way the game runs, is it? Well, did you chaw the big dog up?"

"I think I knocked him out. He's in that cluster over yonder. It's a lesson to him, I hope, though I must admit the little chap was deuced saucy, and the other didn't give way until forced almost beyond human endurance."

"For my part, I'd have let 'em alone. Because a man is small, it's no reason he should impose on those who are larger. The chaps need a lesson to teach 'em something," says the silver king, with a shake of the head.

Mynheer Joe laughs softly.

"Let me complete my confession, my friend," he says, with charming frankness.

"Willingly."

"There was another reason why I threw myself into the breach and took up arms against the more powerful side."

Mr. Grimes elevates his eyebrows and looks at his companion in a peculiar way.

"Well?" he says.

"It was on account of beauty that I took part in this disgraceful affair."

"What! Was the old villain beating his wife?"

"Nonsense! The thought of Molly Tanner spurred me on to interfere."

"Come, no joking! What has she to do with the quarrels of street brawlers?"

"You are very obtuse, Mr. Grimes. It was her father who was in the affair."

"Oh, a light breaks upon me."

"Glad of it, sir. You see, I couldn't stand by and see a little man like Demosthenes Tanner being imposed upon. I brushed him aside and told his adversary to fight some one nearer his size. He did so, and—well the result is yonder."

"A little man, eh?"

"Well, he's small when compared with—say you or myself, for instance."

"Tanner—oh, yes, of course," with a grin.

"And, really, the other chap towered above him like a giant. I never felt better than when I faced him and gave him his quietus."

"Is he down there yet?"

"I think he's getting over it now. See, the crowd parts. That's him sitting there, with his hand up to his head. I reckon he's dazed."

Mr. Grimes looks.

Then he utters a low whistle.

"You've done it, my dear fellow!" he says, aghast.

"Oh, he'll be over it presently; may have a headache to-morrow. But these knock-out blows, if properly given, don't kill," says Joe, coolly.

"It ain't that," continues Mr. Grimes.

"What then?"

"Well, you see— Deuce take it! Here she comes! Now there will be the mischief to pay!"

Mynheer Joe hears his words, and, turning his head, glances around. There is no difficulty in discovering just what is meant. From the direction of the piazza a figure in white advances hastily. The lights of the piazza flash from the diamonds in her ears and at her neck.

It is Molly!

Straight she comes to where they are standing, as if in that motley crowd her eyes have fallen upon these two figures first of all, and in them she recognizes friends.

Mynheer Joe feels a thrill of honest pride as it flashes upon him that this beauty will soon be thanking him from her heart for standing up in her dear old governor's place and meeting the attack of an enraged giant.

Molly Tanner reaches them. It is Mynheer Joe she sees, and to him appeals. Her looks are startled. He will never forget how lovely she appears when she clasps his arm, and, in a breathless manner, gasps:

"Oh, Mynheer Joe, is it true? Has my dear old governor been hurt? He

PUSHING AHEAD....

Everyday finds us steadily advancing and requiring more and more men to do our work.

And we get the workmen—workmen of the best type, too. Just the kind you want to do your work, that's the style of men we are looking for.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

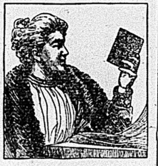
WOMAN'S WORLD

MISS MARCH-PHILLIPS.

A Philanthropist Who Has Done Good Work In London.

Men and women who give of their fortune and time to remedy disease and root out ignorance are philanthropists whose work cannot be too highly commended. The founding of free hospitals, schools and libraries has proved a great boon to the world, but to my mind the highest philanthropy is that which espouses the cause of the lowest grade of proletarians and of the wanderers and forsaken ones in great cities.

Foremost in this latter branch of benevolence in London is Miss March-Phillips, a clever artist and writer and an exceptionally happy spinster. Through her agitation in the press she has enlisted the aid of influential and wealthy Britons who have contributed generously to the founding of comfortable lodging houses for the great horde of the virtually homeless, shifting population in the east end. Since her work began it has been noticed that there is an annual decrease in the arrests and imprisonments of the great metropolis. For nearly every indigent man or woman in London Miss Phillips has now provided comfortable lodging and none need starve.



MISS EVELYN MARCH-PHILLIPS.

Miss Evelyn March-Phillips is one of those wonderful modern women who seem able to do "many things in many lands and do them very well." She is a fine artist, as those who have visited her yearly exhibition in Bond street have reason to know, particularly charming being her water colors of Roman and Italian scenery. She has written many delightful articles in the magazines, including a really learned paper in the Monthly Review concerning the most famous of Roman villas, and she published, with Mr. Murray, the best of the smaller guides to the Sistine chapel. She divides her life between England and Italy.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Have You a "Pound" In Your House?

Every mother with a flock of little ones to care for knows what a difficult matter it is to get the children to keep their belongings in order, but when once the habit of neatness is inculcated it is of inestimable value to the boy or girl for future life.

An ingenious mother thought out an excellent plan. She made it an unalterable rule that there should be a place for everything and everything kept in its place. Whenever any of the family found anything belonging to another member of it out of place he was at liberty to put it in "the pound." The pound was a room kept locked and presided over by the mother. Every article entering there called for a cent to effect its release.

At first caps, slates, pencils, slippers, came teeming in, and following them the pennies for release, and these formed a fund for purchasing something to promote tidiness, such as waste paper baskets, paper racks and so on. Soon by firmly adhering to the rule of demanding the ransom money the articles coming to the pound decreased in number, and the lesson was thoroughly taught to the children.

Outside the pound door hung a slate, with a pencil attached, and when any article was confiscated the date was noted. A certain time fixed for their detention was a wise forethought, for if the little articles or toys must remain in the pound three or four days or a week their little owners will think more of being deprived of their treasures than even of paying the necessary penny to release them, and the toy comes out again with a certain freshness that makes it doubly attractive.

A Hood For Stove or Range.

Every woman should have a hood to hang over her kitchen stove to carry off smoke and unpleasant odors. A tinner may be instructed to make an inexpensive one after these directions: Make a tin box 24 by 22 inches deep and without top or bottom. Eight inches from the bottom trim the corners and bend them into the shape of a square pyramid. Bend the tin back at the top, leaving an opening eight inches in diameter. Around this hole rivet a four inch tin pipe twelve or fourteen inches long. Rivet a four inch pipe four inches long at right angles into a joint of the stovepipe or into the elbow if the stovepipe enters the chimney in the kitchen. Fit the other end of this pipe with a stopper or cap which can be taken off. In one side of the box make a door four inches high and eight inches wide to serve as a flap to raise while turning pancakes on the stove, and with a small elbow and a piece of tin pipe to connect it with the stovepipe this useful article is complete.—Housekeeper.

The Object of the Home.

"The truest homes," says a woman who possesses a great big fund of common sense, "are often in houses not especially well kept, where the comfort and happiness of the inmates rather than extreme tidiness and the preservation of the furniture are first consulted. The object of the home is to be the center, the pivot on which the family life turns. The first requisite is to make it so attractive that none of its members shall care to linger long outside its limits. All legitimate means should be employed to this end and no effort spared that can contribute to this purpose. There are many houses called homes, kept with such waxy neatness by painstaking, anxious women, that are so oppressive in their nicety as to exclude all home feeling from their spotless precincts. The very name of 'home' is synonymous with personal freedom and relaxation from care—solid comfort. But neither of these can be felt where such a mania for external cleanliness pervades the household as to render everything subservient thereto."

Cooking Thermometers.

The use of cooking thermometers, which until recently was almost entirely confined to hotels and restaurants, is increasing in private kitchens. Most modern housekeepers count them nowadays as necessities, and they are to be found in any house furnishing shop. They register a scale of temperature which somewhat exceeds 400 degrees. In addition they indicate at what temperature different meats should be cooked. Mutton needs the lowest temperature, 300 degrees; beef requires 310 and pork and veal each 320 degrees. Bread and pastry need 400 degrees, but biscuit must have 450. Plain cake bakes well at 320 degrees, while sponge cake needs only 300. The thermometers, which cost from $3 to $5, can be used in boiling water or fat as well as in the oven.—Cooking Club.

To Be Individual.

"Gloves make wrinkles on the face," says Edmund Russell. "The hands, the face and the feet were made for expression, and a soul may be retarded in its development by a tight glove or collar," he asserts. "Fashionable people are never interesting. The young woman in society who wears the latest gown and hat isn't worth knowing. If you want to be individual, dress always in one color, not a blue dress today and a red tomorrow, but always the same color. If you like red, have a red dress this year, and next year a red dress of a different shade. Be known as the little brown woman or the little gray woman."

Cheerful Women.

Men like the cheerful woman. They are not patient when it comes to tears, probably because they know what real worry and care mean, but they are quick to appreciate trials bravely borne. "I never call around the second time," said a young man, "when a girl begins to tell me her troubles." Although it sounds like masculine selfishness, one really can't blame him. What is needed in this world is more sunshine and less whine. — Chicago News.

Dishwashing.

In washing dishes a small clamp for holding the dishcloth will be found preferable to plunging the hand in hot water in the dishpan. See to it that the pot rings have a handle. In fact, buy all your kitchen utensils with a view to keeping your hands in good condition as well as to save unnecessary work. They are your stock in trade, and poor tools produce poor work.

The Clothing Closet.

Don't, if you can possibly avoid it, keep clothing in a closet off a room in which men smoke frequently. The smoke settles in the clothing, imparting the disgusting odor of stale tobacco smoke. If you must use such a closet, ventilate it as much as possible and hang the clothes on the line at every opportunity to give them a thorough air purification.

Aching Eyes.

When the eyes ache close them for five minutes. When they burn bathe them in water as hot as can be borne with a dash of witch hazel in it. After weeping bathe them in rose water and lay a towel wet in rose water over them for five minutes. When they are bloodshot sleep more. When the whites are yellow and the pupils dull look after your diet.

Lamp and Candle Shades.

Most conspicuous among the materials chosen for lamp and candle shades are chiffons and ruchings. Some shades which have a chiffon or mousseline foundation are completely covered with narrow ruching of a contrasting shade. Rose color, red and green are the favorites for foundation schemes.

A Home Nest.

There is nothing more enjoyable or inviting than a spick span, clean house, with cheerful wall paper and furnishings and plenty of light. Such a nest will keep almost any man at home, especially if the home people are sweet tempered and polite.

Factory girls say they prefer their present work to household labor because they have regular hours and have evenings and Sundays to themselves.

A well ordered table, no matter how simple it may be, and good table manners tend to the refining and smoothing of life's otherwise rough way.

WHY IS THE CHURCH LOSING ITS HOLD UPON PEOPLE?

Rev. Mr. Heeney Gave Some Reasons for it in His Sermon Last Night.

Thinks Book of Common Prayer Needs Revising for Canadian Episcopalians.

Rev. Dr. MacTavish at St. Andrew's—Mutes at Holloway St.—Other Services.

Christ Church.

"Why is the church losing its hold upon so many men and women?" was the interesting subject discussed last evening by the Rector, Rev. Mr. Heeney, who took as his text Psalms 26, 8:

"Lord, I have loved the habitation of thy house, and the place where thine honor dwelleth."

There are, the preacher said, hundreds of thousands of men and women in the so-called Christian world of to-day who seldom, if ever, go to a place of divine worship. The church in the past has on the whole shut her eyes to this fact, and was, too, often satisfied with saying that the world was going to the devil. It is much better to acknowledge and face the fact of non-church attendance and endeavor to ascertain its causes. We should scrutinize our personal lives, our preaching, our methods of church warfare. If we do so we will find that many of the causes for this unhappy state of the religious world are to be found lying at our own doors. By the church I mean that "blessed company of all faithful people," though much of what I shall say applies particularly to the Church of England. Why has our church lost her hold on so many who once were her faithful sons and daughters? Our church was a plant of English growth and sufficient attention was not given to adapting it to conditions prevailing in Canada. It was a mistake ever to have tried to make it the Established Church of this country. The majority of the clergy in the past, and to some extent even at present, are Englishmen trained in English colleges and, while there were many notable exceptions, yet there were hosts of cases in which there was little understanding and sympathy between paster and people. And the liturgy, though a priceless treasure handed down from the past; in its present form was in many particulars not suited to this age and country. This was but natural when we remember that it was 350 years old. Another cause which has led to the loss of many members has been the re-introduction of so-called ritualistic practices. I do not doubt the serious intention of many of the clergy who have moved in this direction, nor of the body of laymen who have supported them, but certainly no one can deny that the results have been these: Some of the laity and clergy have opposed the re-introduction of so-called Catholic practices; others among the laity have dropped out of active church life; and multitudes have gone to join various other Protestant bodies. The outlook, however, is encouraging. The church is adapting herself now to the needs of the country, most of the clergy are being trained in Canada; a committee has been appointed to look into the question of a Canadian Book of Common Prayer; there is a better understanding between clergy and laity; the cry "To Rome" which was once heard both within and without the church has been silenced by the fact that the late Pope refused to recognize Anglican orders, when asked to do so by members of the extreme High Church party in England, and although High Church men and Evangelicals are still as far apart as ever in their views upon fundamentals, yet they are united in the great practical work of the church and a spirit of charity and toleration is growing. So much for our church in particular. Among the causes which have led to the practical abandonment of the church in its broadest sense are the following:

1. The unhappy divisions which too often are competing and contending for self-preservation rather than working together for their common good and Master.

2. Lack of the brotherly spirit in the church. In its early days the Church of Christ bore all the marks of a fraternity; not so in later times, and men in consequence have gone out to form fraternal societies more or less detached from the Brotherhood of Jesus Christ.

3. The putting forth of the theory of evolution, which men too hastily concluded did away with the necessity of the Creator, though now it is clearly seen that God is as necessary an explanation of the creation as ever.

4. The greed for gold, leading to the adoption of methods in business which were found to be inconsistent with their Sunday profession. The increase of wealth and consequently of material comfort; satisfaction and pleasure. Also the operating of factories, railways, etc., on the Sabbath.

5. The Christian religion appeals to the highest and best in man and it is notorious that the appetite for the highest and best in life is not generally cultivated in these days, nor is it stimulated by much in our educational systems. The best in literature and art are not generally appreciated.

6. Religion in the home circle is now a rare thing; once it was common. The home in which there is no joining of the family in reading of the Bible and prayer is wielding its mighty influence against Christ and His church.

7. And what of our public schools? Christ has been turned out of doors. Is it any wonder that multitudes do not have the taste for church services. To my mind it is a marvel that the church has held its own at all. We do not want a new church, nor a new Gospel, nor a new Christ to meet the needs of this age or any age. We want the laity of the church to act up to their beliefs and look well to their methods of warfare.

St. Andrew's.

The services in St. Andrew's were conducted by Rev. W. S. MacTavish, B.D., Ph.D., of Deseronto, who is at present Moderator of the session. In the morning the communion was dispensed to a good congregation. In the evening the preacher delivered a practical and stimulating discourse on Matt., 5; 13:

"Ye are the salt of the earth, but if the salt have lost its flavor, wherewith shall it be salted?, It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out and to be trodden under foot of men."

The speaker developed the idea that the world would degenerate unless held in check by some restraining influence. The religion of Christ cordially embraced by the heart and practised in the life was the only effective power in restraining from degeneracy and decay. Nothing could take the place of it. Neither physical development not intellectual culture nor aesthetic training could be regarded as a substitute. Oscar Wilde, Byron, Shelley and Poe were unclean in life and depraved in morals, in spite of their intellectual and aesthetic culture. Christians, then, as the salt of the earth, must seek to preserve society, and if their influence is going to be a potent one, and always on the side of right, they must live on a high plane. They can create a public sentiment in favor of doing right only as their own lives are conspicuously and consistently right. In the evening a solo was excellently rendered by Mr. Pratt, of Montreal.

Mutes at Church.

One of the most interesting and profitable services ever held in any church in the city was that of the quarterly sacramental service in the Holloway St. Church yesterday morning. The feature of surpassing interest was the prominent part taken by the mute pupils of the Institute. About ninety of them were present, gathered from the Methodist homes throughout the province, and several of them, in their expressive mute forms and symbols, bore testimony to the grace that saved them. In the public service that followed four of them received the solemn rite of baptism, Thirteen of them, after a period of probation, according to the discipline of the Methodist Church, were received into full fellowship, and thirty-six partook of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Their teacher, Mr. Stewart, who acted as an interpreter throughout the solemn service, richly deserved the hearty thanks presented to him by the trustees and officials of the church, and the Rev. Mr. Real, pastor of the church, certainly had his reward for his assiduous care and work at the Institute during the term of his ministry in Belleville.

St. Thomas.

In the morning Rev. Mr. Beamish preached from 84th Psalm, 10th verse:

"For one day in thy courts is better than a thousand."

The reverend gentleman gave a very interesting discourse on the observance of Sunday. Among other things, he said he knew many in this parish who continually preferred to read the verse, he took for his text in this way, "One-half day" in thy courts is better than a thousand.

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

Good congregations were present at the above church yesterday. At the evening service the Rector, Rev. Mr. Gilliland, preached an earnest sermon from Phil. 2, 12-13. The Philippians were advised by St. Paul that they must work out their own salvation with fear and trembling, and the same advice was appropriate to Christians to-day. Salvation was not reached by a state of passivity, by waiting for conversion and the blessings of Christianity to come. Christians must work out their salvation, and the way to do it was to try, each in his or her own sphere, to do the work of the Master, help to bring others to Christ and hasten the coming of His kingdom on earth. The better Christian a man was, the harder he would work for that end.

Bridge Street.

"The Sixth Commandment" was the subject discussed last evening by the Pastor, Rev. Dr. Crothers, to a large congregation. The Rev. gentleman gave an able and instructive discourse. During the service Miss M. Vermilyea sang a solo entitled "Rock of Ages," and Mr. D. Cameron sang "Tarry With Me, O My Saviour."

Baptist Church.

At the morning service the rite of baptism was administered to five females and one male, the parties being from Picton. In the evening the Pastor, Rev. O. C. Elliott's, text was from Proverbs, 22nd chapter, 3rd verse:

"A prudent man foreseeth the evil and hideth himself, but the simple pass on and are punished."

John Street.

At this place of worship yesterday the Pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm, preached at both services to good congregations. In the evening his subject was in reference to "Sins." The text was from Isaiah, 1st chapter, 18th verse. During the service Mr. Peter Forin sang a solo entitled "Abide with Me," and Miss Wilson took the solo in the anthem, "How Long Wilt Thou Hear Me?"

Successful Concert.

The University S. S. Mission Band held a most successful concert in Albert College Chapel on Friday evening. The entertainment consisted of songs and recitations, also stereoptican views of Paris and the World's Exposition. It was a most enjoyable evening, as well as an intellectual treat, and the Band is greatly indebted to all those who so kindly assisted them in making the evening a success and profit. Especially are they grateful to Dr. Dyer and Miss Gardiner, the former for kindly lending his stereopticon and use of the chapel, and the latter for her able and interesting description of the views. The stereopticon was managed in a creditable manner by Mr. H. W. Greenleaf.

Marine Notes.

There was considerable activity along the wharf this morning, several vessels having arrived, mostly laden with coal. Those with coal were the schooners New Dominion, D. Freeman and the barges Rob Roy and Read.

The steamer Alexandria called here this morning on her way over from Rochester. She has commenced her weekly trips to Montreal.

A Successful Operation.

Mr. Matthew Shetler, of Shannonville, underwent a very successful operation in Kingston hospital two weeks ago. He had a bad cataract removed from one of his eyes, which was totally blind for ten years, and has now his sight completely restored. Mr. Shetler has the highest praise for the care and attention received while at the hospital.

Meet Me at the Inside Inn.

Never Before Did a Great World's Fair Have a Big Hotel Inside the Grounds.

RATES WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

"Meet me at the Inside Inn." That will be the expression most frequently heard at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. This hotel is an immense structure, 400 feet wide and 800 feet long, with 2,257 sleeping rooms and a dining room seating 2,500 persons. The hotel is inside the Exposition grounds, and operated under the supervision of the Exposition management. It is well appointed and furnished in modern up-to-date style, and will be the center of social affairs in the way of dinners and family reunions inside the grounds.

This hotel is in the southeast portion of the grounds, not far from the Plateau of States, and to the north a short distance are the famous Cascade Gardens, Festival Hall and Connade of States, which form a part of the main picture of the Exposition. Street Railways running by the door go direct to the Union Railway station downtown, and the Intramural Road, inside the grounds, carried guests from the hotel entrance to all points of interest. Here is a cool retreat, where persons can find rest, enjoyment and quietude away from the noise and crush of the crowds along the avenues of the Exposition grounds. Sightseeing at a large Exposition is the most tiresome pleasure, because the mind is busily engaged and finds diversion by constantly changing scenes, while the body is becoming weary and the visitor does not realize how tired he is until he stops to rest. The place to rest is the Inside Inn. The hotel rates cover the daily admission fee to the grounds, and the registered guest at this hotel is free from the annoyance of pushing through the crowds at the gates. There are 500 rooms at $1.50 per person, 500 at $2.00, 500 at $2.50.

The Inside Inn will long be remembered as a distinctive feature of the largest Universal Fair ever held in the world—a fair representing a total cost of $50,000,000 and as large in size as the Columbian, the Pan-American and the Paris fairs combined.

THE PLEA OF R. L. BORDEN

Let the State Own the New Transcontinental Railway.

Policy of the Conservative Party of Canada Is For the Whole Canadian People—A Speech in Montreal That Does the Opposition Leader Credit—Unique Banqueting of Defeated Candidates—Other Speakers.

Montreal, May 2.—"The policy we offer is not one for the manufacturers alone, but a policy for the whole Canadian people, a policy for the artisans and for the farmers as well."

These were the words pronounced Saturday evening by the leader of the Conservative party in the House of Commons.

An Unusual Idea.

The idea of banqueting defeated candidates is an unusual one, but the success which attended the demonstration in honor of the Opposition Federal standard-bearers in St. James, Hochelaga, St. Hyacinthe and Montmagny, as well as the local candidates in Berthier and Maskinonge, was a splendid success and creditable to the Jacques Cartier Club, under whose auspices the demonstration took place.

For State Owned Road.

Mr. Borden's hold upon the French-Canadian electorate is apparent, and the correct and particularly easy manner in which the member for Halifax opened his address in the French tongue was most pleasing to the almost exclusive French gathering. He claimed to appreciate the patriotic aspirations of the French-Canadian people, and to be quite as near the heart of the old Province of Quebec as the Liberal leader, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, a sentiment which evoked the loudest cheers.

But the leader's most important statement was practically an advocacy of state ownership of the new transcontinental railway. Mr. Borden contended that Canada's responsibility in the matter of the Grand Trunk Pacific would amount to $150,000,000 while that of the company's would be $15,000,000, consequently, the leader asked if it would not be more business-like for the country to assume the entire cost and own the road in the end. This, he declared, was a feature which he would press firmly upon the attention of Parliament before the debate closed.

Haultain Well Received.

Hon. Mr. Haultain of the Northwest Territories, also got a fine reception. The Premier made his best point when he referred to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's awakening to find Canada a nation. He reminded his hearers that this great Dominion had not been dreamed into existence by the Liberals, but by the hard work of Sir John Macdonald, Sir George E. Cartier and their Conservative successors.

Addresses were also delivered by F. D. Monk, M.P.; Thos. Chase Casgrain, M.P.; J. H. Bergeron, ex-M.P.; Mr. Tache, the party candidate in St. Hyacinthe; Dr. Bernard of Hachelaga; Mr. Rosseau of Montmagny; Hon. Messrs. Taillon, Leblanc and others.

MAY DAY, 1904.

Toronto Has Established a Record In That It Has No Strikes to Accord—Labor Trouble Elsewhere.

Toronto, May 2.—A precedent has been established in Toronto. There are no strikes to record today. The only one that threatened is still hanging fire, and doubts are still held as to the course to be taken. This uncertain union is the brewery workers.

Breadless Boston.

Boston, May 2.—A strike of more than 1,400 bakers in this city, Cambridge and Chelsea, went into effect at 6 o'clock last night. Every bakery in the three cities is affected, with the exception of the Hebrew bakeries. The men quit work at 6 o'clock and the night shifts failed to appear. The daily output of bread in Boston is from 300,000 to 350,000 loaves, and this supply will be practically cut off.

100 Bakers Out.

Rochester, N. Y., May 1.—Members of Bakers' Union No. 14 struck yesterday over a disagreement with their employers as to the hours of work. About 100 men went out.

3,000 Miners Go Out.

Canton, Ohio, May 2.—Miners of the Tuscarawas districts, about 3,000 in number, quit work Saturday night until an agreement is reached on the scale. The trouble is over the machine rate.

Anarchists Cause Trouble.

Barcelona, May 2.—May Day was signalized here by a general stoppage of work, most of the business places being closed. The workmen held many meetings for the purpose of discussing labor questions, at several of which disturbances were caused by Anarchists.

Violent Speeches on May Day.

Madrid, May 2.—Ten thousand Socialists celebrated May Day with a demonstration, at which violent speeches were delivered. Afterwards a crowd numbering 20,000 persons marched with banners to the residence of Premier Maura and to the Town Hall, where they demanded an eight-hour day and protection for workmen.

Another Negro Lynched.

Birmingham, Ala., May 2.—A despatch from Prattsville, Ark., says: News reached this city yesterday that Gaines Hall, the negro, who, it is alleged, assaulted Mrs. Josiah Owens, Saturday morning, was caught at Kingston by a posse who took him to the scene of the crime and tied him to a tree. His body was then riddled with bullets.

MULTIPLY AS THE BUDS

DR. TALMAGE'S WELCOME TO METHODIST GENERAL CONFERENCE.

SECRET OF ITS INFLUENCE

Rise and Growth of the Methodist Church in the Religious World—Just and Generous Tribute From a Preacher Who Is Not of That Especial Fold of Christ's Kingdom—Wesley Everywhere Respected.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 1.—On the occasion of the assembling of the Methodist General Conference of 1904 the preacher welcomes the delegates and points out the rise and growth of Methodism and the secret of its far reaching influence upon the religious world to-day. The text is Ezekiel xvi, 7, "I have caused thee to multiply as the bud of the field."

Lord Macaulay, in one of his essays, declares that John Wesley had a greater natural genius for Government than had Richelieu. The great historian believed that in these words he was giving the eminent divine the highest praise. The whole Christian world is in accord in that estimate, and as it recognizes the achievements of the church which John Wesley founded it thanks and praises God for that beneficent life.

The name of John Wesley is everywhere respected by the good and the true. Therefore is it to be wondered at that our people, no matter to what Protestant church they belonged, hailed with joyful acclaim the news that the Methodist General Conference of 1904 was to assemble in the City of the Angels? This conference opens its session during the coming week. We, as a people, look forward to its sessions with interest and hope. We believe that by close touch this conference will bless all Protestant churches, no matter to what denomination they belong. It is appropriate on this Sabbath day to bid the incoming delegates welcome. It is also appropriate to state some of the reasons why the little band of followers with which John Wesley surrounded himself has grown in numbers until to-day it out-numbers in membership every other individual Protestant church in America and in the world.

First, her genesis. In order to study the marvelous multiplying power of Methodism let us analyze the conditions attendant upon her birth. We must find upon what troublous waters her cradle was rocked and search out the place of her infancy, even as the Egyptian princess found the future emancipator of the Hebrew race sleeping in a willow basket among the bulrushes of the River Nile. Every great movement in history has been the product of the condition of the time of its birth. God in his providence has ordained that the prevalence of unrighteousness in a nation shall so stir the souls of his people that they will gather in his name around the standard of some leader whom he raises up to witness for him.

What were the conditions of the nation at the time of the birth of the Methodist church? Did she come into the world as a protest to the sins of a corrupt English court? Oh, yes. In no time of English history have bribery and debauchery run more riot than during Robert Walpole's occupancy of the English premiership. He was the author of the famous and hateful sentence in reference to the House of Commons, "All these men have their price." What Robert Walpole in statecraft could not win by fair means he won by foul. But Methodism came into the world to do a greater work than merely to protest against Governmental depravity. It came, as Josiah Strong has said, as a protest against an Established church, which believed at that time more in outward ceremonies than in spiritual truths. "Isaac Taylor," so records the author of "The Next Great Awakening," "calls the church of this period 'a fair carcass,'" and Blackstone says that he went to hear every preacher of note in London and that there was not one whose discourse indicated whether he was a follower of Confucius or Mohammed or of Christ. The Established church of that time believed in carrying the phylacteries upon the forehead, but not in practicing Christ's spiritual lessons in the life. It was so given over to formalism and rites and ceremonies that it had no warning to give even to men in its pulpits who, like the Pharisees of old, were whited sepulchers, fair to the eye, but within harboring decaying corpses and whose private lives were a repulsive stench. "It is the inward witness, son, the inward witness," spake the dying father, Samuel Wesley, to his son John—"this is the strongest proof of Christianity." So John Wesley and his followers resolutely set their faces against the prevalent sins of that day. They vehemently declared that the Christian church should not only have a pure creed, but that its members should be men of pure private lives. In the high spiritual standard set before the individual church members we find the chief cause of the marvelous development of the Methodist church.

My brother, it is of vital importance that all Protestant churches realize that they are making a fatal error when they in any way compromise their high spiritual standards by alliance with sin. The higher the standard of the Christian church the greater will be its success. We do not need to-day churches that honor winebibbing ministers. We do not need churches which, when they have a church sociable, tell their young people they may dance and play cards. We do not desire churches whose members in their every day actions are nowise different from the people of the world. One of the reasons why the Christian Endeavor Society, of which Francis E. Clark is the president, is numbering its members by the hundreds of thousands and the millions is because of its ironclad pledge. John Willis Baer, who for so many years was secretary of that young people's Christian organization, was right when in my presence some years ago he declared, "The high standard of the character of the Endeavorers is due to the high standard of the society's pledge."

This fact alone does not tell all the story of its marvelous multiplying power. There are many other reasons for the growth of Methodism. One of the chief of these is the fact that John Wesley was the emancipator of the laymen, as Martin Luther was the emancipator of the Bible. The English ecclesiastic opened the dumb lips of the pew. The German reformer broke the iron clasps holding together the lids of the word of God, which barred to all but ordained priests access to the life giving message that God sent for the deliverance of all his sinful children. John Wesley said to the blacksmith at the forge and the cobbler on his bench and the wife in her kitchen: "Go forth and be my evangelists. You may not be graduates of theological seminaries, but you can testify of Christ's love. Martin Luther said: "There, laymen, is the open Bible. Read it. Ponder it. Study it. Read it with your own eyes and kiss it with your own lips." Do you wonder that when John Wesley built the Methodist church upon an open Bible and then in public meeting set all his people testifying of God's word and love he became one of the greatest gospel reformers of the ages?

John Wesley because he sent forth the common people preaching and praying everywhere was in derision called a "Methodist." He was sneered at because in his day custom dictated that no man should pray in public unless he read his prayer out of a printed prayer book or speak for Christ unless he was entitled to wear a cassock and bands of an ordained priest. But John Wesley removed these restrictions for the Methodists and sent the laymen forth preaching and praying, as in the latter years Archibald Tait, archbishop of Canterbury, enlisted the services of unordained workers in various branches of church activity and earned for himself the title given him in scorn by a jealous clergy of "the archbishop of the laity." There, upon his monument in old Canterbury, is chiseled in the most beautiful of epitaphs, "The one desire of his life was to make the Church of England the church of the people." Oh, my friends, let us hold fast this liberty of service. The work of propagating the gospel is not committed exclusively to any one class or profession. The laborers sent forth by Wesley in the eighteenth century, like the laymen enlisted by Archbishop Tait in the nineteenth, had a work to do, and right earnestly and successfully they did it. Let us never allow the pew to again be shackled and its lips sealed with the silence of death. What we need more and more in the beginning of this twentieth century is not a better educated ministry, but one which will start forth a speaking and a testifying pew.

Another great cause for the multiplying power of Methodism is the "class system." This "class system," so-called, dates its historic birth to the 15th day of February, 1742. Like the life of the Wandering Jew, may it never have a death! May this system live on and on until at last earthly time shall cease and the struggles against sin shall be swallowed up in the eternal conquests of heaven!

This was how the famous "class system" of Methodism was born; John Wesley and his brother Charles were visiting their society in the city of Bristol. A large financial indebtedness hung as an incubus over that society's place of worship. While the members of that society were discussing with the leaders how they should lift the debt a Captain Foy arose and proposed that each member should be taxed one penny a week until the debt was paid. "But that is not fair," some one protestingly said. "Here are some people who are so poor they cannot afford to give even a penny." "Then," said Captain Foy, "put eleven of the poorest with me, and if they can give anything I will call upon them weekly and collect the same, and if they give nothing I will give for them as well as for myself, and each of you can call on eleven of your neighbors weekly, receive what they give and make up what is wanting." No sooner had Captain Foy spoken than in a flash a divine inspiration came to John Wesley. "Yes, yes," said the great leader to himself; "that is just what Methodism needs—a system of caring for its own, a system by which its members shall not be herded together as wild animals are herded together, but a system which will single men out and place them in circles of tens, and over these circles shall be placed a separate leader who will have charge of each class. These leaders in turn were to meet and report to their pastors. Their pastors in turn to-day meet and report to their presiding elders. Each man by the "class system" of Methodism is responsible to some individual person of the church.

We see the value of individual responsibility in the temporal world. Why should we not see the same results from the "class system" of Methodism? Your boy is about sixteen years of age. Where are you going to send the lad to college? "Well," you say, "I would like in many ways to send him to one of our great universities, but the trouble is I am afraid. There the boy will only be lost among a crowd of hundreds of other students, and no one will be individually responsible for the lad. I think I shall send him to one of our smaller colleges, where he will come in close contact with his teachers, and these teachers will be able to keep their eye upon him." You send your boy to a small college to secure the individual touch of a professor upon the boy.

Now, the "class system" of Methodism has a double purpose—first, it makes the Methodist convert a member of a great gospel university in which there are hundreds of thousands and millions of members and it gives to that convert the enthusiasm which truly comes from great numbers, and, secondly, it separates the Methodist convert from the masses. It places him in a gospel family for which some one is responsible. It gives to him a separate gospel garden in which to labor. It says: "Old convert, you look after that young man and that young woman. Visit them in their homes. See that they have the right kind of companionship. When they are absent from the house of God learn why they are absent and tell them that they are missed." Individual responsibilities for individuals—that is the great multiplying slogan of the Methodist "class system." For whom, O Christian man, are you responsible in Christ's name?

The Methodist Church, in the next place, is a singing church, whose songs are nearly always keyed to the tune of hope and joy and the glorious harmonies of a blessed hereafter. It is a church whose music is filled with halleluiah choruses and battle hymns and inspiring marching melodies. It is a church which believes that our thanks and gratitude for blessings received can be returned to God as well when standing upon our feet and, in the words of the psalmist, "singing unto the Lord," as when on bended knee we offer them in silent prayer in the closet. The trouble with many of our churches is they always imagine Christ as keeping step to the slow time of a dirge, but they cannot imagine his moving lips as joining in a wedding march or in the joys of a social gathering.

Daniel Webster once said: "The proof to me that the church was established by God is found in the fact that it has existed in spite of the begowned ministers who have been caged up to preach their sermons behind their repellant pulpits. Any lawyer would be ruined if he were compelled to plead for his client behind a wooden box, as the minister by custom is compelled to plead for his Christ." Whether that statement is true or not, I am not here to discuss, but one of the great facts that convince me that the church is a divine institution is that it has existed for hundreds of years in spite of the sepulchral and awful hymns with which the choirs used to lead in the song worship. These hymns, for the most part, were all gloom, all darkness, all breathing fire and brimstone and death. When one sang them he could almost feel the hot, hissing flames of eternal punishment scorching his lips. No such singing as the ancient churches indulged in could do aught but terrorize and make the worshipers tremble with fear. Do you wonder that the churches of old, which sang for the most part the songs of death, should have worshipers who gave only half-hearted voices to their singing? But while the Methodist Church has its songs in the minor key, for the most part the Methodist songs are songs of life and joy and hope. Go if you will with me to any of the great Methodist camp meeting resorts of this country and you will know of what I speak. The mightiest shout ever raised by conquering host upon battlefield was never more triumphant than are the camp meeting songs of Desplaines or Ocean Grove. When the Methodists sing "We are marching to Zion" they sing it in such a way that it seems to fling wide open the gates of the heavenly city.

Lastly, Methodism has had its marvelous and miraculous multiplying power because it has had an infinite field in which to labor. It has worked for the most part among the common people. Certain churches in the world have been known as churches of a class. Some churches have been known as churches which appealed to the greatest amount of brains in almost every Christian community. Other churches have been known as the churches of the aristocracy. But though John Wesley had as much brain as any man of his generation, and though by political preferment he could have reached a position of influence in aristocratic society, yet he chose to cast his lot among the common people. He did not believe there was one gospel for the rich and another for the poor—one for the brainy men and another for him of small mental calibre. John Wesley believed all classes should meet as one at the throne of grace. Therefore, as the common people crowded around him to receive his message, many of the rich and the affluent stayed away. He was truly the missionary to the middle and lower classes. Are we in church work ready to reach out in Christ's name for the conversion of the same kind of people?

It was said of our Lord that "the common people heard him gladly." Ah, that is the best encomium that can be placed upon the tomb of the founder of Methodism! When Peter Cartwright, many years ago, arose to preach in Tennessee some one whispered to him, "General Jackson is in your audience." With that Peter Cartwright turned and said: "I hear that General Jackson is in this audience. But I want to say to General Jackson that I have no gospel for him any different from that which I offer to every man." Then, in a voice of thunder, Cartwright cried: "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish! General Jackson, that message is for you. Poor man, that message is for you." So, to-day, John Wesley in his old pulpit, like Peter Cartwright in vision, is stretching out his arms over the whole sinful world crying: "Repent! Repent! Repent!" And at the same time he is calling: "Come to the mercy seat! Come! Come!"

God bless John Wesley's memory! God bless all Methodists and Methodism! Delegates to the general conference of 1904, in Christ's name we bid you welcome. Aye, we open our hearts and greet you with 10,000 Christian salutations. May you always love us in the spirit with which we greet you on this Sabbath day.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedelia."

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more pone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A Sure Cure for Headaches.—Billous headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

JAPANESE VICTORY WAS SIGNAL AND SIGNIFICANT.

Drove Russians Out of Trenches and Still Advance Fighting.

Heavy Fighting Near Chiutiencheng in Which the Little Fellows Meet Stubborn Resistence—Russians Fear Their Casualties May Number 2,000—Czar's Troops Fell Back in Confusion.

Chicago, May 3.—A Daily News special from Kobe, Japan, says. "Details of the heavy fighting in the neighborhood of Chiutiencheng, received here yesterday morning, say that the Russians made a most stubborn resistance to the Japanese advance, but were driven successfully out of seven lines of trenches."

Victory Signal and Significant.

This undoubtedly refers to subsequent engagements following the routing of the Russians on Sunday. The Japanese are pressing their retreating foes and are prepared to make the most of the discomfiture brought upon the Czar's troops by the victory following six days of hard fighting on the north bank of the Yalu River. The fact that the victory has been followed up by another reverse for the Russians proves the fact that the victory of Sunday was signal and significant.

Russians May Have Lost 2,000.

St. Petersburg, May 3.—The interest of the public in the news of the fighting on the Yalu is at fever heat, especially since the last official report, which announced the fighting at Chingow, was given out. To the general disappointment, no further telegrams from Gen. Kuropatkin have been published by the War Commission, nor will the censor pass pres despatches wired from the front.

The absence of news led to the circulation of rumors. For instance, it was reported that Gen. Sassulitch would be relieved of his command and court-martialed for making a too strenuous stand on the right bank of the Yalu. As a matter of fact, while the war office is surprised at the resistance made by Gen. Sassulitch, a telegram from Gen. Kuropatkin to the Emperor on April 26 announced that Sassulitch, in view of the preparations which the Japanese were making to cross the Yalu, had begun to reinforce his troops on the Manchurian bank.

Another report says that the War Office has been informed that the Russian casualties numbered 2,000. Should this be true, it can be accepted as a certainty that the Russian plan of operations never contemplated such a sacrifice.

Will Follow It Up.

London, Jan. 3.—The latest despatches received here confirming the completeness of the Japanese victory on the Yalu could hardly have given greater satisfaction in Tokio than they have in London. The editorials in the morning papers ring with admiration at the success of General Kuroki's strategy in a manner indicating that Great Britain had been in considerable doubt of the capacity of her ally's troops when matched against the Russians; and, despite the fact of Japan having no good cavalry to follow up her victory, it is believed that she will speedily drive the Russians out of Fenghuancheng also.

Both Banks of the Yalu.

London, May 3.—Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister here, said to the Associated Press:

"The immediate result of Gen. Kuroki's success will probably be a movement on Fenghanchang.

"I take it from the despatches received that we have now practically secured control of both banks of the Yalu. In consequence, our base will probably be moved to Antung.

"To be perfectly frank, I must say I expected Sunday's engagement would be more decisive, especially in view of the large number of Russian troops opposed to us. Its significance must largely depend upon our ability to pursue the enemy."

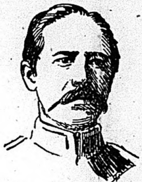
Fight at Gensan.

London, May 3.—An unconfirmed report of severe fighting between 3,000 Russians and a similar number of Japanese at Gensan is sent by The Standard's St. Petersburg correspondent, who says the Japanese were compelled to retire from Gensan, both sides losing heavily. Two Russian officers are said to have been among the wounded.

How Antung Was Burned.

London, May 3.—The Japanese legation gave out yesterday an official despatch from the Admiralty at Tokio, as follows:

"The captain of the gunboat Maya reports that a flotilla consisting of the gunboats Maya and Uji and some torpedo boats ascended the Yalu May 1, bombarding the enemy. While they were returning the enemy's artillery suddenly attacked the torpedo boats. The latter silenced the enemy after a severe engagement lasting 30 minutes and the flotilla all returned to Yongampo. There were no casualties. Our armed launches reached Antung the same morning and repulsed the enemy's infantry and artillery after 30 minutes of sharp fighting. Fire was seen rising from the town, and a native says that the enemy fled from Antung after setting fire to it."



GEN. BARON KUROKI,
The Japanese Army Commander in the Yalu River Country.

Russians Fell Back in Confusion.

London, May 3.—A despatch to The Central News from Seoul says that after the Japanese charge, which resulted in the occupation of the Russian lines at Chiutiencheng, the Russians fell back in confusion. The Japanese have now secured a firm hold on the Manchurian side of the Yalu.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

Johnston George, Alleged Murderer of Mrs. Williams, Sent Down.

Windsor, May 3.—A green tin box figured prominently in the examination of Johnston George, the alleged murderer of Mrs. Williams, before Magistrate Bartlett yesterday and a sensation was promised. The box was said to have contained several important documents, including the deceased's bank book and a will of her father's.

Patrolman Giles stated that when the box came into his possession the bank book, deeds and all were missing, and the box had been forced open. It was later brought out that the documents were in the hands of Mrs. Gray, a daughter of Mrs. Williams.

Giles declared that when he and another officer got to the house of the murdered woman soon after the report of the finding of her body was made, they found this box, and that it was closed and had a lock on it.

The next witness was Mrs. Lucy Willis, grand-daughter of Mrs. Williams. She said she and Mrs. Gray had broken open the box and taken possession of the papers. She said they searched for them, hoping to find a motive for the murder. At the conclusion of the hearing, the prisoner was committed by Magistrate Bartlett for trial at the fall assizes.

Attacked For Ignorance.

London, May 3.—(C.A.P.)—The Glasgow Herald attacks the House of Lords and Lord Marlborough and Muskerry particularly for their ignorance in the matter of the Scotia salvage case. If instead of the Government departments the Anchor Line had been consulted, it would have been found that the Canadian Government would have made handsome reparation months ago. It is unfair to the Canadian Government that it should be allowed to lie under the imputation of dishonesty.

Progress Sustained.

Portage la Prairie, May 3.—By-laws favoring the construction of waterworks and sewerage systems and a new collegiate institute, and to raise $220,000 therefor, were carried at Portage la Prairie yesterday by good majorities.

How many have to say "My pimply face is the bane of my life"—How few would have it to say if they gave Dr. Agnew's Ointment the testing that Mr. Lilly did.

"I have found Dr. Agnew's Ointment the best remedy for pimples and sore faces that I have ever used. I had three trying cases under my care and have cured them with this greatest of skin remedies. CANADIANS NOT WANTED.

It is surely a matter for surprise and regret that, although this country is about to assume enormous liabilities in connection with the building of a transcontinental railway, Canadians are receiving scant consideration at the hands of the railway company which is to benefit so much from the new road. The Grand Trunk has a number of surveyors working along the proposed line, but, sad to relate, they are all Americans. Canadians are shut out from earning any of the money which this country must eventually pay. The injustice of the situation has been brought to the attention of the Government on more than one occasion, but those in power refuse point blank to interfere in any way in behalf of the many capable young Canadians, who, at considerable expense and by hard work, have taken courses in engineering. Why should they be ignored for foreigners who come from a country which refuses absolutely to allow Canadians to accept positions from this side of the border? Where is the much vaunted Labor Bureau? In the United States the thing would not be tolerated for a moment. The facts of the case seem to be that the Government is helpless in the matter because the Grand Trunk must be allowed as much latitude as it sees fit to take. And the railway is to be called the "National Transcontinental!" If it is "National" the Government should at once put an end to the disgraceful treatment of our young men.

TIMELY TOPICS.

If anybody in Belleville can oblige us with about six or seven of those funny little medals used by that eminent body, the Dairymen's Association, when they met in this city we'll be theirs forever. What do we want them for? Well, we want to pin on the manly breasts of some of our City Fathers who last night gave an exhibition of vacillation and child's play which was absolutely unique. It was in connection with certain lots owned by the city, and, in order to give our readers a fair insight into the matter it may be necessary to recount a little ancient history.

It seems that, last year, some 58 lots, belonging to the Roberts estate, were seized for taxes by the city. The lots were advertised for sale and there were no bidders. Then the matter of selling these lots, and all others owned by the city, was placed in the hands of a special committee composed of Mayor Chown, Ald. Panter and the City Treasurer. Fourteen of the lots were sold to Mr. Joseph Caldwell for $150. The question of the sale of the remaining 44, it seems, resolved itself into a contest between Mr. Caldwell and Mr. J. P. C. Phillips, who is agent for the heirs of the Roberts estate.

Judging by what was stated in Council last night. Mr. Caldwell offered $125 for the lots; Mr. Phillips raised to $150; Mr. Caldwell then offered $200, and Mr. Phillips "came back," as the poker sharps say, with $210. Mr Caldwell then made another and higher offer, but Ald. Panter, chairman of the committee, suddenly decided that he would not be a party to any "peddling" of the lots, and refused to make Mr. Caldwell's last bid known. Mr. Phillips then, it is said, declined to make another bid, but stated his intention of giving more than anybody else for the lots. This fact Ald. Panter acknowledged in Council last night. Well, to make a long story short, as Mr. Phillips declined to bid any more till he was told what Mr. Caldwell's bid was, two of the committee, Ald. Panter and the City Treasurer, decided to accept Mr. Caldwell's bid, which was $235 for 41 of the lots. Mr. Caldwell gave his cheque for the amount and received the Treasurer's receipt for the same.

Then the Council holds a special meeting to deal with the matter, and, it being pointed out by the Mayor that Mr. Phillips was willing to give more for the lots than Mr. Caldwell, decided to annul the sale to that gentleman and notify Messrs. Phillips and Caldwell that the Council would receive sealed offers from both of them for the lots in question. This action was taken after the City Solicitor had given his opinion that the sale to Mr. Caldwell was not binding.

Last night the sealed offers from the rival bidders were received. Mr. Caldwell offered $265 for the 44 lots, and Mr. Phillips $326.50, his cheque for that amount accompanying the offer. Then what do you think the Council did. Calmly ignored their action at the special meeting, deliberately threw away $91.50 and decided to sell the 41 lots to Mr. Caldwell for $235, in spite of the fact that the Mayor rose in his place, shook the cheque for $326.50 at them and told them distinctly that, if they refused Mr. Phillips' offer, made at their own solicitation, they would have a lawsuit on their hands.

Now, it may very pertinently be asked, what right has any Alderman or city official to take on himself to force a sale of city property at a lower price than he knew could be obtained for it? What right has he to let his personal opinions enter into the matter at all? He was the agent for the sale of these lots, and it was his duty to obtain the most for them possible. The city is not so rich that its officials or Aldermen can afford to grow sentimental because two well-to-do men are bidding against each other. They both wanted the lots, or they would not have bid for them. Why in the name of common sense did the Council, after setting a fixed time for the making of final offers, receive those offers and then proceed to ignore them? We pause for a reply, but in the meantime will somebody please hand out those medals? No, no. Leather ones won't do.

It appears that the by-law appointing the special committee re sale of lots gives the City Treasurer power to accept the full amount of taxes owed and issue the necessary papers without further conference with the other members of the committee, but no sale of any lot or lots, for a less amount, is legal unless the agreement is signed by the three members of the committee. In the case of the sale to Mr. Caldwell, Mayor Chown refused to sign the agreement, saying that he "would not be a party to any such proceeding."

It may be pointed out that the property in question has been in possession of the Roberts heirs and their forbears for over a century, during which time they have paid many times the value of the lots to the city. Two of the present heirs are minors. Mr. Phillips, we are informed, does not intend to surrender without a struggle. The city, through the peculiar action of its representatives, is now to be treated to a lawsuit, and Mr. Phillips has retained Mr. S. H. Blake, K.C., to act in his behalf. Pleasant, isn't it? A nice, juicy, expensive lawsuit is just what we need in our business!

Mr. Phillips complains, we are told, that he has been grossly misrepresented in this matter. The City Treasurer, it is alleged, took the trouble to write the Grit paper stating that he (Mr. Phillips) bought the lots in dispute, last time they were sold, for $100. The fact is that Mr. Phillips says he paid $390 for them, and entries in the City Treasurer's books show that to be the case. It may be asked, what right has any city official to misrepresent a citizen of Belleville, or by his influence and action cause the city to lose money?

Ald. Sinclair and one of his henchmen have been off on a jaunt in the city's interests. Strange! We didn't see anything in the despatches about travellers blowing out the gas.

SPORTING NOTES.

There is a letter at this office for the Secretary of the Belleville Lacrosse Club.

The Secretary of the Trent Valley Lacrosse League is anxious to find out what is being done in regard to lacrosse in this city. Can anybody tell him.

News comes from Memphis that Lou Dillon is in prime shape, and the probabilities that records will tumble again this year are strong. A peculiar thing about the great trotter is that she shows as much antipathy towards travelling in front of a sulky as a youngster just being broken to harness. If the plans now under consideration are carried out, the champion trotter will go after all existing records this season. Her most important work will be an effort to reduce Cresceus' record of 2.02 1-4 without the aid of wind shields or other artificial speed producers.

The famous racehorse and sire of racehorses, Director, 2.17, died last week at Locust Grove Stock Farm, Newcastle, Pa., where he had been owned for the last four or five years. Director was 27 years old, and ever since his first appearance on the turf as a three-year-old he was prominently before the public. Either as a racehorse or as a sire. He was sired by Dictator, the brother to Dexter, 2.17 1-4, out of the famous Dolly, also dam of the great sire Onward, by the Mambrino Chief.

Sunshine Furnace

Water-pan

Dry air is light — it lifts and carries dust. Dry air cracks your furniture, gives you a headache, shrivels your skin, parches your lungs.

The water-pan in most furnaces is a pleasantry. It has no serious business in the work of the furnace—it is merely placed there for effect, because a water-pan is a good thing.

And a water-pan is an absolute necessity to your health and comfort, but it must be properly placed to radiate moisture evenly and uniformly throughout the house.

The water-pan of the Sunshine Furnace is the most scientifically arranged water-pan in any furnace in the world.

It does the work a water-pan should, and does it well.

Mommsen's "Roman History."

Some one has well said that but for the "Roman History" Mommsen would be a great man "taken on faith." That is probably true, but we have the "Roman History," perhaps the most remarkable piece of German literature written in the middle of the nineteenth century. It is a wonderful testimony to the power of humanity over humanity that the most human work which Mommsen wrote should be the most popular. The "Roman History" was the expression of the whole man, and if ever it should cease to have value as Roman history it will never cease to be of value as a spiritual document, as a picture of the hopes and ideals of Theodor Mommsen. By a happy chance when the book was brought into the world it appeared in the naked simplicity of its narrative without the swaddling clothes of footnotes and sources. The clear cut style showed forth to its best advantage. The world at large took its statements as faith. Scholars were at liberty to test them in other books of Mommsen himself or of other men.—Professor Jesse B. Carter in Atlantic.

The Sanitation of Ant Cities.

Insects are scrupulously clean in their personal toilet and often brush, comb and wash themselves, a service for which they are admirably provided with natural implements. This habit is transferred to communal affairs. The streets within the city bounds and the gates and external plaza and "country roads" leading into the foraging fields, as with agricultural ants, are kept free from filth and obstructions that might gather filth. The constant washings and combings of baby ants by the nurses would satisfy the most fastidious maternal taste. One may not say that sanitation is an exact emmetonian science, but it certainly is an art thoroughly practiced in every department of the formicary and brought to perfection as far as natural conditions will permit. Every insect citizen takes part in this service. All ants unite to keep their civic precincts clean.—H. C. McCook in Harper's Magazine.

A Beautiful Art.

Without disparagement of any of the other arts, to attain proficiency in which people make such long and valiant struggles, it may be truly said that the one art of smiling warms more hearts than all others together. Most children—in fact, all happy children—have an unconscious mastery of this beautiful art, but unfortunately they often lose it as they grow older. Children are the best judges of smiles in the world. "Her lips smile," said a child, speaking of a hard faced woman, "but she doesn't." A widening of the mouth in a vain endeavor to look pleasant is not a smile. It deceives nobody. A smile, to be worthy of the name, must come from the heart. It is the result of an honest willingness and readiness to be pleased with little as well as great things.

Antwerp Milk Woman.

There is no more picturesque figure in quaint old Antwerp than the milk women. For many years the milk of the city has been served to the houses by these women, whose customs and even costumes have remained unchanged. The milk women wear a simple dress, almost completely covered with a voluminous white apron. A quaint white headdress completes the uniform. Scores of these picturesque figures are to be seen throughout Antwerp in the morning hours. The milk is either carried in two large buckets, hung from a yoke running across the shoulders, or in little carts drawn by dogs.

The most lofty lakes are found among the Himalaya mountains in Tibet. Their altitudes do not, however, seem to have been very accurately gauged, for different authorities give widely different figures regarding them. According to some, Lake Manasarowar, one of the sacred lakes of Tibet, is between 19,000 and 20,000 feet above the level of the sea, and if this is so it is undoubtedly the loftiest in the world.

Two other Tibetan lakes, those of Chatamoo and Surakol, are said to be 17,000 and 15,400 feet in altitude respectively. For a long time it was supposed that Lake Titicaca, in South America, was the loftiest in the world. It covers about 4,500 square miles, is 924 feet in its greatest depth and is 12,000 feet above the sea. In spite of inexactitude with regard to the measurements of the elevation of the Tibetan lakes they are no doubt considerably higher than this or any other.

The Oldest Herbarium.

The oldest herbarium in the world is in the Egyptologist museum at Cairo, and consists of an inconspicuous collection of dried portions of plants. These portions of plants and flowers were taken from wreaths and garlands in the coffins with mummies, where they were placed by the ancient Egyptians as death offerings, and from edible plants which were set in earthen vessels on the floor of the sepulcher as the furniture of the last resting place of their beloved ones.

Many of these floral remains are so well preserved that, after being treated with warm water, they can be handled like modern herbarium specimens. The colors, too, are preserved in a remarkable way. The most important matter in connection with these plants is their age. The remains of funeral food are found in tombs as far back as 3,000 years before Christ.

The Spartan Japanese Father.

The Spartan character of the Japanese father may be gathered from two facts mentioned by Consul Daigoro Goh in the admirable address on family relations in Japan which he delivered before the Japan society. The Japanese child calls its father "Gempu" and its mother "Jibo"—which mean "strict father" and "benevolent mother"—and Mr. Goh quoted a Japanese boy who classified the Japanese father as one of the "four fearful things of the world—earthquake, thunder, conflagration and father."—London Truth.

Macaronic Verse.

Macaronic verse is verse written in more than one language or one language twisted to appear like another. For example, a long poem on wine, dating from early in the sixteenth century, begins:

> The best tree, if ye take intent,
> Inter ligna fructifera,
> Is the vine tree by good argument,
> Dulcia ferens pondera.

Another example of the second kind mentioned is Dean Swift's imitation Latin poem beginning "Mollis abuti, hasan acuti," which in English reads, "Molly's a beauty, has an acute eye."

A British Treasure.

In the jewel house of the Tower of London, the place where the crown and other royal insignia are kept, there is a book bound throughout in gold, even to the wires of the hinges. Its clasp is two rubies set at opposite ends of four golden links. On one side there is a cross of diamonds; on the other the English coat of arms set in diamonds, pearls and rubies.

Aptly Described.

"I have been courting her for two years," said the disconsolate one, "and I am certain that she will refuse me when I propose."

"Ah, that is interesting," said the amateur photographer, "a sort of undeveloped negative."

He Dropped In.

"You don't object to a contributor dropping into poetry once in awhile, I presume?" said the visitor, with an affable smile.

"Certainly not, sir. Sit down," replied the editor, pushing the waste paper basket toward him.

His Resolve.

She—I am going to give you back our engagement ring. I can never marry you; I love another. He—Give me his name and address. She—Do you want to kill him? He—No; I want to try to sell him the ring.

Welland Canal Open.

Port Dalhousie, May 3.—The Welland Canal opened up for traffic at 3.30 yesterday morning, the Canadian steamer Seguin was the first boat to pass up.

Port Colborne, May 3.—Navigation through the Welland Canal opened here yesterday morning. The schooner John Magee, which entered here, passed down; also the canal tugs to Port Dalhousie to bring up tows.

Killed in Collision.

Barrie, May 3.—A fatal railway accident occurred at 3 o'clock yesterday morning at South River by which Fireman John Reynolds of Allandale lost his life. A freight in charge of Conductor Frank Heard was standing on the main line when another freight train run into its rear end, killing the fireman, badly scalding Engineer George Dodson, and injuring Brakeman William Woodruff. Reynolds was an unmarried man, about 25 years.

The King and Ireland.

Waterford, Ireland, May 3.—King Edward and Queen Alexandra arrived yesterday and lunched with the Mayor and Corporation at the City Hall. The King, replying to addresses, emphasized his gratification at the signs of industrial revival in Ireland. Their Majesties subsequently proceeded to Lismore Castle to visit the Duke the Duchess of Devonshire.

Seven Bells.

Everybody who knows anything about nautical matters understands the method of keeping time at sea—eight bells every four hours, an additional bell being struck for each half hour.

From 6 to 8 in the evening is the second dog watch, but on British ships seven bells (half past 7) of the second dog watch are never struck. All other ships, even the American, strike these bells.

During the Napoleonic wars there was a great mutiny in the British navy. The crews of the fleets lying at Spithead and the Nore agreed to rise simultaneously against their officers. The signal agreed upon was seven bells of the second dog watch. The mutiny actually began at the arranged time, but failed, the ringleaders being executed. Ever since then seven bells of the second dog watch has never been struck on British ships, naval or mercantile.

Nerve Force Restored

HOW IT'S DONE.

It's from the stomach the blood is fed and the nerves controlled.

Undigested food ferments for lack of gastric juice. The fermentation and putrefaction in the stomach and alimentary canal are the main causes of disease.

It upsets the nerves.

It poisons the system.

Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill increases the necessary supply of gastric juice in quantity and quality to insure perfect stomach action. It has similar action on bile formation. Anyone can prove this for himself by addressing WILSON-FYLE Co., Niagara Falls, Ont., for free sample.

Dorothy Dodd

The "Style of a 'Dorothy Dodd.'"

Let us assume that your shoes fit you. Now what next? What is most important? Unquestionably "Style!" Demand that a shoe shall posses "Style!? If it has style and little else you want it; if it has not style but everything else, you don't want it!

The "STYLE OF A 'DOROTHY DODD'" is unique.

It cannot be duplicated by any other maker, because the "Dorothy Dodd" is a totally different construction from any other ladies' shoe made. It holds the foot firmly at the waist (that's the instep), prevents the toes from slipping forward, and thus gives a correct poise in walking. Yet it makes the foot look nearly a whole size smaller. That's curious and you won't believe it till you see it.

Ducks and Geese.

Do geese "quack?" "No," says the observant critic; "geese do not quack, but they squack." It is the ducks that quack, and the story of the goose going about from day to day with a "quack, quack, quack," is declared to be without good foundation. There is, indeed, quite a difference in the vocabulary of these feathered creatures, but it requires a sharp ear to discover the difference.

Meet Me at the Inside Inn.

Never Before Did a Great World's Fair Have a Big Hotel Inside the Grounds.

RATES WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

"Meet me at the Inside Inn." That will be the expression most frequently heard at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. This hotel is an immense structure, 400 feet wide and 800 feet long, with 2,257 sleeping rooms and a dining room seating 2,500 persons. The hotel is inside the Exposition grounds, and operated under the supervision of the Exposition management. It is well appointed and furnished in modern up-to-date style, and will be the center of social affairs in the way of dinners and family reunions inside the grounds.

This hotel is in the southeast portion of the grounds, not far from the Plateau of States, and to the north a short distance are the famous Cascade Gardens, Festival Hall and Connade of States, which form a part of the main picture of the Exposition. Street Railways running by the door go direct to the Union Railway station downtown, and the Intramural Road, inside the grounds, carried guests from the hotel entrance to all points of interest. Here is a cool retreat, where persons can find rest, enjoyment and quietude away from the noise and crush of the crowds along the avenues of the Exposition grounds. Sightseeing at a large Exposition is the most tiresome pleasure, because the mind is busily engaged and finds diversion by constantly changing scenes, while the body is becoming weary and the visitor does not realize how tired he is until he stops to rest. The place to rest is the Inside Inn. The hotel rates cover the daily admission fee to the grounds, and the registered guest at this hotel is free from the annoyance of pushing through the crowds at the gates. There are 500 rooms at $1.50 per person, 500 at $2.00, 500 at $2.50.

The Inside Inn will long be remembered as a distinctive feature of the largest Universal Fair ever held in the world—a fair representing a total cost of $50,000,000 and as large in size as the Columbian, the Pan-American and the Paris fairs combined.

MAY DAY TROUBLES.

Numerous Strikes and Lockouts Throughout the Country—Lake Carriers' Association Suspends Freight Traffic.

Chicago, May 3.—Absolute suspension of freight traffic on the great lakes between Buffalo and Chicago was decreed yesterday by the Lake Carriers' Association, according to The Tribune. The action of the association is said to have been taken in reply to the demand of the seamen for increased wages.

2,000 Out in Montreal.

Montreal, May 3.—In addition to the strike or lock-out of 500 plumbers in this city yesterday, the marble cutters, 400 men; the granite cutters, 100; soft stone cutters, 200, and sculptors and carvers, numbering 50, went on strike for higher wages and shorter hours. The demands vary according to the class of work. In addition, there are 900 painters out, which makes a total of upwards of 2,000 men on strike.

Quiet at the Capital.

Ottawa, May 3.—May Day opened out without labor troubles of any kind. The building trades are not sufficiently busy to make demands advisable, and last year's agreements prevail. The Plumbers' and Steam Fitters' Union some time ago filed a demand for five cents an hour increase and a nine-hour day, but the masters have not replied, and the men are at work.

Strikes at Kingston.

Kingston, May 3.—The masons' helpers at Grant Hall are on strike because masons were set to do work that comes within the domain of the helpers. Other helpers at other buildings have also quit.

The city plumbers are on strike for higher wages, 25 cents a day advance and an agreement limiting the apprentices. The employers refused to sign, hence the strike.

Boston Bakers Out.

Boston, Mass., May 3.—The principal difficulty to occur on May Day in New England was the strike of more than 1,500 bakers in this city and nearby places. The cities affected include Cambridge, Lynn, Salem, Brockton, Abington, Rockland, Staughton, North Easton, Weymouth, South Weymouth and Bridgewater.

Strike of Carpenters.

Waterbury, Conn., May 3.—A strike of the 400 union carpenters in this city began yesterday. They demand a minimum wage rate of $2.80 a day in place of the $2.50 now paid.

Lock Out at Santa Fe.

Topeka, Kan., May 3.—When the 2,000 Santa Fe machinists and workmen gathered at the big railway shops in this city yesterday to go to work, they found the gates locked. The Santa Fe officials asserted that they were simply anticipating a strike that would have come yesterday.

Against "Open Shop."

Oil City, Pa., May 3.—Building was tied up here yesterday by a strike of carpenters, painters, stone masons, tinners and paper-hangers against the "open shop" policy. About 200 men are idle.

500 on Strike.

Newark, N.J., May 3.—About 500 carriage workers went on strike yesterday when the bosses of 68 shops refused to meet the general committee of the union.

Windsor Has Strike.

Windsor, May 3.—The plumbers of Windsor went out yesterday morning on a strike for an increase of wages and a half holiday on Saturday.

Will Resume Operations.

Hamilton, May 3.—The Tuckett Company, which locked out its men in the cigar manufacturing departments in Hamilton, London and Montreal, will open all their factories again this morning. They claim to have been notified that the demands of the men had not been sanctioned by the International Union. The plasters had their wages raised from 30 to 40 cents an hour, commencing this morning. The garment workers will also resume work.

Telegraphers Answered.

Ottawa, May 3.—Another hitch has cropped up in the trouble between the Grand Trunk and their telegraphers. General Manager Hays has replied to the letter from the Department of Labor, which advised the company that intervention had been asked for, that their answer had already been communicated to the employes of the company.

Shot Her Friend.

Rossland, B.C., May 3.—Mrs. Peter Clare, wife of a respected miner living on Nickle Plate Flat, was probably fatally shot by accident in her own home Sunday evening. One of the family of Michael P. Villeneuve was experimenting with a Winchester repeating rifle, and a bullet went through the door of Clare's house, striking Mrs. Clare in the right hip, penetrating the bone and lodging in the abdomen. An operation was performed yesterday afternoon at the general hospital, but the patient is in a critical condition and is not likely to outlive the night. The fatal shot was fired by Mrs. Villeneuve, who is prostrated over the accident.

An Open Verdict.

Ottawa, May 3.—The coroner's jury returned a verdict of death from unknown causes in the case of Mrs. Nettie Quait, the middle-aged woman found dead a few days ago in her home in the west end of the city. Beside the body a phial containing strychnine was found, but it was ascertained that it was securely corked. The post-mortem examination showed no traces of death from strychnine.

Carpenter's Sudden Call.

Winnipeg, May 3.—John Saddler, carpenter, met a sudden death Saturday afternoon. He was engaged in taking some measurements outside a window of a new building, and in stepping back he missed his footing and feel headlong into the basement, a distance of about thirty feet, crushing his head frightfully.

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

is always so impetuous—so ready to take offence. Tell me the truth. I can stand the worst. Indeed, I can!"

"Miss Tanner, calm yourself, I beg," he says, wondering how he can explain matters without bringing his own share of it into notice.

"I am calm. Now tell me all," she replies, assuming with an effort a repose she is certainly far from feeling.

"There has been a little affair here over a dispute. I believe your father was engaged in it. Blows were exchanged—"

"And my dear old governor—" she cries, tightening her clasp upon his arm.

"Was uninjured. See there he is yonder at this very moment," says the delighted Joe, pleased because she does not look upon little Demosthenes Tanner pounded and bleeding.

He catches a cry close to his ears. Molly is no longer standing there. Quick as a flash of light she flits across the open space. Mynheer Joe hears a hoarse chuckle beside him, and knows it proceeds from Mr. Grimes. His eyes follow the figure of the belle of Cairo. To his amazement, she passes the pugnacious little bantam without a look. What does this mean?. She is on her knees beside the recovering Western cyclone! Mynheer Joe groans. He calls himself a fool, a dolt, as the truth flashes upon him and he realizes that it is Molly Tanner's dear old governor whom he has so scientifically knocked out!

CHAPTER VII.

Mynheer Joe, for once in his life, feels a cold perspiration come out upon his forehead, which he nervously wipes away. He wonders is this fear. The man who has faced death in its most horrible forms, in the poisonous swamps of interior Africa, through the jungles of India, where cobras, tigers and vengeful natives lie in wait; meeting the crazed Mohammedan dervishes of the False Prophet face to face in many an assault at Khartoom—this man actually trembling with fear because he dreads the scorn of a woman!

He laughs at himself for the fancy, but it is a nervous laugh, not at all natural and, turning, finds Mr. Grimes surveying him in a comical sort of way.

"Tell me, did you really think that little nincompoop was Demosthenes Tanner?" asks the silver king, in a half-choked voice, for to him the whole situation is inexpressibly funny.

"I certainly did," answers Joe, wondering if it will remedy matters any if he should pass over and shake the little terrier until his teeth rattle in his head; he has conceived a sudden hatred for him.

"A terrible mistake, my dear fellow," grins the other, nodding his head seriously.

"Well, rather, under the circumstances. Tell me who that man is?"

Not that he is particularly anxious to know, but the question is a natural one and will help to carry him out of a predicament.

"The little man? That's the baron, one of Miss Molly's most devoted admirers."

"Confusion! How came it that he quarreled with her father. Anyhow, the baron is used to serfs, and imagines he can run things with a high hand wherever he goes."

"A Russian?"

"Heaven knows what he isn't—Russian, German and Austrian—he has served under all their flags. At present, I have learned, he is under Alexander, and bound for India by stages. Russia has dark designs on the rich possessions of England on the Indian Ocean, and some day the hosts of the White Czar hope to rush over the mountains and overrun the whole of the empire along the Ganges."

Mr. Grimes talks in this way with an object in view—he is interested in the subject, and at the same time hopes to divert the mind of his friend from the awful contretemps into which he has stumbled.

In this latter, he meets with a fair measure of success. As a traveler and explorer, Joe Miner is interested in the movements of armies on the chess-board of Europe, though his knowledge of diplomatic entanglements is very small compared with that of the war correspondent.

By this time Tanner is on his feet. His late antagonist feels as though he would like to slink out of sight, not that he is in the least ashamed of the part he took in the recent engagement, but because he dreads the moment when Molly's eyes must fall upon him after her father has pointed out the man to whom he owes his downfall.

He does nothing of the sort, however, but manfully holds his own. They pass on to the hotel without noticing him, whereupon Joe heaves a sight of relief.

It is useless for Mynheer Joe to declare that this young girl has no influence upon his life. He knows even while thus endeavoring to deceive himself that there is something back of it all—a hidden power that manipulates the wires—a fate that controls their destinies.

Accompanied by Mr. Grimes, he again reaches the piazza, and, seeking a quiet, retired nook, they start in to enjoy their cigars. Mynheer Joe seeks to throw this last disturbing element to one side, and being possessed of remarkable will power, he manages to do so, concentrating his mind upon other matters.

They chat about several things in general, and seem to be very comfortable. The explorer, when his cigar is half smoked, takes a glance around, and notes that they are quite alone, for the piazza at this point is deserted, the guests having wandered in the direction of the supper-room, for the hotel does nothing by halves.

It is no longer utterly dark. The remnant of a February moon has crept up over the horizon, and lends a penciling of silver to the Egyptian landscape. It is very romantic, for the moonlight gleam from many a dome-like mosque and towering minaret.

Mynheer Joe, after noting the fact that they are quite alone, turns to his companion and makes a remark that has a peculiar ring:

"This is as good a time and place for explanations, Mr. Grimes, as we can find."

The silver king looks at his companion and breathes out rings of smoke.

"'Explanations?' My dear fellow, to what do you refer?" he asks; but the expression on his face proclaims that he, at least, suspects.

"There is no need of concealment between us, Mr. Grimes. You may deceive these good people at the hotel, but I have heard of you, sir."

"Oh!" mutters the individual addressed.

"Yes," Mynheer Joe goes on, quickly, as though his mind is made up; "you pass as a silver king at Cairo. Across the water, Mr. Grimes, you are known as one of the shrewdest detectives in the country."

He pauses again as if to let this shot go home. Both puff away at their cigars, as though the action may clear their brains. It is the explorer who breaks the silence.

"You don't deny the soft impeachment, Mr. Grimes?" he says, with a query in his voice.

"I have no reason to, with you, sir, although I should not like this subject to become common property," replies the stout man, in a singularly cool tone.

"Perhaps I can even guess the object of your visit to Egypt in this year of eighty-five."

"Make a try at it now."

"You are searching for a certain individual, by name, Joseph Miner."

"Bull's eye, first shot," laughs Grimes. "Come, how in the deuce did you know all this?"

"I have been looking for a visitor from across the water. Something told me I should fine him in Cairo. Your especial interest in me caused me to be doubly watchful. I remember your name through some peculiar incident that happened when last I saw New York, and as a result I unmasked the silver king."

While he thus speaks, Mynheer Joe shows no signs of uneasiness. He has not the manner of a man who has anything to fear when he finds an officer of the law following him. One who has embezzled a great sum of money might show signs of alarm, but this man evidently has no such burden upon his mind. It is with a far different object in view Mr. Grimes has sought him; that is evident. The pseudo silver king watches him from the corners of his eyes. Now that his journey to the burning land of Egypt has reached its fruition, he begins to entertain doubts as to its ultimate success. Mynheer Joe is undoubtedly a man with a determined character, not easily influenced. Can he offer any inducements whereby the traveler may change his plans and revoke a vow made in the past? Whatever secret he carries with him, Mr. Grimes hopes it may prove effective.

"There is little use, then, in my explaining why I am over here," he says, laconically.

"The same old story—to patch up a peace between Colonel Carringford, my uncle, and myself. I understand. It means much to him that this thing is done; but, although I trust I don't harbor malice, I never want to see his face again."

"Nor will you, sir," says the other, quietly.

"Ah! Then the colonel is dead?"

"Just so. He succumbed to his enemy at last."

"Peace be to his ashes! I've no doubt he kept his word and disinherited me?" with a peculiar inflection of the voice, as though the subject naturally has some interest for him.

"No—and yes!"

"Come, that's a singular answer, Mr. Grimes."

"It is on that account I am over here. Perhaps you remember Jack Austin?"

"One of my best friends in the Quaker City."

"It was he who sent me. I have exhausted nearly four months in all. There remain eight more for you to show up in Philadelphia and prove your identity. That done within a year from the date of the old man's death, and you fall heir to his vast estates."

"Well," with a steady "puff-puff," "suppose I fail to show up—what then?"

"Why, man, there's a cool million at stake in this matter—think of it, enough to fit out expeditions to the North Pole—to the centre of the earth—money to squander in the most elaborate efforts to discover what even a Livingstone or a Doctor Kane has failed in."

Mynheer Joe seems to be weighing the whole affair in the invisible scales of his mind. When he speaks again it is reflectively.

"Eight months, you say. When did he die?"

"On the 10th of October last."

"Eight months—let me see—from Cairo I go direct to India—it is impossible to give that journey up, for even now I may be too late to accomplish what I seek to do. Then, if all goes well there, I have made up my mind to see something of China in a region foreigners have never yet been able to penetrate, making my way through to Persia and the Mediterranean. Eight months are a short time, but then if everything goes well there is a chance that I may turn up in Philadelphia before or on next October 10th. It all depends on how fortune handles me, you know."

It would be impossible to portray the feelings that possess Mr. Grimes while he listens to these remarkable words. He has seen many types of men in his life, and looks upon the whole human race as gold worshipers, yet here is a man who seems to have an honest scorn for the dross. It is the most astonishing event Mr. Grimes has ever come across in all his life. He holds his cigar between finger and thumb and surveys Mynheer Joe with amazement.

"You are the first man I ever met in my range, sir, who would snap his fingers at a fortune which he could have by putting out his hand and grasping it," he mutters.

"Perhaps so, Mr. Grimes. I know my own mind best, and as you perhaps are aware, possess enough means for all the purposes of my business. A little money goes a long way when in the bush, and I don't travel like Stanley with from one to five hundred porters and fighting men. By the way, supposing I fail to turn up by the time specified, does the property go to charity?"

Mr. Grimes has been expecting this, and yet he twists uneasily in his chair, as though hardly willing to answer.

"No. It goes to the other side of the house."

"Ah! The Bunners?"

"A descendant of theirs, daughter of the last Miss Bunner. She married and was lost sight of for a long time, but her family turned up out West somewhere."

"Do you know the name of the heiress, Mr Grimes?"

Everyday finds us steadily advancing and requiring more and more men to do our work.

And we get the workmen—workmen of the best type, too. Just the kind you want to do your work, that's the style of men we are looking for.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affliction from a NEGLECTED COLD, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedella."

Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

Always on Hand.—Mr. Thomas H. Porter, Lower Ireland, P.Q., writes: "My son, 18 months old, had croup so bad that nothing gave him relief until a neighbor brought me some of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which I gave him, and in six hours he was cured. It is the best medicine I ever used, and I would not be without a bottle of it in my house."

Messrs. Northrop & Lyman Co. are the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is now being sold in immense quantities throughout the Dominion. It is welcomed by the suffering invalid everywhere with emotions of delight, because it banishes pain and gives instant relief. This valuable specific for almost "every ill that flesh is heir to," is valued by the sufferer as more precious than gold. It is the elixir of life to many a wasted frame. To the farmer it is indispensable, and it should be in every house.

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

A Wonderful Cure. — Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore, but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle, and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very billious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the billousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

Never is time more precious than when some member of the family is attacked by colic, dysentery or any bowel trouble. The doctor is distant.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"A COUNTRY GIRL" TO-NIGHT.

There is every indication that the above great attraction, which appears at the Carman to-night, will be greeted with a large and brilliant audience. No one should miss it, for it promises to be the greatest operatic event of many seasons. The book and music are by the authors of "San Toy" and "The Geisha," and the complications and merry conceits of these two successful comedies are said to be more than duplicated in this their latest effort. A number of unique characters are seen in the piece and the musical numbers are varied and contain all the elements of wide popularity. The company is now on the way to St. Louis, coming by way of Canada to present "A Country Girl" in a few cities on its way to the World's Fair.

A GREAT CANADIAN ACTRESS.

A splendid future appears to be in store for Miss Roselle Knott, the Hamilton girl who will play the leading female role in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," which comes to the opera house on Wednesday night, May 4. After a very successful season, as leading woman with Robert Mantell, during which she appeared at Winnipeg in "Monbars" and in the "Face in the Moonlight" with that actor, Miss Knott was engaged by Richard Mansfield for the leading roles in repertoire. In "When Knighthood Was in Flower" Miss Knott is said to have a part which fits her to perfection, and in which she has scored a veritable triumph as the wilful, winsome Mary Tudor. Her co-star, Charles Dalton, is a romantic actor of the first class, and a great treat is in store for all lovers of the drama on Wednesday evening.

Ladies' Aid Social.

The Ladies' Aid Society in connection with St. Andrew's Church, held a social last evening in the school rooms of the church, which was largely attended. Mr. W. P. Hudson, ex-M.P.P., occupied the chair and filled that position most acceptably. Rev. Mr. MacTavish, of Deseronto, Moderator of the session, gave an interesting and amusing address on the subject of "Spectacles." Solos were given by Miss Jessie Jamieson, of Scotland, and Mr. Chas. McMechan, which were much appreciated. Misses Jessie Robertson and Maggie Keith delighted the audience with recitations. During the evening refreshments were served.

COUNCIL ACCEPTED THE LOWEST OFFER

Surprising Ending to Phillips-Caldwell Sale of Lots Affair.

Zwicks Island Water Scheme May be Proceeded With Before Very Long.

A Windy Session, in Which All Took Turns in Airing Their Eloquence.

The Council meeting last night, like Rev. Mr. Ninthly's sermon, was distinguished more by length than breadth. The Aldermen were full to bursting with natural gas, and lost no opportunity to wag their tongues, the result being that it was near the "witching hour of night" when the excitement was over. Nothing very important was done, excepting, possibly the determination arrived at by the Council to sell certain lots for some $92 less than was offered for them by another party.

There was not one vacant chair, and a large crowd of two persons sat in the auditorium and listened to the speeches as long as they could stand it.

After the City Clerk had used up all his breath reading a string of minutes as long as your arm, he read the following:

Communications.

From R. L. Morrison, re granolithic walks—Referred.

From the Brighton Village Council, requesting the Belleville Council to send a representative to a meeting to be held in Brighton Town Hall in order to discuss the proposed Ontario Electric Railway—Table.

From Mr. Peebles re voting machines—Referred.

From Dr. Sprague, re road to Zwick's island, offering to enter into the same arrangement as last year providing the Council would remit the taxes on certain lots owned by him near the roadway—Table.

From C. I. Penton, re certain lots which he offered to loan the city for park purposes—Referred.

From W. Jeffers Diamond, re certain lots which he claimed his client, Mr. Jos. Caldwell, had bought from the city, and asking that the deed for same be given—Table.

From Mr. Eastwood, of Peterboro, asking that a price be named for the rails on Front street, if they were for sale.

From the authorities of St. Agnes' School, asking that their taxes for 1903 be remitted, as they had gone to great expense in fitting up an institution which had been, and promised to be, of great benefit to the city. Some $20,000 had been expended upon the property, and the school authorities thought they deserved some consideration at the hands of the city—Table.

The following accounts were laid on the table and eventually passed, the light item being subject to the Chairman's checking:

R. Gibson	$ 15.00
Greenleaf & Sons	6.75
Greenleaf & Sons	6.75
C.P.R. Tel. Co.	.50
E. T. Austin	15.00
Trenton Electric Co.	12.60
Trenton Electric Co.	338.75

Reports of Committees.

The Gas Committee reported the passage of the following accounts, which were endorsed:

Pay sheet	$128.00
Standard Meter Co.	211.00
Wm. McGie	21.53
John Lewis & Co.	17.29
Meter Inspection	30.00

The reports of the various standing committees, as already published, were read, Ald. Magrath being in the chair in committee of the whole.

Zwick's Island Water.

When the report of the Water Committee came up, recommending that no action be taken in the matter till next fall,

Ald. Sinclair registered a kick of monumental proportions. He thought Mr. Chipman's estimate was altogether too high. Why was it necessary to get new pipe when the city now had 1800 feet of it stretching out into the bay? Why not pull up 1000 feet of it and use that for Zwick's island purposes, leaving the other 800 to pump through? The city should have good water before the dog days came. It would be a simple matter to take up the pipe. Mr. Chipman, he thought, had too elaborate a system in his mind. He would like to see the matter proceeded with at once, and moved that the clause in question be struck out, and that the Water Committee ascertain from Mr. Hulme the probable cost of taking up the necessary pipe from the bay and carrying out the Zwick's island scheme at once, Mr. Hulme to report to the Executive Committee at an early date.

Ald. McFee seconded the motion. We needed pure water very much. This question, he thought was the most important thing before the Council. He could not see why the cost should be from $8,000 to $11,000. It must be done some time; why not do it at once.

Ald. Sulman read the report of Mr. Willis Chipman, the C. E, and hydraulic sharp, which set forth that, owing to high water, the cost of making the change would be greater now than in the fall or winter, and putting the total cost at $11,500.

After considerable more conversation, the motion was carried.

The Station Street Dump.

The Public Works Committee's report recommended that the eyesore on Station street and Canifton road be made decent by the Street Surveyor, he to have the refuse on the sides of the roads pushed over into the hollow, and put up notices to the effect that anyone dumping there in future must put the refuse deposited in the hollow, under pain of prosecution. The recommendation passed.

The Surveyor reported re the proposed drain on West Bridge street, which would cost $65.

The Aldermen discussed the matter for a half an hour or so, and then referred it back.

The other items in the reports of the various committees were passed without change or discussion.

The City Hall.

During the consideration of the City Property Committee's report,

Ald. Green said he had been spoken to by Mrs. (Rev.) G. R. Beamish who desired to rent the City Hall for a mission entertainment. The charge, $8, was considered too high. Could the Council not make a reduction in the case of entertainments given for religious or charitable purposes.

The Council were evidently, not disposed to make reductions for anybody, though it was pointed out that it was unfair to charge a local church as much as a travelling fakir who might want to rent the hall. The matter was allowed to drop with the understanding that it would be dealt with under the head of "Motions," the idea being that a higher rate should be fixed for non-residents who wished to rent the hall, but everybody, apparently, forgot it when the proper time came.

Other Matters.

Mayor Chown was appointed a deputation of one to attend the Brighton meeting re Electric Railway.

Dr. Sprague's proposition re Bay bridge road was agreed to, after the Mayor had shown certain Aldermen that the arrangement proposed was exactly the same as that entered into last year, considering the fact that last year the Doctor's lots were not taxed at all and this year he asked the Council to remit the taxes imposed.

The petition of the St. Agnes' School authorities caused the City Fathers to lose a good deal of breath. Some of them were of the opinion that the school should get the exemption it was entitled to, and no more.

Ald. Sinclair pointed out that it was not fair to poor men who had all they could do to pay their taxes, to go beyond the Statute in order to benefit any institution.

It was finally decided to recommend the Court of Revision to remit the school's 1903 taxes from July 1st to the end of the year.

Lots and Lots of Talk.

Mr. W. Jeffers Diamond's letter was taken up, and the wind began to blow in earnest.

An epitome of this matter is given in the "Timely Topics" column.

Ald. McFee thought they were in honor bound to carry out the agreement entered into by the City Treasurer and Ald. Panter with Mr. Caldwell. He had, at the special meeting, voted to annul the agreement and call for sealed offers, but had felt since that it was a mistake.

Ald. Magrath asked the City Solicitor if he held to his opinion that the sale made by the two members of the committee was not binding.

Mr. Mikel—"Yes."

Ald. Sulman moved, seconded by Ald. Gordon, that the Mayor be instructed to sign the deeds giving 41 of the lots to Mr. Caldwell for $235.

The Mayor said it was stated at the special meeting that Mr. Phillips had, last time the lots were put up, bought them back for $100. Mr. Phillips had shown him receipts which proved that he had paid $390 for the lots.

"Motion, motion," said some of the Aldermen.

"Stop a moment," said the Mayor. The Council had sent a request to Messrs. Caldwell and Phillips for sealed offers. "Here," said His Worship, "is an accepted cheque for $326.50, being the highest offer. If this offer is not accepted you will have a lawsuit on your hands."

Ald. Gordon thought they were in fairness bound to complete the sale with Mr. Caldwell.

Ald. Panter acknowledged that Mr. Phillips had said he would give more for the lots than anybody else, but could get nothing more definite from him.

Mayor Chown raised a breeze by pointing out that, when the alleged sale was made there was no offer before the committee. It was in Ald. Panter's pocket, and for that reason the sale was not a legal one. The Solicitor held that, to make the bargain binding, there must be unanimity among the committee. This there had not been.

Ald. Panter was warm under the collar when he arose. The committee, he said, could have had the offer had they wanted it. For his part, he would not use personal enmity between two men to extort money from anybody.

The Mayor gave a history of the case, showing how Mr. Caldwell had offered $125 for the lots, then Mr. Phillips had offered $150. Then Mr. Caldwell offered $200, which Mr. Phillips increased to $210. Then Mr. Caldwell bid again, but Ald. Panter would not state what that bid was, but had told him that he (the Mayor) could get all the offers he liked and that he (Ald. Panter) would still vote to give the lots to Mr. Caldwell.

Ald. Panter had taken the grounds he did because he would not be a party to peddling the lots.

The committee rose and reported, and the time was extended for two hours. Ald. Paterson was the new chairman.

Ald. Magrath had no sympathy with rich men who tried to evade their taxes, but he could not see how they (the Council) could refuse to accept the highest offer. They had the opinion of their Solicitor that the bargain made by Ald. Panter and the City Treasurer was not binding, and it would, in his opinion, be wrong to refuse the highest offer after they had called for it.

The vote on Ald. Sulman's motion was then taken, Ald. McFee, Panter, Gordon, Green and Sulman voting for it.

"Carried," said the chairman.

Ald. Marsh had gone home some little time before. The negatives were not asked to show their hands.

Enquiries.

Ald. Sinclair asked when the Park roadway would be repaired.

Ald. Ketcheson said as soon as the crusher and steam roller began doing business.

Ald. McGrath asked if Tax Collector Starling's rolls had been returned. If not, why not?

The Solicitor said he had seen Mr. Starling, who had promised to return the rolls by next meeting.

By-laws.

Two by-laws were passed, one, numbered 1155, providing for the watering of Bridge St., between Pinnacle St. and Foster avenue, and the other, 1156, in relation to taxes.

Motions.

The Chairman of Parks was authorized to make the usual contract for lighting the park.

Mr. H. W. Ackerman was appointed to audit the former Police Court Clerk's books, before they are turned over to the new Clerk, Chief Newton.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

TOGO AGAIN TRIES TO BLOCK CHANNEL AT PORT ARTHUR.

Russians Claim to Have Sunk Two Jap Torpedo Boats and Eight Fire Ships—Another Big Land Battle in Progress at Feng Huan Cheng—Russians Still Falling Back

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

St. Petersburg, May 3.—It is reported that Vice-Admiral Togo made another desperate attempt to block the entrance of Port Arthur last night, but failed. Viceroy Alexieff sent out a section of the fleet to meet the attack and sank eight fire-ships and two Japanese torpedo boats. The channel is reported to be clear.

London, May 3.—Another big battle is believed to be in progress at Feng Huan Cheng. The Russians retreated to that point after Sunday's fighting, with the main body of the Japanese army in close pursuit. The last report of the Russians' movements was that they were falling back in semi-circular line, the horns of which were being drawn in gradually, preparatory to retiring to a position further west.

Feng Huan Cheng is forty miles northwest of Antung and controls the famous Pekin road, which is the main artery of travel between the Chinese capital and Corea.

London, 9 a.m.—30,000 Russians are reported to have been entirely routed by a force of 8,000 Japs. This is the most important news thus far in the land campaign.

It is believed Gen. Kuropatkin will be compelled to fall back to Mukden.

After the war he came to this city and was employed as a writer on several newspapers.

THE COAL QUESTION

SEEMS TO HAVE BEEN SATISFACTORILY SOLVED, SO FAR AS THIS YEAR IS CONCERNED.

There is no lack of coal in the city now. Four barges are to-day unloading in the harbor, namely, the Reid, which brought 1100 tons; the Rob Roy, 1000 tons, the Dominion and the Freeman, also heavily loaded.

A leading coal dealer informs us that the opening price for the new season will not be over $6.50 per ton. As to whether it will be any higher or lower, our informant says will depend altogether upon the action of the coal mining companies and the cost of transportation. At any rate the reduction of 50 cents a ton is a welcome one, and we may hope for a further cut later, if the expectations of local dealers are realized.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' DAY

Three Bills Advanced and Some Questions Answered.

The Debate in Committee on the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill Was Confined to Clauses 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8, and the Opposition Was Unable to Elicit From the Premier Any Estimate of Total Cost of the Road.

Ottawa, May 3.—Monday being private members' day, the first business taken up in the House yesterday afternoon was that of private bills, three of which were read a third time and passed, namely:

The bill respecting the Quebec & Lake Huron Railway Company; Mr. Malouin.

U.S. Has More Favorable Terms.

Col. Hughes was informed that United States vessels and goods enter ports in the Hawaiian Islands, Philippines, Cuba and Porto Rico on more favorable terms than do British and Canadian vessels and goods, for the reason that all excepting Cuba are ports of the United States. By a reciprocity treaty recently concluded at Cuba, United States goods enjoy a preference of 20 per cent. of goods from other countries entering Cuban ports. At various times representation have been made with a view to securing equally favorable treatment for Canadian goods at those ports, but so far unavailable. The only advantage which Canadian goods enjoy over United States goods in British colonial ports are advantages under preferential tariffs.

War Office Gives Reasons.

In reply to Col. Hughes, the Minister of Militia stated that the War Office had declined to grant the King's medal to members of the Canadian Mounted Rifles who served twice in South Africa, on the grounds that the corps had not been nine months in service there.

Mr. Roche was informed that from June 30, 1903, to the first of April, 1904, the sum of $7,420 had been paid by the Government to The Winnipeg Free Press.

Col. Kaulbach was informed that the lightship Lurcher, built at Toronto, and now stationed in the Bay of Fundy, was constructed after the design of the United States Lighthouse Board. Another lightship, of the same model, is to be stationed at the east end of Anticosti Island.

On the Railway Bill.

In committee, clause 4 of the Government's Railway Bill was taken up. It provides that the Government's guarantee on the cost of the mountain section is increased to three-fourths of the total cost from three-fourths of $30,000 per mile.

Mr. Lennox, Mr. Paterson, Mr. Barker, Mr. Borden and Mr. Fielding were the chief debaters in committee.

Unsuccessful attempts were made in the course of the debate to elicit information from the Government as to the country's estimated liability under the new contract. The utmost that could be extracted from Sir Wilfrid was that he knew no more about it than he did last year.

Clause 5 was passed, providing that the Government shall implement its guarantee upon bonds of the mountain section and prairie section to bring the guarantee up to 75 per cent. of the total cost in the one case and $13,000 per mile in the latter.

Clause 6 was also passed. It provides that the Government shall not exercise any rights in regard to taking over the road until the company shall have made five years default in interest.

Clause 7 and 8, which provide that after such default the road shall be placed in the hands of a receiver, to be operated for the joint benefit of the Government and the company, until all arrears shall have been paid, when it shall revert to the Grand Trunk Pacific were also passed.

The House adjourned at 11.40 p. m.

Condemn the Government.

St. Thomas, May 3.—The beekeepers of Elgin have passed a resolution putting themselves on record as condemning the policy of the Ontario Government in bonusing the sugar beet industry to the detriment of the honey industry, which produces a food much superior to sugar, to say nothing of the value of bees to the farmer and fruit growers as fertilizer of blossoms.

Death of Public Works Secretary.

Toronto, May 3.—On Saturday afternoon William Edwards, the venerable secretary of the Ontario Public Works Department, was present at this office, but on his return home was seized with paralysis and passed away last evening. Mr. Edwards assumed his position in the Department on its organization in January, 1868. He was a resident of Toronto since 1837. For 22 years he was in commercial life, and during the early '60's was for five years an alderman for St. James' Ward. From 1869 to 1873 he was secretary of immigration. Mr. Edwards was a native of Brister, Norfolk, and the funeral to-morrow will mark the 86th anniversary of his birth. A widow, a brother and three sons survive him.

Rifled the Mail Bag.

Brampton, May 3.—A. E. Davis, mail courier, 19 years old, has been committed to jail here to stand his trial for the theft of a registered letter. He was engaged on the mail route between Cheltenham and "The Grange," and while carrying mail along his route on March 11 opened the bag and extracted a registered letter containing $60.80.

CANADA-ALASKA LIMITS

The Delimitation of the Boundary Will Begin This June.

Several Parties of Canadian and American Surveyors Will Begin Work Next Month—It Is Expected That About One-Tenth of the Total Distance Will Be Delimited This Season—The Canadian Surveyors.

Ottawa, May 3.—The work of delimiting the Canada-Alaska boundary according to the finding of the London Tribunal, will be begun early in June, and will be prosecuted by several parties of Canadian and American surveyors, operating conjointly until the end of September. From Mount St. Elias northward to the shores of the frozen sea the line has already been laid along the 141st parallel, according to treaty. This portion of the boundary was not in dispute. From St. Elias east and south around the coast strip to the head of Portland Channel, a distance of 550 miles, the boundary will have to be marked by the surveyors, as determined by the Tribunal.

It is expected that about one tenth of this distance will be delimited by the joint survey this season. This does not mean that it will take ten years to complete the marking of the boundary line; all that will require to be laid off is that portion of the boundary which crosses rivers, valleys and plateaus, in other words, the country through which travel is possible and prospecting probable. Mountain peaks will be assumed as boundary points wherever such have been marked on the map accompanying the finding of the Tribunal.

W. F. King, chief astronomer of the Dominion, and Mr. Titman, chief of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Commissioners for Canada and the United States, respectively, will not go to Alaska this season, but will see to the despatch of the survey parties and afterwards reduce the results of their work to map form. Mr. King will leave for Vancouver, May 10. Then he will organize the three Canadian survey parties and start them for the field of operations.

Three American parties will be sent out at the same time. Two Canadian and two United States survey parties will work conjointly in the country where the boundary will cross the head waters of the Lynn Canal, and one Canadian and one American party will work together on the delimitation of the boundary where it will cross the Stikine River. This will delimit the more important districts through which the boundary will pass.

C. A. Biggar, C.E., of Ottawa, and White Fraser, of Dawson, will be in charge of two of the Canadian parties.

J. J. McArthur left on Saturday to continue the operation of relocating the 49th parallel between British Columbia and the States of Idaho and Washington. This will be the third season spent in this work. The old monuments of the original survey are being replaced by monuments of aluminum bronze.

FOUR THOUSAND RUSSIANS KILLED ON THE FIRST OF MAY.

Jap Admiral Near Port Arthur But Failed to Block Harbor.

Alexieff Tells the Story of the Battle of the Yalu to the Emperor—Admits That Russian Losses Were Enormous—Jap General Reports Their Loss in Killed and Wounded At 793—Japs Capture Newchang.

St. Petersburg, May 4.—High Admiral Grand Duke Alexis has received the following official telegram from Viceroy Alexieff, reporting the Japanese attempt to block Port Arthur early yesterday morning:

"I respectfull report to Your Highness that a fresh attack was made by the enemy last night with the object of obstructing the entrance to the port, and that it was successfully repelled.

"At 1 o'clock this morning five torpedo boats were perceived from the eastern batteries. Under the fire of our warships and the batteries they retreated southward.

"At 1.45 o'clock the first fireship, escorted by several torpedo boats, was sighted, and we opened fire upon it from the batteries and the warships. Three-quarters of an hour afterwards our searchlights revealed a number of fireships making for the entrance of the harbor from the east and southeast. The coast defence vessels Otvashni and Gremieshchi and the gunboat Gilliak repulsed each by a well-directed fire.

Eight Fire Ships Were Sunk.

"Altogether eight ships were sunk by our vigorous cannonade, by Whitehead torpedoes launched from our torpedo boats and by the explosion of several submarine mines. Further, according to the reports of the officers commanding the batteries and the gunboat Giliak, two Japanese torpedo boats were destroyed.

"After 4 o'clock a. m! the batteries and warships ceased fire, subsequently firing only at intervals on the enemy's torpedo boats, which were visible on the horizon.

Two Mortally Wounded Jap Officers.

"Up to the present, thirty men, including two mortally wounded officers, who took refuge on a launch, have been rescued from the fireships by us or picked up. The inspection of the roadstead and the work of saving the enemy's men were hindered by the heavy sea running. We suffered no casualties, with the exception of a seaman belonging to the torpedo boat destroyer Boevoi.

"On the appearance of the first fireship, accompanied by the enemy's torpedo boats, I boarded a launch and proceeded to the Otvashni to take immediate measures for repulsing the fireships. With me were Lieut.-Gen. Zilinski and Captain Eberhardt of the naval general staff. Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel was on the fortifications at the same time, and Gen. Loschinsky, chief of the defence forces of the forces, was on board the Giliak."

Jap Crews Seen.

Port Arthur, May 4.—The crews of the Japanese fireships which were sunk yesterday morning while attempting to block the channel tried to save themselves by putting to sea in boats. A majority of them were killed by the Russian machine guns and rifles. Some of the survivors were picked up.

At daybreak a number of Japanese were seen clinging to the masts and funnels of the sunken vessels and they were rescued by the Russians. Thirteen of the wounded Japanese have since died. The Russians supplied the survivors with food and clothing, and the wounded were taken to the hospital ship Mongolia.

During the morning ten of the enemy's torpedo boats remained in the offing and were fired on at long range.

At 9.30 o'clock it was signalled that there was a Japanese fleet in the vicinity and that two of the enemy's launches had been run ashore.

Frequent Bayonet Charges.

St. Petersburg, May 4.—The Emperor has received a telegram, under yesterday's date, from Gen. Kuropatkin, describing the fight of May 1. In it he says:

"Thirty Japanese guns were pitted against our battery at Potietinski, which, after having silenced the enemy's mountain battery, directed its fire on the Japanese infantry and sustained few losses so long as it was not obliged to take up another position owing to the withdrawal of our infantry from the bank.

"The Japanese under our fire made continual bayonet attacks on our troops.

"Simultaneously with the attack at Potietinsky an attack was being made on our left flank at Turencheng and the Russian trenches had to be abandoned owing to the Japanese enfilading fire.

"The losses of the 11th and 12th Regiments were very great, but they are not yet exactly known.

"In the 11th the killed included Col. Laming and Lieut.-Cols. Domelli and Raievsky. The 12th lost nine company commanders killed or wounded.

"The second and third batteries of the 6th Brigade, having lost the greater number of their men and horses, were compelled to abandon their guns after rendering them useless. For the same reason six guns of the third battery of the 3rd Brigades of Artillery and eight poulemmets, which could not be brought away, were also disabled. The mountainous nature of the country made it impossible to save the guns by means of drag ropes.

"Up to the present, 800 wounded, including fourteen officers, have been brought to the hospital at Fengwangcheng. Their eventual transportation elsewhere is fully assured.

Admits Loss of 4,000.

"Lieut.-General Sassulitch declares that the troops retained their morale, notwithstanding the heavy losses, and are ready for fresh engagements.

"The Japanese losses were very heavy at the passage of the Ai River, at their position at Turencheng, and on the hill occupied by the two battalions of the 11th Regiment.

"According to the statements of participants in the battle, at least 3,000 to 4,000 were killed."

Jap Casualities 798.

Tokio, May 4.—A supplementary report was received here yesterday from Gen. Kuroki. It is dated yesterday, and says:

"Yesterday the enemy offered a stubborn resistance against our pursuit, adding about 300 to our casualties. The enemy stood with resolution until their artillery, consisting of two batteries, lost the majority of its men and horses. They then broke the breeches and closing apparatus of their guns, and hoisted the white flag.

"According to a captured Russian officer, Major-General Kastalinsky, commander of the 3rd East Siberian Rifle Brigade, the colonels of the 11th and 12th Rifle Regiments and the commander of the rifle artillery battalion were killed in the fighting at Hamalan.

"It seems that the enemy was entirely routed by our attack, because since yesterday many have come in and surrendered. Our prisoners include thirty, officers, twenty of whom are wounded, and 300 men, 100 of whom are wounded.

"A preliminary report from the chief surgeon of the 1st Japanese Army shows that we had 798 men killed and wounded. The casualties are divided as follows:

Japs Capture Newchwang.

London, May 4.—The Che Foo correspondent of The Daily Chronicle cables the following, under yesterday's (Tuesday) date: "The Japanese landed troops and attacked and captured Newchwang last evening, the Russians falling back to protect the railway."

The Joy of Victory.

Tokio, May 4.—The greatest popular demonstration since the beginning of the war occurred in Tokio last evening. The capital was showing its joy at the Japanese victory on the Yalu.

Two Russian Generals Wounded.

St. Petersburg, May 4.—It is now admitted here that both Generals Zassalitch and Kashalinsky were wounded and that twenty-seven guns were captured by the Japanese on Sunday.

Jap Artillery Superior.

St. Petersburg, May 4.—Gen. Kuropatkin's official report, dated May 2, says Gen. Kassalitch's forces retreated in good order, eventually arriving at Fengwangcheng. He attributes the losses on the Yalu to the superiority of the Japanese artillery..

It was a close call. You can't, now, convince that bicyclist that the passage of the by-law calling for the muzzling of collies would not have been a good thing.

"A Taxpayer" writes: "May I take up a little of your space with an expression of my opinion in regard to the sale of lots so much talked about just now? For my part, I know nothing about the early history of the matter, but this appears to me plain: Certain members of the City Council ratified a sale for 41 lots, belonging to the city, for $235, when they were offered $326.50 for 44 lots. Why? Is not one man's money as good as another's? Was it not the duty of our Council to obtain all they could for the lots? Are they not, as custodians of the city's interests, bound to obtain all they can for any property belonging to the city which is sold? I think so, and would so interpret my duty were I in the Council. If an Alderman, member of a certain committee, does not like the methods employed in selling the property controlled by that committee, let him resign. Again, I note, according to your report, that Ald. Panter refused to tell Mr. Phillips Mr. Caldwell's last bid, claiming that "he would not be a party to peddling the lots." Would not the same methods prevail exactly in case the lots were sold by auction, which, I believe, they are supposed to be? In conclusion, I would ask, are the members of the City Council going to allow this questionable proceeding to stand? Would it not be better to reconsider the matter, do justice to the citizens by obtaining the most money possible for the lots and at the same time avoid a threatened lawsuit, which is sure to be costly? I think so, and have talked with many who think the same."

IN HAMILTON, TOO.
(Hamilton Spectator.)

What do we want with a voting machine.

Replying to our remarks the other day concerning the Trent Canal, the Hamilton Spectator says:

"But is Kingston to be the objective point of all the eastbound business, and the starting place of all the westbound carrying trade of the canal? Is the canal to have no dealings with Oswego, Sodus Point, Cape Vincent, or any of the American ports in the east half of the lake? Is the canal to have no dealings with the western ports of Lake Ontario, such as Toronto and Hamilton? If not, we have nothing to say. But if we in this part of the world are to derive some advantage from the expenditure of public money in the canal, we venture to ask The Intelligencer if it is any more dangerous to run a barge from Port Hope to Hamilton than it is to run the same barge over that route and the distance between Port Hope and the Murray Canal besides?"

The main object of the Trent Canal, as we understand it, would be to furnish a cheap route to tide water for grain grown in the great Northwest. Therefore, the nearer the outlet is to the St. Lawrence the better, and the smoother the water that the barges encounter the better. If Hamilton or Toronto received or despatched any freight via the Trent Canal a difference of some 35 miles would make little difference, and the additional cost of transportation would be more than offset by the benefit which would accrue to the country through the generation of practically unlimited electric power on the Trent River were Trenton to be made the terminus. That is the point in which Belleville and several other places are vitally interested. As to the trade with "Oswego, Cape Vincent, or any of the American ports on the east half of the lake," they would find little, if any, difference in transportation charges between Port Hope and Trenton, and, anyway, we are not doing much weeping about Yankee towns. They have a happy faculty of being able to look after themselves.

Toronto, April 29.

Steacy v. Stayner.—Judgment (E.B. B.) on appeal by plaintiff from judgment of Teetzel, J. (3 O.W.R. 244) in an action to recover $920 and notarial fees and interest paid by plaintiff to retire a promissory note made by one T. A. Stayner (now deceased), a brother of defendant, to plaintiff's order, and endorsed first by defendant and then by plaintiff. Plaintiff and defendant were accommodation endorsers. Teetzel, J., held that the rights and liabilities of plaintiff and defendant as accommodation endorsers were governed by Macdonald v. Whitefield, 8 App. Cas. 733, and that plaintiff was entitled to recover from defendant, as a co-surety for the maker, only one-half the amount paid. Held, per Boyd, C., that plaintiff did not become the holder in due course of the note sued on, but was a party to it for the purpose of lending his name to the maker, and so far as both parties were concerned, the note was an accommodation one within the meaning of 53 Vict. ch. 33, sec. 28. The relations of the parties to each other was that of sureties, and the rule of equitable construction as between them applies. The case is not to be dealt with under the law merchant, but upon the proved and admitted circumstances under which the note was signed by both endorsers. No doubt each was misled as to the other by the maker, but that leaves them still inter se as sureties for the one debt. Given an accommodation note, the law implies equal contribution as between the accommodation parties; Macdonald v. Whitefield, 8 App. Cas. 733; Vallee v. Talbot, Q.R. 1 S.C. 233. Per Meredith, J., that upon the conflict of testimony, and upon the whole evidence, no more can be found as a fact than that each of the parties endorsed solely for the accommodation of the maker; that each was, or meant to be, merely a surety for him. The order of signing cannot be found, in the circumstances, to have had reference to any order of liability. The parties then being, according to the evidence, co-sureties, the ordinary rule as to contribution applies and defendant is at the most answerable for one-half of the sum in question; he has not appealed against the judgment against him to that extent. Idington, J., agreed in affirming the judgment, but not on the ground that Macdonald v. Whitefield governed the case. That case rested upon inferences of fact, showing a common understanding amongst those held to be co-sureties. There was no such understanding here. Plaintiff was payee of the note and signed his name as endorser under that of defendant, who had signed on the back of a blank form of note. This does not necessarily entitle plaintiff to succeed; Robertson v. Huckback, 15 C.P. 298; and upon the evidence plaintiff cannot claim to be a subsequent observer. E. G. Porter (Belleville) for plaintiff. W. E. Raney for defendant.

The remains will arrive here to-morrow at noon for interment.

SINCERELY MOURNED BY ALL WHO KNEW HIM

DEATH OF REV. ALLAN MOORE, A FORMER WELL-KNOWN AND POPULAR RESIDENT OF PLAINFIELD.

In announcing the death of Rev Allan Moore, a former resident of Plainfield, this county, the Whitewood, Assa., Herald, of April 15, speaks as follows:

It is with sincere regret that we are called upon to announce to our readers the death of the Rev. Mr. Moore, which occurred in the General Hospital, Winnipeg, on Monday morning of this week, where he had gone several weeks ago for treatment. The news was wired by Corp. Fyffe, who with Mrs. Fyffe, is at present in Winnipeg. It is needless to say that the sad intelligence caused profound sorrow, not only among the members of the late Mr. Moore's congregation, but among all classes in the town and community—all of whom had learned to hold him in the highest possible esteem. Although his ministration here has been comparatively brief, scarcely a year, yet during that short period his noble character, sincere piety and Christian meekness leave impressions upon the minds of many with whom he came in contact that time will not efface. This is especially true in regard to the children of his congregation, whom he so dearly loved and to whom he devoted so much of his time, his desire being to have their young lives grounded on high Christian principles was his greatest ambition. The little object lessons which he so carefully prepared and delivered for their special benefit every Sunday, will long be remembered by them. Mr. Moore had pondered long on the law: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," it had entered profoundly into his being and formed a large part of it. He was strong in self-respect, but his respect for others, not for this man or that, but for other men as well, was much more conspicuous, never censuring those who differed from his opinions. It may be said of him that he was the essence of Christian humility.

As a preacher Mr. Moore was very interesting, his sermons were always carefully thought out; his comparisons and illustrations were largely from conditions of every day life which had the effect of greatly simplifying and at the same time making his sermon very attractive. Being a diligent student, he was always master of his subject and never talked at random, his whole body was wrapt up in the noble work to which he devoted his life. It was interesting to hear him relate the plans which he had from time to time so methodically laid out to conduct his work, but which he, unfortunately, was not always able to carry out owing to his illness. He keenly felt his inability to cope with his work. It was only the indomitable courage which he possessed that could have sustained him to hold out so long. The disease which ultimately cut off this useful life, was lurking in the shadow for years. It was first felt during his college days and at periods ever since he was subject to many hours of severe pain early last winter he had a very severe attack, but recovered sufficiently to take up his work again. The final stage of his illness which he could not throw off set in about five weeks ago and as a last resort he decided to submit to an operation, which he had not the strength to survive. It is possible that if this had been done in the earlier stages of the disease he might still be alive and comparatively well, but Providence willed it otherwise.

Mr. Moore was born in Ontario about forty years ago. He taught school for several years. On coming west he entered Manitoba College, where he took a full course in Arts and Theology, after graduating he was appointed to take charge of Griswold and surrounding field missions, and labored diligently for several years, which charge he resigned early in 1902, when he made a trip to the Old Country, extending over several months, visiting many places of interest in England, Ireland and Scotland. On his return to the west he was called to supply Whitewood for one Sabbath, which resulted in an unanimous call being placed in his hands by Knox Church Congregation three weeks later, which call he accepted, and was inducted on the 5th of last May.

"The deceased clergyman came to Manitoba and entered as a student in Manitoba College, taking his degree as B.A. in 1892 and completing his course in theological study in 1895. He served in succession as minister at Clear Springs and Griswold, but his work was interrupted by broken health. After a lengthened rest, he returned about a year ago, and was called to be minister of Whitewood, where he continued in active church work until about a month ago, when he was again compelled to take to his bed. Rev. Mr. Moore was a man of genial disposition and high type of manhood, and was held in the very highest esteem by all who knew him. His removal is a great loss, and will be deplored by many friends among the Presbyterian members of the west."

"A funeral service was held in Manitoba College yesterday afternoon before the removal of the remains of Rev. Allan Moore, B.A., B.D., to the C.P.R. station for shipment to Shannonville, Ont. Rev. Dr. Bryce made a few opening remarks referring to the late Mr. Moore as a former student of the college, an earnest worker in the mission field, and for several years a member of this presbytery. The hymn, "O God of Bethel," was then sung; Rev. Principal Patrick read select passages of Scripture, and Rev. Dr. Carmichael offered prayer. The following reverend gentlemen acted as pallbearers: Revs. Dr. Carmichael, D. Wilson, R. M. Dickey, C. H. Stewart, H. C. Sweet and A. Murray."

The remains arrived at Shannonville on Friday, April 15, and were taken to his old home near Plainfield. On Sunday afternoon the funeral, which was very largely attended, took place to the Presbyterian Church at Roslin, where, as a boy, Mr. Moore had worshipped from week to week. Rev. Mr. Binnie, of Tweed, conducted the services, assisted by Rev. Messrs. Burns, of Stirling; Thompson, of Foxboro, and Thomas, of Plainfield. The remains were borne by three brothers and three cousins, and were interred in the family plot at Roslin.

Mr. Moore is survived by his father and mother, two brothers and a sister, at home, one brother (Dr. Moore) at Shannonville, one brother in Vancouver and two in Regina. For these sorrowing ones a wide circle of friends join in deepest sympathy in the loss of a son and brother of such sterling character and high ambitions.

A memorial service for the late pastor was held in the Presbyterian Church at Whitewood on Sunday morning, April 24.

If You Have These Symptoms

Send For My Book.

If you want to feel better.
If you want more strength.
If you lack ambition.
If you can't do things like you used to.
If your nerve—your courage—is leaving you.
If you lack confidence in yourself.
If you lack, vim, vigor, vitality.
If something is eating away your constitution, write to me for the book you need.

The book tells of my discovery. Tells how after thirty years I found the cause of these symptoms, and many others, given above.

The book tells how by scientific experiment I traced out the causes that bring on chronic diseases. It tells how I perfected my prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

I found invariably that where there was a weakness the inside nerves were weak. Where there was a lack of vitality that the vital nerves lacked power. Where weak organs were found, I always found weak nerves. Not the nerves commonly thought of, but the vital organs' nerves, the inside —the invisible nerves.

This was a revelation.

Then my real success began.

Then I combined ingredients that would strengthen, that would vitalize these nerves. That prescription I called a restorative. It is known the world over now as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. After that I did not fail to cure one case in each hundred. In the extremely difficult cases my failures for five years were one in each forty treated. I found cancer incurable. Cancer is for surgery, not medicine.

Then how to get this prescription to sick ones everywhere was my thought. I must announce it in the public press. But, thought I, will they realize the truth of my discovery—the real power of Dr. Shoop's Restorative? Then a way came to me—like an inspiration. "I will offer it to the sick on trial. Then they will know I am sincere."

I wrote a reliable druggist in each city and village in America. They agreed to co-operate with me. Now by any sick one

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

Can be taken on trial. For a full month I will let you use it entirely at my risk.

Send no money. Just write me for the book you need. When I send it I will tell you of a druggist near by who will permit the month's trial.

Use the Restorative a month. Then decide. If you say to the druggist, "It did not help me," that will relieve you of any expense whatever. He will bill the cost to me.

This is my way of clearing your mind of all doubts as to what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do.

No matter how prejudiced, you cannot dispute this absolute security I offer. You cannot resist an offer like this if you are at all sick.

If you have a weakness, write me.

If you can't do things like you used to do them, tell me about it.

Write in confidence. As a physician I will tell you a way to help. Get my book now—to-day.

Killed By Lumber.

Ottawa, May 4.—Ambrose Barrot, aged 10 years, of Redpath street, was killed yesterday by a lumber pile falling on him in the lumber yard of the W. C. Edwards Co. With a little boy named Charlie Harris, he was sitting beside the pile, which was slanting, and evidently the upset was caused by snow and frost leaving the ground.

Killed 190 Atchinese.

Amsterdam, May 4.—A despatch to The Handelsblad from Batavia, Java, says that a Dutch column captured the Atchinese position at Tjantoe, after a desperate fight, in which 190 Atchinese were killed. The Dutch casualties were seven men killed and five officers and 38 men wounded.

Dead Between Plow Handles.

Mitchell, May 4.—Thos. McPherson of Logan, aged 50 years, dropped dead on Monday while plowing. He was found with the lines around his shoulders, and standing against the plow. It is supposed that death was by heart failure.

THE TREE TOAD.

Welcome little tree toad,
  Sing with might and main,
Coming parching tongues to bless,
  Prophet of the rain.

Sweetest liquid warbler,
  Swiftly trills the strain;
Denizen of tree-top,
  Prophet of the rain.

Double-quick the chatter,
  Faster the refrain;
Clouds pour down to answer,
  Purest prayer for rain.

—J. T. Miller.

Do Animals Dream?

Much research and investigation warrant the assertion that man is not the only animal subject to dreams. Horses neigh and rear upon their hind feet while fast asleep; dogs bark and growl and in many other ways exhibit all their characteristic passions. It is highly probable that at such times the remembrance of the chase or of a combat is passing through the dogs' minds. Besides the above signs of fleeting pain, anger and excitement these noble creatures often manifest signs of kindness, playfulness and of almost every other passion. Ruminant animals, such as the sheep and the cow, are believed to be less affected with dreams than those of higher passions which spend their waking hours in scenes of greater excitement.

Philosophers and investigators tell us that if we trace the dream faculty still lower in the scale of animal life we shall probably find that the same phenomena exist, and judging from analogy it is only reasonable to reckon dreaming as one of the universal laws—almost as universal as sleep itself.

Programmes Worth Fortunes.

London playgoers often grumble at the mere slips of paper, sometimes sold for as much as sixpence, that constitute the programmes of most of the theaters in the great city; but, from the theatrical speculator's point of view, these same printed sheets form a most valuable asset. It is estimated that £30,000 worth of advertisements alone appear every year on these programmes and that a gross profit of quite £50,000 a year is made out of the aggregate lot of programmes. In many cases sums of from £1,000 to £3,000 are paid for the right to farm out the programmes. —London Globe.

The English Husband.

A poor woman in a London parish was consulting me in connection with her domestic troubles, and there was some doubt as to whether her marriage was a legal one, inasmuch as her "husband" (as she had just discovered) appeared to have a wife living from whom he had separated. The woman's pathetic inquiry was, "If he is not my husband, what right has he to knock me about?"—A Clergyman in London Spectator.

Nature's Sweet Restorer.

Blessings on him who invented sleep, the mantle that covers all human thoughts, the food that appeases hunger, the drink that quenches thirst, the fire that warms, the cold that moderates heat and, lastly, the general coin that purchases all things, the balance and weight that equals the shepherd with the king and the simple with the wise.—Cervantes.

A Blemish.

Mrs. Newrich (in art store)—I'd take this picture, but some person has been scribbling on it. Salesman—But, madam, that is the artist's signature. Mrs. Newrich—Well, he's got his nerve. Still, I guess you could scratch it out, couldn't you?

Voices.

All long known objects, even a mere window fastening or a particular door latch, have sounds which are a sort of recognized voice to us—a voice that will thrill and awaken when it has been used to touch deep lying fibers.

Not Compulsory.

"Tell me, colonel," asked the beginner in politics, addressing the gray haired statesman, "can a politician be honest?"

"I suppose so, my boy," replied the veteran, "but—ah!—it isn't necessary."

AFTER DEATH.

Poem Which Marks the Highest Achievement of Sir Edwin Arnold.

He who died at Azan sends
This to comfort faithful friends—
Faithful friends! It lies, I know,
Pale and white and cold as snow;
And ye say, "Abdullah's dead!"
Weeping at my feet and head.
I can see your falling tears,
I can hear your cries and prayers,
Yet I smile and whisper this:
"I am not that thing you kiss;
Cease your tears and let it lie;
It was mine, it is not I."

Sweet friends! what the women lave
For its last bed in the grave
Is a tent which I am quitting,
Is a garment no more fitting,
Is a cage from which at last
Like a hawk my soul hath passed.
Love the inmate, not the room;
The wearer, not the garb; the plume
Of the falcon, not the bars
Which kept him from the splendid stars.

Loving friends! be wise, and dry
Straightway every weeping eye.
What ye lift upon the bier
Is not worth a wistful tear.
'Tis an empty seashell, one
Out of which the pearl is gone.

The shell is broken, it lies there;
The pearl, the all, the soul, is here.
'Tis an earthen jar whose lid
Allah sealed, the while it hid
That treasure of his treasury,
A mind which loved him; let it lie!
Let the shard be earth's once more,
Since the gold shines in his store!
Allah Mu'hid, Allah most good!
Now thy grace is understood.

Now the long, long darkness ends,
Yet ye wail, my foolish friends,
While the man whom ye call "dead,"
In unbroken bliss instead
Lives, and loves you; lost, 'tis true
By any light that shines for you;
But in light ye cannot see
Of unfulfilled felicity,
And enlarging Paradise,
Lives the life that never dies.

Farewell, friends! Yet not farewell;
Where I am ye, too, shall dwell.
I am gone before your face
A heart-beat's time, a grey ant's pace
When ye come where I have stepped,
Ye will marvel why ye wept;
Ye will know, by true love taught,
That here is all, and there is naught.

Weep awhile, if ye are fain—
Sunshine still must follow rain!
Only not at death, for death—
Now I see—is that first breath
Which our souls draw when we enter
Life, that is of all life centre.

Know ye Allah's law is love,
Viewed from Allah's throne above;
Be ye firm of trust, and come
Faithful onward to your home!
'La Allah illa Allah! Yea, Mu'hid! Restorer! Sovereign!" Say!

He who died at Azan gave
This to those that made his grave.

Marlborough as Lord Lieutenant.

It is becoming notorious how desperately eager the Duke of Marlborough is to obtain the expensive post of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. It would be expensive, indeed, if he were to emulate his predecessors. Lord Cadogan and Lord Dudley each have spent far more than one hundred thousand out of their private funds over public functions and entertainments.

A reason against the success of the Duke of Marlborough as Lord Lieutenant—apart from the fact that he is a very poor speaker—is that the Duchess is not very able to act as a good hostess on a large scale. Personally, she is very kind, and most anxious to do all she can for her guests, but she has never sought London society on a broad basis, preferring her own American acquaintances and the personal friends of her husband. Unfortunately, a couple of years ago, she became afflicted with deafness, and has twice been to Vienna to undergo the painful treatment which partially consists in putting instruments into the ears to meet others put up the nostrils. Although she now hears an ordinary conversation, directly there is a buzz of talk she becomes quite unable to discern what is said. The regularity of a Dublin Court would also not suit her, for she has never acquired the repose of the British country aristocracy, and after having been two or three days in a place, loves to be off by train somewhere else.

Immortelles.

The manufacture of immortelle wreaths in Paris occupies at least 1,500 persons. The immortelles are gathered about the beginning of October and come chiefly from the arid hills in the middle and south of France. They are brought to the markets in their natural condition, and the yellow blossoms are dyed green, red and white and woven into wreaths by special workmen in readiness for All Saints' and All Souls' days, when all good Parisians visit their relatives' graves. On these "fetes des morts" the gates of the cemeteries are beset with crowds of dealers in immortelle wreaths, wire crosses and bead crowns. At Pere la Chaise alone more than 200,000 persons are calculated to visit the cemetery, and the sale of immortelle wreaths varies from 20,000 to 25,000.—Golden Penny.

Oddly Marked Tombstone.

In an old graveyard in Maine the monument to the founder of a distinguished family is marked with the outline of a human leg. It is formed by black streaks in the granite running through the stone, for at the back there is another leg, but much smaller in dimensions. Nobody saw this blemish when the stone was set up. Not until years had passed did any one notice it. People concluded that the stonecutters, not wishing to go to the expense of quarrying out another block, so hid the leg with cement and stone dust that the actions of the storms of a dozen winters were necessary to expose the strangely formed disfigurement.

The Old English Coffee Houses.

In 1657, we are told, the first coffee house had been prosecuted as a nuisance. In 1708 there were 3,000 coffee houses, and each coffee house had its habitual circle. There were coffee houses frequented by merchants and stockjobbers carrying on the game which suggested the new nicknames bulls and bears, and coffee houses where the talk was Whig and Tory, of the last election and change of ministry, and literary resorts such as the Grecian, where, as we are told, a fatal duel was provoked by a dispute over a Greek accent, in which, let us hope, it was the worst scholar who was killed, and Wills', where Pope as a boy went to look reverently at Dryden, and Buttons', where at a later period Addison met his little senate. Addison, according to Pope, spent five or six hours a day lounging at Buttons', while Pope found the practice and the consequent consumption of wine too much for his health. Thackeray notices how the club and coffee house "boozing shortened the lives and enlarged the waistcoats of the men of those days."—"English Literature and Society In the Eighteenth Century."

Dorothy Dodd
TRADE MARK

The "Style of a 'Dorothy Dodd.'"

Let us assume that your shoes fit you. Now what next? What is most important? Unquestionably "Style!" Demand that a shoe shall posses "Style!? If it has style and little else you want it; if it has not style but everything else, you don't want it!

The "STYLE OF A 'DOROTHY DODD'" is unique.

It cannot be duplicated by any other maker, because the "Dorothy Dodd" is a totally different construction from any other ladies' shoe made. It holds the foot firmly at the waist (that's the instep), prevents the toes from slipping forward, and thus gives a correct poise in walking. Yet it makes the foot look nearly a whole size smaller. That's curious and you won't believe it till you see it.

Oxfords $3.00.
Boots $3.75.

Sincerely Yours,
DOROTHY DODD.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Our good friend Mr. William Johnson is in Rome to-day, and of course he is doing as the Romans do.

This kind of weather ought to hasten the strawberries.

Coal $6.50 a ton! They couldn't give it away this weather.

We wonder how many cows that country girl who appeared in the opera house last night could milk in an hour.

Ever since some of the Aldermen went over to Zwick's island last fall and tasted that water you can't get them to drink anything else 'tis said.

The City Treasurer, we see, acknowledges that he did Mr. Phillips an injustice, but what a pity that a city official should have been so indiscreet as to rush into print in an attempt to throw discredit on the name of a reputable citizen of Belleville! The Council might well pass a vote of censure on this ultra-eager person for what a leading resident of this city calls "his insufferable impertinence."

It is to be hoped that the City Treasurer will not present a bill to the Council for "extra work" done in thus going out of his way to discredit the agent of heirs whose ancestors helped to found Belleville over a hundred years ago, viz., Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Bleecker.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie's New York assessment is placed at $385,000,000. Move lively there, Andy, and hand out some more libraries, or you'll miss the poorhouse, after all.

NO DIFFERENCE.

No distinction is made as to the kind of Piles that Hem-Roid cures.

The names Internal, External, Bleeding, Blind, Itching, Suppurating, etc., are simply names of the different stages through which every case will pass if it continues long enough.

Piles are caused by congestion or stagnation of blood in the lower bowel, and it takes an internal remedy to remove the cause.

Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid is a tablet taken internally.

It is a permanent cure and no case of Piles has ever been found it failed to cure.

Meet Me at the Inside Inn.

Never Before Did a Great World's Fair Have a Big Hotel Inside the Grounds.

RATES WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

"Meet me at the Inside Inn." That will be the expression most frequently heard at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. This hotel is an immense structure, 400 feet wide and 800 feet long, with 2,257 sleeping rooms and a dining room seating 2,500 persons. The hotel is inside the Exposition grounds, and operated under the supervision of the Exposition management. It is well appointed and furnished in modern up-to-date style, and will be the center of social affairs in the way of dinners and family reunions inside the grounds.

This hotel is in the southeast portion of the grounds, not far from the Plateau of States, and to the north a short distance are the famous Cascade Gardens, Festival Hall and Connade of States, which form a part of the main picture of the Exposition. Street Railways running by the door go direct to the Union Railway station downtown, and the Intramural Road, inside the grounds, carried guests from the hotel entrance to all points of interest. Here is a cool retreat, where persons can find rest, enjoyment and quietude away from the noise and crush of the crowds along the avenues of the Exposition grounds. Sightseeing at a large Exposition is the most tiresome pleasure, because the mind is busily engaged and finds diversion by constantly changing scenes, while the body is becoming weary and the visitor does not realize how tired he is until he stops to rest. The place to rest is the Inside Inn. The hotel rates cover the daily admission fee to the grounds, and the registered guest at this hotel is free from the annoyance of pushing through the crowds at the gates. There are 500 rooms at $1.50 per person, 500 at $2.00, 500 at $2.50.

The Inside Inn will long be remembered as a distinctive feature of the largest Universal Fair ever held in the world—a fair representing a total cost of $50,000,000 and as large in size as the Columbian, the Pan-American and the Paris fairs combined.

Der German Cobbler

Mr. Voglestein Drops In to Relate More of His Woes

DER odder day, vhen I vhas fixing oop der heels of some shoes for an undertaker, so dot he can vhalk mit slow und solemn steps, Mr. Voglestein comes in und sits down und don't say nottings. I don't say nottings, too, und it vhas ten minutes pefore he calls out:

"Hans, vhas I some horses or oxen, dot you don't spoke to me?"

"But you don't spoke to me," I says.

"Dot vhas deeferent. I vhas abused all der time. It vhas so dot I can't vhalk around mitout somepody comes some tricks on me. Do you know vhat happened to me yesterday?"

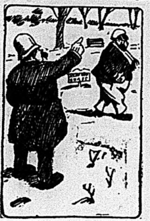
"Vhell, I waits on der corner to see Mr. Kleinfeldt about some cabbages.



"KEEP OFF DER GRASS! DON'T YOU SEE DOT SIGN?"

Vhile I waits I lean oop against der wall. By und by a policeman comes along und yells at me:

"'Don't you see dot sign of paint oop dere?'

"'I do,' I says.

"'Den how vhas you sooch a fool ash to lean oop against der wall? Your back vhas all oafer paint. If you can't read you ought to smell.'

"'But see here,' I says to dot policeman, 'gife a man a chance. Dot sign says paint. Vhas it green, white or black paint? Vhas it paint on der wall or on der roof? If it vhas paint on der wall den dot man should put oop a sign dot tells me so. I shall sue him for $10 damages to my coat.'

"Dot officer looks at me two minutes," says Mr. Vogelstein, "und den he says I should go home und sandpaper my head. How vhas it, Hans? Why should I rub my hair off mit sandpaper? Does dot take der paint off my coat? Speak oop und tell me, und don't sit here like some cabbage heads."

"I can't tell how he vhas," I says.

"Vhell, you vhas some shackass, I guess. Two days ago I take a walk in der park to smoke my pipe und think. I walk vhere I please, und pooty soon a policeman comes along und yells at me:

"'Keep off der grass! Don't you see dot sign?'

"'But I don't be on der grass,' I says, 'I vhas on der snow.'

"'Vhell, keep off der snow.'

"'But vhere vhas der sign?'

"'It vhas here,' he says, und he takes me py der collar und throws me ten feet avhay und says I don't know ash mooch ash a goat. Vhas dot right, Hans? Vhas dot good society to fling me around like dot? If I don't see no sign of 'Keep Off der Snow' can't I vhalk on him? By dunder, I vhas mad, und if you don't answer me queek I shall smash out der windows of dis shop!"

"Why you vhalk in dot park?" I says.

"Pecause I like to smoke und think."

"Vhy don't you sit on der fence?"

"Pecause I won't do it."

Mr. Voglestein keeps quiet for fife minutes vhile he shakes his head und scowls at der wall, und den he says:

"Maype I sue a man for $50,000 damages. I vhas going oop Green avenue der odder day vhen I comes to an auction place. I drop in to see how she vhas, und dot auctioneer vhas holding oop a gold watch to sell. I don't know him, but I guess he knows me, for he nods his head to me und says ten dollar. I nod my head to him, und he says it vhas 'leven dollar. He nods und I nod, und so it goes for fife minutes, und den he says dot watch vhas sold to me for nineteen dollar. I says it can't be, und he says it can, und finally he tells a man to put me out und keep me avhay. All der peoples laugh und clap der hands, und I vhas so ashamed ash neffer vhas. Hans, can't I sue dot man? Can't I make him pay big damages? If he don't know me should he nod his head to me? Speak oop und tell me dot before I do some damages."

"You don't know some beans," I says.

"You vhas a liar!"

We don't speak again for a long time. If I look at Mr. Voglestein his hair stand oop; if he looks at me I vhas red in der face. He gets tired out py und py und says:

"Py golly, but I pelief I shall haf a barber arrested. I vhas going along der street, und I see a sign on a barber shop dot reads, 'Shave For 5 Cents.' Dot looks like some bargains, und I go in und sit down on der chair. Dot barber shaves my chin und puts avhay his razor und says he vhas done.

"'How vhas it?' I says.

"'It vhas all serene,' he says.

"'But you only shave my chin.'

"Do you see how she vhas, Hans? It vhas shave for fife cent. She don't say how mooch shave or how little, und I haf to pay dot feller 10 cent more pefore he vhill shave my cheeks. Dunder und blitzen, but do you pelief I vhill stand dot? Don't you pelief I vhill go to ash many ash six courts to get justice? Dot vhas conspiracy, und dot barber can be sent to jail for fife years. What you think, eh?"

"Maype you vhas drunk," I says.

"Und maype you vhas a fool."

We don't speak again, like it vhas pefore, und I pelief Mr. Voglestein vhill get discouraged und go out. It vhas not so, howeffer. He vaits a long time und den says:

"One day last week I vhas valking out, und I see a stuffed bear in der vindow of a store. I goes in und says to der man:

"'How mooch vhas it for a cord of wood?'

"'Vhat you mean?' he says.

"'I like to buy a cord of wood.'

"'Den you must go py some woodyard.'

"'But I pelief dis vhas some woodyard.'

"'How you pelief dot? Can't you see a bear in der vindow, und vhasn't a bear der sign of a fur store?'

"'Maype he vhas, but ash a bear lives in der woods he vhas also der sign of some woodyards.'

"Den dot man calls me a fool, und says I shall go home und soak my head und drink catnip tea, und vhen I don't mofe along ash queek ash he wants he grabs me py der back und runs me out of his place. Hans, don't I be right about der bear?"

"I can't tell."

"If you see a bear don't you think of woodyards?"

"I neffer see no bears."

"Vhy should I soak my head?"

"I dunno."

"Vhy should I drink catnip tea?"

"I gif it oop."

"Hans," he says ash he stands oop, "vhas you der biggest dunder headed Dootchmans in all America?"

"I pelief I vhas," I says.

"Den I shall go home, und you can go py Texas und Halifax!"

Reassuring.

"I was spending a few days in Strathaven, Scotland," said Robert B. Mantell recently. "At the inn where I was stopping lived an old couple who were preparing to visit the United States. Naturally enough, they questioned me at some length about the trip, and the old gentleman was anxious to know if it was very dangerous to cross the ocean. I assured him that it was not at all hazardous, although it was often very rough. His sister listened intently and then remarked, with a sigh of contentment, 'Aweel, aweel, it's been a gay dry summer, and I think the sea'll no be vera deep.'"—London News.

A Modern Improvement.

One of the fresh air fund children who had been staying on a farm near Chebanse, Ill., was amazed at the modern improvements he discovered there.

His attention was attracted by a swiftly whirling windmill, beneath which a number of pigs were wallowing in the mud.

A Clever Ruse.

"You know how father insists upon talking all the time whenever Mr. Skates comes to call on me?"

"Yes."

"Well, we fixed him last night, all right. We got him to read the Russian and Japanese names in the war dispatches, and his jaw was soon so sore that he couldn't talk above a whisper."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Railroad Accident.

Johnny had a train and engine
That would steam across the floor
With a clatter, shriek and whistle
And a roar.

Many cargoes did they carry
Round the perils of the bend.
Now a misplaced switch has sent them
To their end.

For one day they made a journey
While his father stormed in vain,
And the switch was used on Johnny,
Not the train.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

"Well, yes, sir, I have heard it," he replies.

"Let me have it, please," remarks Mynheer Joe, taking out his note book. "A man is bound to feel interest in the party who will come into a million or not, according to his whim. If you have seen this party— By the way, is she a spinster or a married woman?"

"The former, by all means," with a grin that Mynheer Joe takes note of and presumes is caused by the fact that the party referred to is an antiquated old maid, with queer little curls, blue glasses and a pet cat—oh, he can see her in imagination, just as he pictured the Hon. Demosthenes Tanner—and as truly.

"I trust she'll make good use of the money if through my failure to appear it falls to her," pursues Joe, thoughtfully.

"No doubt of that, sir, no doubt of that," says the other, with something of a chuckle. "According to my idea of thinking that money is bound to go the same way whether you get it or the other."

"That's an enigma. Mr. Grimes, explain."

"Well, you see, she's uncommonly fond of travel—has been up Mount Blane, pastly scaled the Matterhorn, cruised along the whole coast of Algiers, and has any number of trips in contemplation which will consume money and add to the knowledge of geographers. Bless you, sir, she's got a medal already from the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain in connection with certain features concerning some daring work she did in the Alps."

"Phew! A regular female discoverer. An adventurer in petticoats. I've met a number of such. They're all alike. And while admiring their grit in daring perils in unknown lands, I am free to confess, Mr. Grimes, that I was never struck with their personal charms. It is a business that only the most determined characters take to—women who partake more of the man in their nature. You've seen 'em often."

Mr. Grimes is shaking all over with emotion. He coughs, as though it is a little tobacco smoke that has gotten into his windpipe and choked him.

"Of course, my dear fellow. But you do wrong to condemn the whole class. I've always found there were exceptions to every rule."

"Come, don't think I'm throwing out innuendoes against female travelers. I've met several wonderful women who accompanied their husbands into danger and threatening death. I'm only stating a fact that all with whom I am acquainted are strong characters, with plain, resolute features. I presume the life they lead makes them look so manish."

"Yet, they, too, may have been lovely once," murmurs the pseudo king.

"The name, Mr. Grimes—the name? Perhaps I may have met the lady somewhere."

"And I am sure of it. It is now less than half an hour since you knocked her dear old governor out in one round."

Mynheer Joe drops book and pencil and springs to his feet as if made the recipient of a galvanic shock from one of the electric eels he is so fond of telling about.

"Why, man, you don't mean to tell me that it is Molly Tanner?" he bursts out with, whereupon his companion begs him to remember that others are not far away, and one scene of an evening is quite enough.

By this time Mynheer Joe, the erstwhile cool messenger from Khartoom, has picked up his book and seats himself close beside Mr. Grimes, upon whose arm he fastens a clutch, while with a voice full of eagerness he asks:

"Tell me the exact truth, my friend. There is no reason for concealment between us. You say Molly Tanner will come in for that million if I fail to turn up?"

"That is the whole of it, my dear Joe."

"Of course she knows the nature of the will?"

"Word for word."

"I am puzzled."

"How so."

"She met me, heard my name, and yet did not recognize me as the party who could step between her and this fortune."

"Bah! You forget something. You assumed your uncle's name, which, it seems, for reasons best known to yourself, you have thrown off again."

"True, sir."

"The document speaks of Joseph M. Carringford as the coming man. How was she to know Mynheer Joe as that party?"

"Ah! You are right, Mr. Grimes, you are right!"

"This young woman, as I told you, is an enthusiast in the work of seeing unknown countries, climbing mountains that have never been scaled, and, in fact, accomplishing deeds that you men love so dearly."

"I remember she spoke of being fond of travel," he mutters thoughtfully. This surprise has taken his breath away, and for the time being Mynheer Joe is not himself.

"Just at present she has an object in her travel beyond mere adventure or sight-seeing. She is searching for a man."

"Ah!"

"By name, Joseph M. Carringford."

"On deck. What will she do when she finds this same personage?"

"Endeavor to send him home to Philadelphia in time to secure his inheritance. She believes the old man's will is unjust, and desires to set matters right. No one looks for the missing Carringford more earnestly than this girl who would profit most by his absence."

"Then Molly Tanner is one in a thousand. I knew I could not be mistaken in her face. Here is another peculiar tie that draws us together. Make up your mind, Mr. Grimes," as he tosses his cigar away and jumps to his feet. "I go to India from here, and the chance is now one in a thousand that I turn up in Quakerdom in time to secure the conditions of the will."

Mr. Grimes does not rise, but puffs away at his Havana, brought across the water, while he looks after Mynheer Joe's retreating form.

"Well," he says, with a chuckle, "two and two make four. The magnet draws—he goes to meet her. I may be beaten in one sense, but there are more ways of accomplishing a thing than enter into your philosophy, Horatio. Kismet! It is indeed fate!"

CHAPTER VIII.

Mynheer Joe enters the nearest room and finds a few of the guests scattered about. His eye seeks one form alone—and finds it not. It is uncertain how Molly will receive him, as he cannot tell whether her father will relate the circumstances of the affair to her or not.

Conscious that a pair of eyes have fastened upon him, he looks across the room to see the small man whom Grimes designated as the wily baron, the secret emissary of the Russian government, smiling and nodding in a condescending way that is irritating, to say the least.

Just then Mynheer Joe has a peculiar sensation sweep over him; he is conscious of a deep dislike toward this man. He does not attempt to explain the feeling. Perhaps it is rivalry that brings these two together—a striving after the smiles of a beautiful girl.

Molly Tanner brushes past the baron at this moment, having been able to leave her parent, who is not so badly injured in any way. The Russian puts out a hand to stay her passage, but she heeds him not, advancing straight as the home flight of a bee for the spot where the explorer stands. In another moment she is at his side.

"How is your father?" he manages to ask, feeling like a hypocrite; and, but for the fact of his face being already tanned, the blood mounting upward would betray him.

"He feels no effect from his fall, but is full of deep anger," Molly replies.

"Against—the man who struck him?"

"No, singularly enough he doesn't seem to feel that way toward the wretch. His anger is wholly directed against the man who threw the banana-skin upon the flags on which he slipped at the time he was struck."

"Oh!" says Joe, with a gurgling smile, as he grasps the defeated gladiator's ruse to excuse his downfall. "Singular how accidents will happen. I've had strange things occur to me at times. But, Miss Molly, how is it with you? If your father does not bear malice toward the unlucky offender who was so rash as to measure strength with him, do you forgive him?"

"Not I—the wretch. It was my dear old governor he struck. If I had been present I'm afraid I might have done something desperate."

And her flashing eyes give Joe an idea that this is no mere idle threat on her part.

He shrugs his shoulders and continues:

"I believe it was a fair, stand-up business. But we will not discuss it further, Miss Molly."

"Pardon me, but—" she stammers.

"What can I do for you?" seeing she is about to ask some favor at which she hesitates.

"I don't know why I speak to you in this way, since I have known you for so short a time. I have numerous friends here—acquaintances, I should call them—but you saved my life, and, somehow I feel that I can say to you what I should hesitate to speak to others."

"Yes," he utters encouragingly, feeling deeply flattered by her words, and yet conscious of an uneasy sensation, for the baron is glaring at him from across the room, and there is something baleful in that diplomat's frown.

"Will you help me?" she asks bluntly.

"I promise you to the best of my ability," he replies without a second thought.

"A thousand thanks. I knew I could depend upon you," she murmurs.

Mynheer Joe does not dream the nature of the request she is about to make.

"What can I do for you?" he finally asks. "Do not hesitate. Speak out."

"You may think me vindictive, perhaps."

"Never!"

"But when I think of the dear old governor being so badly used, my blood fairly boils."

"Ah!"

"Do you think you could find the wretch who beat my governor, Mynheer Joe?"

"I am sure of it," stoutly.

"Will you do this—for me?"

"Assuredly."

"And bring him before me?"

"I will drag him there by the neck and the heels, though he has the strength of a Sampson."

This wonderful speech receives its reward, of course, in the shape of a sweet smile; but it is still too early to tell what the designs of the explorer may be.

"You are very kind, Mynheer Joe. When this fellow is before me, I am in doubt what to do—whether to give him a piece of my mind or use a whip on him, as I have read before of energetic women doing. In some way I must show him that he cannot beat my dear governor with impunity."

Joe almost smiles as he thinks of the ferocious and warlike Tanner having need of such a defender as this. But the situation is so extremely delicate and desperate that he has no heart to be amused at its ridiculous side.

"Will you leave the decision with me?" he asks, having a bold idea.

"With pleasure," she replies.

"And abide by the result?"

"Yes, indeed. It will take a load off my mind to have you decide my course."

"Then, if I were you, I would not think of doing anything with a whip. In the first place, it will get your name in the papers—news-gatherers are so ready to seize upon a sensation and make the most of it. Thus you would find people turning to look at you in the street, not because you had done anything noble, but because you had horsewhipped a man who for some reason was powerless to resist."

"Say no more; I really did not dream of it."

"Besides," he goes on quietly, "I have an idea the poor devil will suffer worse at words of reproach from your lips than he would under the tortures of El Mahdi."

"It shall be as you say, Mynheer Joe, only I must give him to understand that the next similar offence—"

"Yes—the next similar offence—"

"Will not only be followed by dis-

PUSHING AHEAD....

Everyday finds us steadily advancing and requiring more and more men to do our work.

And we get the workmen—workmen of the best type, too. Just the kind you want to do your work, that's the style of men we are looking for.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

USEFUL REMNANTS.

Short Lengths of Materials Useful For Waists and Petticoats.

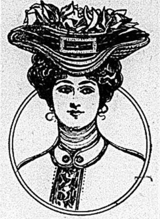
When a shirt waist is worn with a black, blue or brown skirt have a tie of the same color as the skirt and a belt of the same color also.

All discord in dress is to be avoided, and a costume all in one shade gains immeasurably in style.

For fancy waists net is a good substitute for lace, and it requires only a soft china silk lining. It is trimmed with shirred and plain straight insertions of lace and embroidered motifs.

At this time of the year it is possible to obtain pretty lengths of grenadine. In black and colors these are charming for tea gowns and house dresses, worn with broad sash belts.

Lengths of china or brocaded silks are not to be despised, for they make excellent petticoats in light colors for evening and in darker tones for day wear. Several lengths of brocade can form one petticoat. The top can be of one remnant, the flounce of another and the lining of the flounce a third. It is impossible to undervalue the importance of the full ruffled petticoat now that so many gowns are made with the skirts unlined.



A NEW STRAW HAT.

The insatiable demand for "new" colors is one of the most extraordinary phases of the season, and for evening dresses the manufacturers are continuing to emphasize the proverb that one cannot have too much of a good thing. As regards the satins and velvets for evening wear they are more subdued than in the early part of the season, and there is less "freshness" about them, as though the color artist had lost the exuberance of early days and was returning to more somber schemes. The blues have a slightly gray tinge, the same "toning down" that is the characteristic of the cornflower, while the pink has taken to itself a faintly brownish shade, and silvery grays, "dried pea" green, golden brown, champagne and the softest "old ivories" and willow green are being revived. There is a fascination about these rare old tints that is almost indescribable, and, of course, they lend themselves beautifully to the making of the present style of gown.

The illustration shows a hat of straw trimmed with a tulle scarf. A mass of roses is placed at the back, and the hat is tilted over the face.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affliction from a "NEGLECTED COLD, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedella."

Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

Always on Hand.—Mr. Thomas H. Porter, Lower Ireland, P.Q., writes: "My son, 18 months old, had croup so bad that nothing gave him relief until a neighbor brought me some of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which I gave him, and in six hours he was cured. It is the best medicine I ever used, and I would not be without a bottle of it in my house."

Messrs. Northrop & Lyman Co. are the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is now being sold in immense quantities throughout the Dominion. It is welcomed by the suffering invalid everywhere with emotions of delight, because it banishes pain and gives instant relief. This valuable specific for almost "every ill that flesh is heir to," is valued by the sufferer as more precious than gold. It is the elixir of life to many a wasted frame. To the farmer it is indispensable, and it should be in every house.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

A Wonderful Cure. — Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore, but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle, and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

Never is time more precious than when some member of the family is attacked by colic, dysentery or any bowel trouble. The doctor is distant.

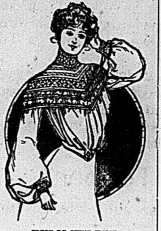
THE WORLD OF DRESS.

Up to Date Hints For the Smartly Gowned Woman.

Some very smart coat and skirt costumes intended for dressy wear have the skirt of kilted cloth, while the bolero is of cloth embroidery edged with fur.

The most fashionable fur scarf and one which will be worn with dresses late in the spring is of ermine folded over like a shawl, with long, pointed ends trimmed with lace. This will be copied later on in cloth to match the gown with which it is worn.



CREPE DE CHINE WAIST.

The hair is either worn very high or very low. The latest mode is to take it straight up at the sides, gathering it high on the top with a large velvet bow, chou or flower placed at the side.

Fancy trimmings of every kind add to the cost of gowns and tailor mades, but also add immensely to their artistic worth. Jeweled buttons and buckles are a feature of every smart costume, while handsome fringe jeweled tassels and huge lace puffs are seen on nearly all the up to date outer garments.

Flowered mousseline de soie and muslin in rather large patterns will make delightfully quaint gowns well adapted to the early Victorian modes which are being revived.

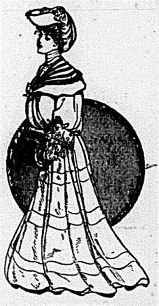
The cut shows a waist of white crepe de chine having a wide caplike yoke composed of shirrings, cordings and lace work. JUDIC CHOLLET.

NEW COSTUMES.

Boleros Worn More Than Ever—Figured Silks and Muslins.

The sleeveless bolero appears on many elaborate evening gowns, and this has simply a little extension cap on the shoulder.

An up to date reception dress seen recently had the skirt trimmed with three flounces, each bordered with black velvet. It had also an accordion plaited bodice strapped with velvet. Over this was worn a bolero of velvet embroidered with black chantilly and appliqued velvet flowers, with a little inner cravat of white muslin and lace.



A SMART RED GOWN.

Flowered silks are to be extremely fashionable this spring, and so are the sprigged muslins of our grandmother's day. These flowered materials are very pretty trimmed with ruchings of taffeta to match the color of the figurings.

Fichus will be seen largely on summer gowns, and indeed they are even now being revived in a particularly full and ornate style on evening frocks.

Skirts require more material and are becoming more fussy all the time, so that only the lightest materials make up prettily in the new styles.

From Paris comes word that accordion plaiting in all its glory is being revived by the best dressed women.

Some of the buckles worn at the back of the wide boned girdles are very stunning and cost quite a good deal. The girl who has to economize, however, can obtain a very pretty effect at the back of her wide girdle by sewing three steel buttons on either side of the center of the back, so that they almost join at the bottom in a V shaped effect, leaving a distance of about two or three inches between the top buttons.

The illustration shows a deep red gown. The skirt is very full and is trimmed with wide tucks. A hoodlike effect is the principal feature of the bodice. This is trimmed with net and ribbon. JUDIC CHOLLET.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"A COUNTRY GIRL."

The manager of the opera house certainly has no reason to complain of the patronage given the above high-priced attraction last night, for it is doubtful if the opera house ever held a larger audience, looking at it from the point of box office receipts. Belleville theatre-goers evidently know and appreciate a good thing. "A Country Girl" came heralded as one of the most successful musical comedies of the day, and so far as gorgeous costumes, splendid scenery, tuneful lyrics and excellent, well-balanced choruses were concerned, lived up to its advance notices. The average musical comedy has very little plot. "A Country Girl" is just like its predecessors in that respect. An English knight, one of the "nouveau riche," wants to get his comic son, Douglas, into Parliament, and to obtain that end parts with his money like rich fathers always do—in plays. A naval officer, Geoffry Challoner, young, poor and handsome, appears on the scene, and his servant, Barry, a funny man and a [illegible] steers his master to fortune by a series of audacious actions which would land both of them in jail in real life. The naval officer, whose late father had ruined himself in a "tinless tin mine," has come back from the sea to his native Devonshire, and on the passage home becomes acquainted with the Rajah of Bhong and his wife, the latter of whom falls in love with the English naval officer, makes the Rajah follow him to Devonshire, and interferes seriously with the love affair between the latter and his early love, Miss Marjory Joy, the country girl, who has become a great and famous actress in London, but returns to her old home incog. The naval officer is persuaded by his servant to enter the lists and run against Douglas Verity. Electioneering goes on bravely but we never hear how the election turns out. The first act takes place in a beautiful Devonshire scene, showing a harvest field, thatched cottages and rustic beauty galore. The second act showed the "Interior of the Ministry of Fine Arts," in London, and was gorgeous in the extreme. All the characters have gone up to the Metropolis from Devonshire, and are now seen in different characters at a fancy dress ball. The costumes were magnificent. The Indian Princess makes red-hot love to the naval officer, the latter makes love to his real sweetheart, who pretends to be somebody else in order to try his devotion; the funny servant "jollies" everybody, and at last, of course, all ends happily. As actors and actresses, the company was excellent, but the singing of some of the principals might easily have been improved on. This applies to but two of them, however, Marjory Joy and Geoffry Challoner. The former had a rather reedy voice and a most distressing "wobble," the latter defect being also noticeable with the male singer. The singing of Mr. Hallyn Mostyn, as the Rajah of Bhong, was especially enjoyable. Some other members of the cast might improve greatly by imitating his splendid method. Taken altogether, however, "A Country Girl" was "a swell show," as the boys would say. There was plenty of tuneful singing, pretty dancing and harmonious choruses. People who like comic opera—and what seasoned theatre-goer doesn't—must have certainly felt, that they got "their money's worth." There were many really pretty numbers, but especial mention should be made of those by the Rajah, "The Rajah of Bhong," and "The Beautiful Valley of Bhong," both of which were splendidly rendered, the latter containing some catchy topical verses written by our former fellow-citizen, Mr. J. Nevin Doyle, now a member of "A Country Girl" company. The duet and dance by Barry and Sophie, "Two Little Chicks," was "out of sight," but the most popular number of all was probably "Take Your Partner at the Ball," which had a swing to it that those who heard it will not soon forget. Among the females, the honors were carried off by Miss Alice Mallyn, as "Nan," Miss Deyo, as "Sophie," and Miss Genevieve Finley, as the "Princess Mehelaneh of Bhong." The male characters were all good, particularly Clarence Harvey, as "Barry," Hallyn Mostyn, as "The Rajah of Bhong," Harold Vizard, as "Sir Joseph Verity," and Percival Jennings as "Douglas Verity." Richard Chawner, as "Lord Anchester," was an exact replica of Hon. Joseph Chamberlain. It was a splendid make-up.

The audience was treated to a long wait before the performance began. It was a quarter to 9 when the orchestra came out, and nearly 9 o'clock when the curtain went up. Why doesn't the opera house management insist on these travelling companies beginning their performances at 8.15, as is done in all large theatres?

However, it was a delightful evening. "A Country Girl" has come and gone, but it will be some time before we forget the bright dialogue, tuneful music, handsome costumes and splendid scenery she brought with her. A good deal of credit is due Manager Carman for his enterprise in presenting such a sterling attraction to his patrons.

A ROMANTIC PLAY TO-NIGHT.

To-night at the opera house the much-talked-of romantic drama, "When Knighthood Was in Flower" will be presented by a strong company, including the Canadian star, Miss Roselle Knott. This is a "costume" play, one of the kind which always pleases students of history, the scenes being laid in the time of the "good old days," when every gentleman wore a sword and was always ready to fight or make love. The play abounds in incident, and the attraction should draw a crowded house.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

CLAIM THAT PORT ARTHUR CHANNEL HAS BEEN BLOCKED.

Despatch from Tokio Says Vessels Lie in Harbor Entrance—Fight on the Yalu Was One of the Bloodiest in History.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

St. Petersburg, May 4.—It is now plain that not more than 8,000 Russians were actually engaged in the fighting at the Yalu against the Japanese army, of a total strength of between 30,000 and 40,000. The losses on both sides, which are expected to reach 1,000 and possibly 1,200 in the Russian force and twice that number for the Japanese, make it one of the bloodiest fights in history.

London, May 4.—The Central News has a wire from its Rome correspondent stating that a telegram received there from Tokio asserts that the latest attempt to block the channel at Port Arthur harbor was successful. The vessels, says the telegram, lie in the harbor entrance.

THE BELLEVILLE KILTIES' BAND.

MR. GRIFFITH, THE OWNER, DISCUSSES THE ORGANIZATION'S RECORD AND PROSPECTS.

An Intelligencer representative called at the office of the "Kilties'" Band, on Pinnacle St., to-day, and met Mr. Geo. W. Griffith, owner, and Mr. T. P. J. Power, manager of the "Kilties'" Band, that is making Belleville famous the world over. The Kilties closed their eighth tour of America in Washington, D. C., on May 1st. Mr. Griffith and Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Zita Power arrived in Belleville last evening. The tour just closed has been the longest and most successful the Band has ever had. The tour started July 3rd last and all the principal cities from coast to coast and south to the Gulf of Mexico have been visited. The length of the tour was 35,000 miles which is a record-breaker for band tours. Mr. Wm. F. Robinson, conductor of the Band, has received many ovations during the tour and was twice decorated with medals by his friends and admirers.

When asked regarding the future plans of the Kilties, Mr. Griffith stated that the Band will open May 28th for its summer tour. This tour will continue until about August 20th, and is to include the World's Fair, St. Louis. About August 20th the Band will sail for London, where they are booked to open on September 3rd. They will remain abroad for a number of months. It is not decided yet as to whether the Band will continue on around the world or return for a third transcontinental tour of America. It is certain, however, that the Band will supplement its tour of Great Britain by a tour of India, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Japan, China, Honolulu and the Pacific coast. The Band will be largely augmented, will without question be the best band of Canadian musicians ever assembled, and will be the pride of Canada in all that the term signifies. The "Kilties," wherever they have been and wherever they go, will carry "Belleville" upon the escutcheon. Belleville should be proud of its great band, and its citizens could show its appreciation in no better or more substantial way than by arranging for a grand farewell concert about August 19th, and then bid "bon voyage" to our Belleville organization.

Independent Order of Foresters

All arrangements have been completed by the local committee for the big demonstration to be held tomorrow evening in the opera house, at which Hon. Dr. Oronhyatekha, the Supreme Chief Ranger and other high dignitaries of the Order will be in attendance and deliver addresses.

The occasion promises to be one of great interest, and no doubt the opera house will be crowded to its utmost capacity. In consequence of the limited seating capacity the committee have decided to issue cards for admission, which may be obtained on application to the committee room adjoining the Bank of Commerce.

It is expected that Foresters from all over the district, as well as from Toronto, Ottawa, Kingston, Montreal and other prominent places will be in attendance and to do honor to the occasion and show our appreciation of the exertions of the committee in bringing so many strangers here we ask the citizens to fly all their flags and decorate their premises in as elaborate a manner as they conveniently can.

It will be seen also by the advertisement, which appears in another column, that visiting Foresters, as well as local members of the Order, will obtain their badges at the committee room, entitling them and their friends and relatives to admission to the opera house.

WHAT AND WHY.

Why should substitutes for Scott's Emulsion be refused?

Because they do not begin to offer the equivalent of food-value contained in Scott's Emulsion.

Why should special care be taken to avoid so-called wines, cordials and extracts of cod liver oil?

Does not Scott's Emulsion also stimulate the body?

Yes, but it is stimulation through nourishment.

What vital food principle is involved in the action of Scott's Emulsion?

Direct and perfect nourishment without tax on the stomach.

STEAMER TIPPED OVER

Forty-Five Passengers on the Oriole Had a Close Shave.

Muskoka Navigation Company's Boat Careened and Was Run Ashore in the River—It Is Thought That All the Passengers and Crew Were Saved, But the Boat Has Not Been Got Up Yet.

Bracebridge, May 4.—The Muskoka Navigation Company's steamer Oriole careened in the Muskoka River about half a mile from here yesterday afternoon. She had just started on her afternoon trip with about 30 passengers and a heavy cargo of freight for up the lakes. As the boat was turning a bend she was caught on the side by the current, which is very strong at this time of the year, and slowly turned on her side.

Captain Corbett headed the boat for shore and reached it before she capsized. All on board were saved, the crew breaking the windows in the cabin and rescuing all the passengers there.

Due to Strong Current.

The accident was due to the strong current, which caught the boat turning a bend in the river, causing her to rock so violently that a great quantity of water flowed in the sides. This, together with the heavy load the boat carried, rendered her unable to hold her own, and Captain Corbett, seeing this, headed her for shore and immediately turned to getting the ladies off, a number of whom were pulled out through the lower cabin windows.

The boat turned on her side a few minutes later and then the bow struck shore, when about half the passengers jumped off, and the boat swinging around, touched again, when the rest got off.

The boat was rapidly carried down stream, the crew being unable to stop her until she filled with water, when she stopped about a quarter of a mile from where she first turned over.

Another Account.

About 3 o'clock yesterday the steamer Oriole, which runs from Bracebridge to Beaumaris, left here with about forty-five passengers and sixty tons of freight, which was a good load for a far larger steamer.

The captain, Andrew Corbett, of Bracebridge, was asked to make for a landing, but he did not think it necessary. When about a quarter of a mile out from the wharf and as they were rounding a bend in the river the boat keeled over and all the passengers that were on deck managed to climb out on the side of the boat. As she swung she touched shore, when about twenty passengers jumped off and got to shore.

May Be Loss of Life.

The crew were busy getting the other passengers off when the boat swung out into deep water again. The life boat had upset and drifted away, but they managed to get all the passengers out, and off the boat. The captain had not taken the tickets and could not say whether all were saved or not, as they have not got the boat up yet.

The mail bags, which the boat carried, were lost. The Oriole was secured about a mile down the river from where the accident occurred.

The passengers will have to stay in Bracebridge until Wednesday on account of there being no boat to come for them.

TARTE OPPOSES G.T.P.

Clause Under Consideration Tuesday Not Yet Adopted.

An Elevator Accident in the House Causes a Member Who Was Tremendously Shaken to Charge Incapacity Against Elevator Man—A Law That Is Needed—Sir Fred. Borden's New Militia Bill.

Ottawa, May 4.—The petition of the Ottawa Electric Company for power to increase its capital ran the gauntlet of the House yesterday and a committee of the House will have to decide whether it can be presented, the time having expired for the presentation of petitions for private bills.

A petition for a bill to incorporate the Kingston and Dominion Central Railway Company is also on the post entry list.

The Elevator Accident.

An accident yesterday morning to the electric elevator in the House of Commons, by which the Railway Committee room is reached gave a tremendous shaking up to a number of persons who were making the descent, among them R. G. Macpherson of Vancouver City, Jabel Robinson of Elgin, and Thomas Earl of Victoria, B.C.

Mr. Macpherson had not yet recovered from his agitation when the House met in the afternoon, and on the first opportunity called attention to the mishap and demanded an improvement in the elevator service. He blamed such troubles on the incapacity of the operator and maintained that it was just as necessary to have a competent man in charge of a passenger elevator as to have a certificated master in charge of a passenger steamer.

Mr. Sutherland, Minister of Public Works, replied in effect that the elevator was the make of one of the best firms in Canada, but he would have the charge of incompetent management looked into.

This Law Needed.

Answering a renewed complaint by George Taylor of the poor mail service between Brockville and Ottawa, the Postmaster-General laid the blame on the refusal of the railway companies to make connection at Brockville. There was no law to compel them to do so, said Sir William, but it was time we had such a law on the statute books.

The New Militia Bill.

In drafting his new Militia Bill Sir Frederick Borden said he had hoped to follow the principle of the British army reform measure by which the position of commander-in-chief is abolished, and the army is placed under the control of an army council with the Minister in the chair. The bill accordingly provided for the appointment of an office "charged with the military commander inspector of the militia."

Sir Frederick ascertained, however, by the appointment of such an officer, the power of the Minister would be exhausted, and in the case of a rebellion, for instance, the inspector would have to take command, leaving the force without an inspector. He, therefore, proposes to take powers under the new bill to appoint an officer commanding and an inspector, if found advisable, so that there will be two clauses instead of one, dealing with the command on inspection.

By the first the Minister will be empowered to appoint an officer not below the rank of colonel in the militia or British regular army, who, under regulations and subject to the Minister's direction, may be charged with the military command of the militia, such officer to have the rank of major-general of the militia and be paid a rate not exceeding $6,000 per year.

By the second clause the Minister is empowered to appoint an inspector of the militia at the same maximum rate of pay, and of the same military rank, except that the inspector of the militia does not take rank as major-general.

Tarte Against G.T.P.

The discussion of the National Transcontinental Railway Bill was resumed in Committee, Mr. Tarte taking a prominent part in opposing the new contract. The clause under consideration had not been adopted when the House rose at 11.40 p.m.

IN RAILWAY COMMITTEE.

Two Guelph Railway Bills Were Approved—C.P.R. May Build.

Ottawa, May 4.—The Commons Railway Committee yesterday morning approved two bills providing for the construction of railways from Guelph to Goderich. One is the Guelph Junction bill and the other is a bill incorporating the Guelph & Goderich Railway Company was reported by the Committee. Is is for an extension of the Guelph Junction Railway to a point on Lake Huron, near the Town of Goderich.

A clause was inserted in the Guelph Junction bill providing that it could enter into an agreement with the Canadian Pacific Railway or the Goderich Railway Company for the construction of the Goderich extension. A similar clause was inserted in the Goderich bill.

The Walkerton & Lucknow Railway Company's bill was held over at the request of Mr. Tolmie, so that some parties in his constituency might be heard in regard to it. It will come up on Tuesday next.

Bounty For Dog Fish.

Ottawa, May 4.—Peter Morris, Caraquet, N.B., who was a commissioner along with Prof. Prince to enquire into the dog fish pest in the Maritime Provinces, has arrived here to make his report to the department. The opinion of the fishermen is that a bounty of from 1 cent to 3 cents each for dog fish caught by the fishermen should be allowed by the department. Mr. Morris thinks that 1½ cents is about right. The fishermen also suggest that the Government cruisers be supplied with fishing gear so as to aid in exterminating this nuisance. The Gloucester fishing fleet alone lost $40,000 last season by reason of the dog-fish evil.

Premier Ross' Long Day.

Toronto, May 4.—A meeting of the Cabinet was held yesterday and all the Ministers were present except Mr. Dryden. The Premier made a long day of it, sitting in his room from 8.30 till 5.30. As is usual, nothing of importance was announced for publication.

SUDBURY TO TORONTO.

C.P.R.'s New Extension Will Be Pushed At Once.

Ottawa, May 4.—Very little comment is heard in Ottawa upon the announcement that the C.P.R. have started work on a branch line to run direct from Sudbury to Toronto. The records of the departments show that plans and profiles for a branch line from Sudbury to Kleinberg, on the Ontario and Quebec Railway, were filed by the C.P.R. in November, 1902, "as provided for in clause 14 of the C.P.R. charter," the distance is given as 225 miles from Sudbury to Kleinberg, which is 21 miles distant from Toronto, on the Toronto, Orangeville and Owen Sound branch of the C. P. R. The plan shows the proposed Sudbury-Toronto branch to cross French River, near its mouth, and follow generally the east shore of Georgian Bay and run thence south to Kleinberg, passing through Barrie, on the west shore of Lake Simcoe.

Will Be Pushed.

Montreal, May 4.—D. McNicol, vice-president of the C.P.R., declares that there is no bluff about the Toronto-Sudbury road, as it will be pushed through at once, and that no aid, either Federal or Provincial, will be asked!

M'KENNA TOOK IT BACK.

Accused Member of Tariff Commission With Knowing Tariff Changes.

London, May 4.—Quite a little breeze was raised in the House of Commons yesterday, during the discussion of the budget resolution increasing the duties on tobacco and cigars, by Reginald McKenna (Liberal), who insinuated that the Chancellor of the Exchequer had been influenced by Joseph Chamberlain's tariff commission and a certain tobacco merchant who would reap direct benefit from an increased duty on stripped tobacco.

Both the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Austen Chamberlain, and his father, jumped up and heatedly demanded that Mr. McKenna should formulate his charges in express terms.

Mr. McKenna then disclaimed the slightest intention of imputing anything dishonorable to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, but he maintained that it was remarkable that a member of Mr. Chamberlain's commission correctly anticipated what the budget proposals were going to be.

Commission at Port Colborne.

Port Colborne, May 4.—The Government transportation commissioners arrived here at 1 p.m. yesterday, coming up the canal on the tug Alert from Thorold. In the party were: Robert Redford of Montreal, John Bertram of Toronto, their secretaries; J. L. Wellar, superintendent of the Welland Canal; Joseph Battle of Thorold and Dewitt Carter of Port Colborne. The new elevator site and breakwater were inspected. Mr. Coate and Mr. Grant of the Public Works Department, met the commissioners and looked over charts, and expert evidence was given upon the works already completed and the new eastern breakwater and other improvements under contemplation.

Preferential Railway Rates.

London, May 4.—(C. A. P.)—Lord Onslow, President of the Board of Agriculture, has appointed a committee to inquire into the rates charged by the railway companies in Britain for the carriage of foreign and colonial farm, dairy and market-garden produce from the port of shipment to its arrival at the principal urban centres and to report any evidence of preferential treatment.

Jailed For Bigamy.

Woodstock, May 4.—William Henry Smith, alias William Moore, who married Mary Ball in Fredonia, N. Y., in May, 1901, and Miss Emily Cooper, of Woodstock, in this city, in January of this year (the last being his third matrimonial venture), was yesterday morning sentenced to six months in the Central Prison by Judge Finkle for bigamy.

Senator Reid Dead.

Vancouver, B.C., May 4.—Senator James Reid of Cariboo, died here last evening at 8.30 o'clock at the age of 65 years. The deceased was taken dangerously ill soon after reaching Ottawa for the session, and was brought home to the coast in the hope that a change of climate would be of benefit. He, however, had a relapse recently.

Barn Raising Fatality.

Shelburne, May 4.—A serious accident occurred at a barn raising about three miles from here Monday in raising the rafters on the plat, one of them slipped in some way and fell to the ground, striking Henry Besley, jr., on the forehead. He was rendered unconscious. There is no hope for his recovery.

One Strike Settled.

PORT ARTHUR CHANNEL HAS BEEN BLOCKED UP AT LAST.

Two London Correspondents at Tokio Say "Effectually."

Japanese Report Fully Confirmed—Last of Daring Work Done by Daylight, But Casualties Sustained by the Japanese Have Not Yet Been Announced--One Russian Regiment Lost Two Thousand in Yalu Fight.

London, May 5.—The opinion gains ground here that the Japanese have at last effectually blocked Port Arthur. No official Japanese report on the subject has been received, but the Tokio correspondents are very positive regarding the matter.

The Daily Telegraph's correspondent declares that the entrance to Port Arthur "is absolutely sealed," and adds that the Japanese fleet, in effecting its purpose, steamed to the entrance at full speed, and that the naval officers, who made the two previous attempts, begged permission to carry out the next attack by daylight, that being easier, and their request was granted.

"So determined were they to succeed," adds the correspondent, "that they decided, if necessary to lose half their men. The number of casualties sustained by the Japanese has not yet been announced."

The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Chronicle also asserts that Port Arthur is effectually "corked."

No Confirmation.

There is no confirmation here of the Paris rumor that an engagement between Russian and Japanese squadrons had taken place off Vladivostock and St. Petersburg knows nothing of the rumored capture of Newchwang. It is reported that the Japanese advanced to within 18 miles of Fengwangcheng and that another engagement is expected almost immediately.

Major-General Kasstalinsky's insistence on the fact that he was ordered to accept battle by Lieut.-General Zassalitch is interpreted as showing his intention to throw the responsibility upon that officer for risking a fight with his inferior forces, and to confirm the reports that General Zassalitch had been censured.

Captured Railroad Material.

Reports have been received here that the Japanese captured a quantity of railroad material after Sunday's battle. This is supposed to indicate that the Russians had made great progress with the railroad from the main Manchurian line to the Yalu. If this is so it would be a simple matter for the Japanese to repair this line, which would materially assist them in their advance through a difficult country.

English correspondents with the Japanese forces on the Yalu are permitted to send ample descriptions of the people and country traversed, but not a word about the fighting.

Russian Position Weak.

The Standard's Tientsin correspondent says he is convinced that the Russian position in Southern Manchuria is exceedingly weak in consequence of the enormous number of men detached to guard the railway and to obtain provisions. He believes that the forces at Haicheng and Liaoyang are greatly overestimated. The camps, he says, are numerous, but there are few men in them. There are several fortifications in the hills between Fengwangcheng and Haicheng, but the line of communication is weak and straggling.

Report in Tokio.

Tokio, May 5.—The reports which have been received here of the successful blocking of the entrance to Port Arthur harbor by the Japanese, coming on the heels of the news of the victory on the Yalu, stirred Tokio to another popular demonstration, and last night thousands of men carrying lanterns, swinging high from bamboo poles, paraded through the city. Half a dozen bands of music led the various processions.

BLOODY YALU BATTLE.

One Russian Regiment Lost 2,000 Men and Commandant and 40 Officers.

St. Petersburg, May 5.—The Emperor yesterday received Major-General Kashtalinsky's report of the Yalu battle in a telegram from Gen. Kuropatkin yesterday. After detailing the plan of battle, Gen. Kashtalinsky proceeds:

"At 1 o'clock the Japanese approached so close to the position held by the 11th Regiment that the third battery could not pass along under the cross-firing, and taking up a position a short distance from the Japanese for the remainder of the fight, losing its commander, Lieut.-Col. Moravsky.

"A company with quick-firing guns was brought up from the rear-guard and the officer commanding this, foreseeing the difficult situation of Moravsky's battery, took up the position on his own initiative. He lost half of his men and all his horses, and attempted to remove his guns by hand to the shelter of the hills under the Japanese cross-fire. The quick-firing pieces discharged 35,000 bullets.

"The 12th Regiment cut its way through, and saved its colors.

2,000 Killed in This Regiment.

"The 12th Regiment, which held its ground for two hours more with heavy losses, forced a passage at the point of the bayonet, and crossed the ravines with its colors. It lost its colonel commandant, forty officers, and about 2,000 non-commissioned officers and men.

"The Japanese losses must have been enormous.

"The Russians retired in good order on Fengwangcheng.

"The men of the third division maintained their excellent morale, and over 7000 wounded proceeded with these regiments to Fengwangcheng."

New Japanese Loan.

London, May 5.—It is said in financial circles that negotiations are approaching a conclusion with financial houses in London for the issue of a Japanese loan of $25,000,000, at 93, the security being a first charge on the customs.

MONTREAL AFIRE.

In Wholesale District But Control Was Gained at 3 a. m.

Montreal, Que., May 5.—The heart of the business section of this city is on fire at 2.10 this morning. It started in the wholesale business section on St. Paul street, in Waldron & Dronin's hat and fur establishment, which is now burning. The fire is spreading, and as a brisk wind is blowing, the fire chief fears that the whole district will be destroyed. The newspaper offices are in this district and great fear is expressed for their safety.

3 a.m.—At this hour the flames were got under control, but it took the entire fire brigade to do it. Waldron & Dronin were completely burned out. The loss is placed at $75,000.

PASSENGER COACHES DERAILED.

But Wreck on C.P.R. Near Moosejaw Kills No One.

Winnipeg, Man., May 5.—A wreck in which five passenger coaches were derailed occurred at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon on the C.P.R., near Morse, west of Moosejaw. The train, an immigrant special, which left Winnipeg on Monday night, was proceeding at a good rate of speed when one of the forward coaches left the track, being followed by four others. The tender of the engine was also derailed. Not one of the large number of passengers riding in the five coaches was injured to any extent, and the escape of many is considered wonderful. Twelve received minor cuts, scratches and bruises.

Write Off $1,500,000.

Toronto, May 5.—The following statement was handed to the press at an early hour this morning:

"The directors of the Western and British American Assurance Companies have decided to write off $1,000,000 of the paid up capital stock of the former company and $500,000 of that of the latter company, and to issue new stock for like amounts in each company. The actual value of the stock is not reduced inasmuch as the assets represented by the shares will in no way be affected by this action. The reduction of the stock, which is mainly due to the Baltimore and Toronto conflagrations, and its reinstatement by the new issue will materially strengthen the financial position of the companies."

Premier in Ottawa.

Ottawa, May 5.—Hon. G. W. Ross arrived in the city last night. He declined to make any statement as to the object of his visit.

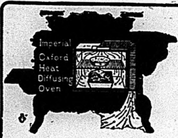
DIRECT IMPORTERS.



The secret of the excellent baking and roasting qualities of the Imperial Oxford oven is found in the diffusive flue — an improvement which no other range possesses.

This flue draws fresh air from the floor, superheats it and delivers it into the top of the oven through perforations which diffuse it evenly to front, sides and back. This gives a uniform heat throughout the oven, resulting in uniformly cooked food.

When your oven is at baking heat block up the inlet and you will find the temperature of the oven will drop immediately, just like an ordinary range, unless the fire is stirred and more fuel added.

Catarrh and Colds Can be Relieved in 10 Minutes, Permanently Cured.

Eighty years old—catarrh fifty years. Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder cures him. Want any stronger evidence of the power of this wonderful remedy over this universal disease? Want the truth of the case confirmed? Write George Lewis, Shamokin, Pa. He says: "I look upon my cure as a miracle." It relieves in ten minutes. 89

A DOG STORY.

CURIOUS TALE ABOUT A VANCOUVER CANINE.

It is generally accepted without a murmur that a cat has nine lives, but members of the canine race are usually only given credit for one. Yet a remarkable story is now in circulation about a dog which, although it was supposed to have been shot and its carcase cremated, is now said by its former owner to be tied up in his back yard instead of occupying a place in the dogs' paradise. The facts of the case are as follows: Some days ago, a West End resident desired the Pound Keeper to get rid of a young Great Dane, owing to his vicious habits. Mr. Rae took the dog and kept it for a few days, but finding that its bad temper could not be cured, shot the brute. Its body lay at the pound a couple of days and was then removed to the crematory and in Mr. Rae's presence confined to the fiery furnace. This happened some few days ago. It can thus well be imagined that Mr. Rae received somewhat of a shock yesterday when the former owner telephoned to him that he had the dog chained up in his yard, and wanted to know why the brute was still on this earth. Mr. Rae intends to examine this wonderful dog to-day. A dog that can come to life after being shot and lying in a yard for two days and come out of a roaring furnace unscathed, should undoubtedly be sent to the World's Fair at St. Louis. It is far too valuable an animal to be kept in a back yard in Vancouver.—The Daily News-Advertiser.

Daily Intelligencer.

MOUNTAINS OF INFORMATION.

The ridiculous information brought down in the House of Commons by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in order to bolster up the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme, is daily becoming more and more an object of ridicule, and no wonder! On the very page of a work relating the experiences of Rev. Father Albanel, from which the Premier gleaned the one new argument he offered this session in support of his pet railway, is found the following:

> "On the 19th we arrived at Makanomirkie—that is, 'the bears' fishing place!' It is a flat region with very shallow water, and also extremely rich in fish—small sturgeon, pike and whitefish having their haunts there. It is a pleasure to see the bears walking on the shores of this piece of water, as they go catching with a paw now one fish and now another, with admirable dexterity."
> "I say nothing of the abundance of wild fowl in the region. On the island of Onabaskouk, if the savages are to be believed, they are so numerous that on one place, when the birds shed their feathers at molting time, any savages or deer coming to the spot are buried in feathers over their heads, and are often unable to extricate themselves."

This is the kind of stuff the people of Canada are asked to accept as reasons for the building of another line of railway through a country over which a surveyor has yet to pass. The writer of the book is held up as an authority on modern railway construction, although he made these marvellous discoveries in the year 1671. If the feathers are as plentiful as the reverend gentleman says, the snow plows will have to be kept running all the year round. Of course it can be argued that the railway will derive an immense revenue from the feathered freight, but how are they to get the trains through? If the Government cannot find something better than these insults to ordinary intelligence to support their scheme, the affair is more serious than has been suspected. On the strength of such rubbish the Premier has pledged the country to an expenditure of at least $150,000,000. Such are the methods of this Business Administration.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The City Council, as will be seen by the report in another column, proposes to pass a by-law deeding the disputed lots to Mr. Caldwell, in spite of the fact that public sentiment is overwhelmingly against the course taken by them. A prominent resident of this city, speaking of the matter last night said: "The whole matter, it seems to me, was miserably mismanaged from start to finish. For my part, I fail to see why the Council should not have gotten all the money possible for those lots. The supersensitiveness displayed by some of the Aldermen is enough to make a marble statue smile. Mr. Phillips, I understand, does not propose to submit to the injustice, and I don't blame him, for he has the sentiment of the citizens behind him."

"Taxpayer" writes thus to Timely Topics: "I notice in your paper last night that Mr. John Trualsch has been appointed manager of construction of the granolithic sidewalks which are to be built. What does this mean? I thought we had a Street Surveyor whose duty it was to manage the construction of all public works. What is he going to do? It is to be hoped that this already debt-burdened city will not be compelled to provide for too many ornamental officials."

For the information of the Street Surveyor, we might state that the piece of pipe which sticks up in the roadway on Station St., is about ten kilometres this side of St. George's Church. It is a source of danger which should be remedied.

The Russians could not face a Japanese charge. The Japs could give even Mr. Hurley points when it comes to charging.

If they had weather like this in the old times, knighthood could hardly help being in flower.

Those dinky little cow medals we asked for have not yet been handed in. Can it be that our people think the Aldermen are not deserving of medals for what they did in connection with those lots?

Well, bring in one, anyway. Surely the City Treasurer should receive a medal as a reward for his extra work in trying to discredit one of the citizens who pay his wages.

The grass is growing splendidly, and there should be plenty of pasture now. Isn't it about time the Medical Health Officer held an inquest on some of the milk sold in this city, to see if we are getting our proper allowance of butter fat?

Another Senate vacancy, but the story that a certain Thurlow man is packing his grip preparatory to moving to Ottawa for the season is officially denied.

We move, seconded by Doc. Borden, that the Chairman of Parks be authorized to blow himself for a pot of paint and touch up those dear old cannon on the park, which are badly in need of a little exterior decoration.

This weather, we fear, is too good to last. People who put out plants had better put chest protectors on them at night. Jack Frost has said "Au Revoir," not good-bye.

AH! THERE.
(Cleveland Plaindealer.)

"Ah, there, my japonica!" cried the Russian picket to his rival across the stream.

"Ah, there, my czardine!" cried the picket on the other side.

Mr. J. P. C. Phillips, speaking to The Intelligencer, said: "I have reason to believe that a city official has poisoned the minds of the Council against me by the statement that I have been in the habit of leaving my taxes unpaid, letting the property go to sale and then buying it in at a less amount than the taxes amounted to. That is a falsehood. I have never, during my residence in this city, a period of 25 years, been one cent behind in my taxes; neither has my wife. We have always paid our taxes inside the legal limit, and I defy any man to prove the contrary. I have the receipts in my possession, and can show them at any time."

Strange, isn't it? That false reports of this kind should be spread about a reputable citizen. What could the object have been?

Some jokers in Kingston fired off an old cannon about 10 o'clock on Tuesday night, shattering windows in the vicinity, waking people up who had been asleep for years and causing the very old mischief to be to pay. The women ran out to see what was the matter, the men hid under the beds, and there was the warmest time you ever heard of for the rest of the night. Somebody probably wanted to see if he could waken Kingston up, but, bless your heart, it would take a Port Arthur bombardment or an earthquake to do that.

An Ontario analyst, 'tis said, has made the discovery that much of the so-called cider consumed in this country is not made from the juice of apples, but is simply a decoction of banana soup and flavoring. Apple cider is made, all right, but is allowed to turn into vinegar, as the latter brings three times the price of cider. The above terrible state of affairs causes the Toronto News to moralize gravely over the situation in the following fashion:

"It is a lamentable instance of the rise of the practise of substitution, as the commercial world dubs this kind of fraud. We do not intend to say that there is no real cider on sale in Ontario. There is a great deal of it sold by reputable dealers. The cider-mill is not everywhere condemned to the sour and lowly business of making vinegar. In many a town the mills that now turn out the secondary article would produce cider if only the people would drink it. But they prefer water—which is less palatable, or beer—which is less healthful. Good cider is a splendid tonic and blood-purifier, when taken "straight." There is a beverage known as Stonefence, composed, we are informed, of cider and rye whiskey. With this liquid no man of judgment will dally. Authorities certify that, having taken two small drinks of Stonefence, the mildest mannered man will prance up and down the main street "ki-yi"-ing like a cowboy, and scandalizing the whole community. On the whole, we feel safe in saying that both banana-cider or whiskey-cider should be shunned. But the genuine, sparkling, invigorating juice of the apple, not too old and not too young, is really the nectar of Canada."

"LURING" THEM ON.
(Ottawa Citizen.)

The Russians are "luring" the Japs into Manchuria the way the tramp lured the bull pup down the lane, i.e., viz., namely and to wit: By towing it along at top speed attached to the seat of his trousers.

A wireless message from Lieyungtung to-day contains startling news: A Russian fleet of six cruisers and two battleships attacked a Japanese row boat trying to pull up the Yalu River. A terrific battle took place and the Russian vessels were sunk. The row-boat escaped.

Well, the Russian ships at Port Arthur are safe for a while, anyhow. The harbor is bottled up and the horrid Japs can't get at 'em.

English correspondents with the Jap army are allowed to send graphic descriptions of the scenery, but not a word about the fighting. What a lot of thinking those correspondents must be doing!

Oh! horror! Here's the Chief Secretary for Ireland been doing something which displeased Mr. John F. Redmond very much. The awful man.

• • •

The Japs say the Russian strategists are no good. And recent events seem to bear them out in their assertions. But the war is not over yet. Wait till Kuropatkin gets started.

DON'T RISK A PENNY

GET WELL FIRST.

For 30 years I've been a physician!

I have treated nearly two million cases!

Surely you'll admit that such experience must have taught me some certainties.

And—all that I know of disease and cure—all that I have proven to be worth knowing—is condensed into my six books for the sick.

Write for a free copy to-day.

They tell you of my great discovery that practically all diseases can be permanently cured through the Sympathetic Nerves.

Not the nerves we feel with, see with, hear with, but the inside nerves.

It is these that unconsciously operate the vital organs—the heart, liver, kidneys, brain, etc.

When the inside nerves get run down, that organ which is weakest in the body loses its power to act properly.

It then throws its work upon the other organs.

These organs, in turn, become affected through over work, and so, scarcely any case is found without complications.

I proved it useless to doctor the individual organs themselves while the nerve power to fully operate them was lacking.

Sedatives temporarily deadened the pain, but increased the distress afterwards.

Tonics revived the drooping powers, only to insure relapse so soon as the stimulus was withdrawn.

Of what use to hourly move ahead the hands of a watch if its mainspring be seriously deadened?

There is but one sensible thing to do, viz:—Stiffen up the mainspring.

That is what my, now famous, prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—does.

It acts directly upon the Sympathetic Nerve Centers just as steam acts in an engine.

It provides, through these inside nerves, the power to make the weakest organ do its duty.

It enables weak organs to cast off their clogging waste matter, and to repair their worn tissue.

It runs the human mill, at full capacity, till that mill produces enough new material to keep itself running without further help.

So sure am I of this Restorative that I authorize certain druggists every where to supply it on a month's trial, to practically all who write me for that privilege.

To supply it at my expense if it fails to benefit—at your expense if it cures.

The cost is but $5.50 for six bottles, including my professional help during treatment.

Could anything better prove my faith in this system than this voluntary test?

Could anyone furnish you better grounds for confidence?

Just specify which of the six you need.

Book 1 on Dyspepsia. Book 4 for Women.
Book 2 on the Heart. Book 5 for Men (sealed.)
Book 3 on the Kidneys Book 6 on Rheumatism.

Address Dr. Shoop, box 69, Racine, Wis.

But all druggists do not supply it on a month's trial. You must write to me for that.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER."

Considering the high-priced attraction which held the boards on Tuesday night, the above company drew a remarkably good-sized audience last night, and the play gave first-class satisfaction. The scenery and costumes were fine, the cast good, and the leading man, Mr. Dalton, and leading lady, Miss Roselle Knott, were splendid in their parts and received repeated curtain calls. Belleville theatre-goers have, of late, been treated to some excellent attractions, and last night's play was not by any means the least meritorious of them.

AN OLD FAVORITE COMING.

Edward Harrigan and his clever company will be at the Carman next Monday night. A few weeks ago, tempted by a substantial guarantee, the company opened the new Columbia Theatre at Philadelphia, and The Press made the following mention: "Ned Harrigan, of whom there never was another, nor never will be, is still the 'Old Lavender' who made the older generation laugh and cry. Harrigan, in the seedy-well-worn coat of 'Old Lavender' once more greeted a friendly gathering over the footlights, this time at the Columbia. The depiction of the humble life of the lowly which placed Harrigan and his little company at the pinnacle of over a quarter century ago, is ever appreciated wherever it be. As the author and actor said in response to a curtain call, he did his best, whether up or downtown.

A Fine Building.

The Ottawa Citizen Company, Limited, has just completed a new six-storey fire-proof building which is one of the finest newspaper buildings in Canada. The building is very handsome and imposing, and is a credit to the Canadian capital. The Citizen Company has also installed a new three-deck Hoe press with a capacity for 24,000 papers per hour.

The Foresters.

Flags are flying from many staffs to-day, and the city is en fete in honor of the great Foresters' demonstration which takes place in this city to-night. Judging by what we hear, the occasion will be an enjoyable and unique one, and it is confidently expected that, in number of initiations, Belleville Foresters will this evening break the world's record.

The Morse System.

May 1st, 1904, was the sixtieth anniversary of the sending of the first despatch over a telegraph wire by the Morse system. It was sent from Baltimore to Washington. That short stretch of line was the beginning of a circuit that now comprises 245,000 miles, over which last year 91,391,443 messages were sent. Britain did even better than that, sending a million more messages in 1903 than did the States.

Kitty D. Wins.

Ottawa, May 5.—In the Supreme Court yesterday the appeal in the case of the "Kitty D." was allowed. The court below found that the American boat was in Canadian waters at the time of the seizure for illegal fishing by the Government's schooner Petrel. The court upsets all findings of court below and grants the owner's case in full.

His Arm Blown Off.

Toronto, May 5.—Since the work of dynamiting the ruins throughout the area devastated by the fire has been in progress the workmen have been taking unnecessary chances with the very dangerous material which they are using. This resulted yesterday in a very painful accident to John Croft, 274½ Parliament street, one of the men employed in the work.

He had put three charges of dynamite under a section of the Gage Company's building and two of the charges had exploded as he had expected. The third, however, was a trifle backward, and he went to investigate. When he got near to it he saw the fuse sputtering dangerously near to the charge, but before he could withdraw it or get to a safe distance the charge went off, shattering his left arm.

He was taken to the Emergency Hospital, where the doctor trimmed off the mangled limb. At last reports he was resting easily and will soon be around again.

Suicide at Strathroy.

Strathroy, May 5.—Yesterday morning Edward Zavitz, aged 68 years, took his own life by hanging himself in his barn. Deceased was apparently in his usual spirits and ate a hearty breakfast, after which he proceeded to perform his duties on his farm. About ten o'clock his wife entered the barn and found her husband suspended by a rope to a beam. She immediately cut him down and notified the coroner, but life was extinct, as he had been there for some time. It was decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The cause for his rash act is said to be recent money losses in connection with law suits. His widow, two sons and one daughter survive him.

Presents In Japan.

The foreigner should beware of making presents to any Japanese girl unless he is bent upon matrimony. To present her with any sort of a gift, even though it be only a posy, will be regarded as a proposal of marriage, and to accept the present, though not a word of love or matrimony be passed, is a sign that she accepts you. Gallant Americans have got into serious trouble and found it necessary to leave the country at night to escape a binding engagement which they thoughtlessly incurred by giving to a maiden some trifle.

To Make a Seidlitz Powder.

To make a seidlitz powder mix together two drams of rochelle salts and two scruples of bicarbonate of soda; put these into a blue paper and put thirty-five grains of tartaric acid into a white paper. To use put each into different glasses and quarter fill with water, then pour both together and drink at once while in a state of effervescence.

Her Chapter of Proposals

By Hattie Preston Rider

...Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure...

Miriam came into the library and sat down opposite Graham. There was a pucker of anxiety on her forehead.

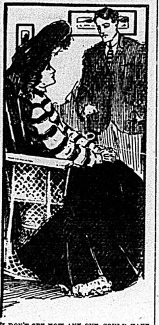
"Bart," she said, "would you mind being engaged to me?"

Graham took his feet off the window sill and sat up.

"Engaged!" he repeated dubiously.

Miriam nodded.

"It's only for a couple of days," she hastened to reassure him. "Mr. Forsythe is coming to propose, and I'm at my wits' end. I haven't a single excuse for refusing him. He's good and wealthy and nice looking. Mother won't hear an objection, even his age. So, you see, the only way is to let him understand ever so delicately that I'm not free to listen to him. Nobody will know, for he isn't the sort to repeat confidences."



"I DON'T SEE HOW ANY ONE COULD HAVE HELPED IT EXCEPT MOTHER."

Graham lay back in his chair and surveyed her coolly.

"If you've no objection to him, why don't you marry him?" he inquired.

"I thought I made it clear that I didn't want to," she explained, with a note of injury in her voice. "I'm sure, if you don't wish to help me out, Bart, you needn't. But we've been such chums I thought you'd as lief as not. I'd do as much for you."

Graham swallowed hard, but she did not notice.

"Why don't you tell him the truth?" he said at last. "He's man enough to stop his attentions if he knows they're unwelcome."

"That's just it," she rejoined hopelessly. "Mother has tacitly given him to understand that I do care for him for all my seeming indifference. In fact, they've done nearly all the courting themselves."

Graham's lips curled.

"Well," he said shortly, "I should think you could disabuse him of the idea easily enough."

Miriam's brown eyes widened.

"You must think it is prime fun, Bart Graham, to boldly tell a good friend right to his face that you don't care for him, especially when he's such a dear old fellow!" she said, with a little quiver in her voice.

Graham stared. What a refreshing phase of womanhood! Then he smiled grimly.

"So, I suppose, it was your idea to let Forsythe down easily by giving him to understand that, although I held your hand, your heart responded to him, eh? You'll pardon me, Miriam, but you remind me forcibly of the Irishman who was too tender hearted to dock his dog's ears at one fell stroke, so he cut them a half inch at a time."

Miriam winced, reddening. The truth sounds so different stripped of picturesque phrases. Graham relit his cigar.

"You want me to go in with you, virtually lying to Forsythe," he went on gravely. "At the risk of appearing ungallant I'm afraid I must decline your flattering offer. I don't know much about such things, but it seems to me if I didn't care to go into partnership with a man I could make him understand my refusal had nothing to do with my personal regard for him. If—if I didn't want to marry you, for instance, Miriam, you wouldn't take it as unfriendliness on my part, would you?"

Her downcast eyes missed the fact that he was watching her narrowly. She got up.

"I don't know if I've the nerve to do it," she said, rather tremulously and letting his question pass unheeded. "You've no idea how hard it is, Bart. I've always liked him, if not in that other way, so very much till—till"—

She hesitated and looked at him appealingly, but there was no sign of relenting in his averted face. She sighed softly. A moment later he heard the swish of her light skirt along the hall. He laid down his cigar.

"In one respect," he groaned, "women are like Providence—their ways are past finding out!"

He did not see Miriam again that day or the next. He watched her mother's face, however, when they met at table, as a seaman does his barometer in squally weather. Though that lady's bland cordiality to himself was marked, the two tiny lines of anxiety between her brows became a beacon of hope to him, for Graham knew Forsythe had arrived, and he could not put out of mind that parting speech of Miriam's. His growing fears, for disinterested ones, were acute indeed.

On the morning of the third day, from the vantage point of his own window, he saw the suitor depart. There was a rosebud in the lapel of his faultless coat. As he got into the autobus Graham caught a glimpse of his face. His own promptly fell. As if that were not sufficient, on going out directly after, he met Miriam's mother in the hall. The pretty widow's cheeks were flushed like a girl's, and, it seemed to him, there was a guilty look in her eyes. She gave him a smile that relaxed not a whit of its sweetness at the savage tone of his "Good morning." This last confirmed his worst forebodings. He decided that between the two they had succeeded in coercing Miriam to their wishes.

It took Graham the whole of his forenoon's tramp to perfect his plan of action. He blamed himself bitterly that he had played the mentor in refusing Miriam's request, foolish and cowardly as it had seemed to him then. But from the very fact of it he felt justified now in taking a bold hand.

He went back to the house and sent a peremptory note to the young lady. He wished to see her once more and at her earliest convenience. He thought their former close friendship gave him the privilege.

He was hardly prepared for the flushed cheeks and defiant eyes that greeted him. Nevertheless he resolved to stick manfully to his role of protector.

"If it came to this, Miriam," he burst forth, "I think you might have trusted me to help you out for all I refused the other day. I would have done anything but what you asked, even to shooting him," savagely.

Miriam's nervous color deepened.

"I—I don't see how any one could have helped it except mother," she stammered.

"I could, and I intend to yet," he retorted grimly. He came a step nearer. "I tell you, child, you shall not be forced into this marriage against your will. I have some right as—as your nearest friend, and I shall remonstrate with your mother. That failing, I shall go to Forsythe himself and tell him the truth, since you dare not. He is an honorable man, and he will release you."

Miriam backed away from him and hid her face in her hands.

"Oh, Bart!" she cried between hysterical sobs and laughter. "What in the world are you talking about?"

"You shall not marry Forsythe against your will," he insisted. Then, to his astonishment, Miriam uncovered her face and burst into a ringing laugh of sheer relief.

"It was mother, not I, to whom he proposed," she said. "It was just her silly blunder, the blessed goose! She never told me they were engaged years ago. And I acted such a guy before you. I fretted myself sick about it. But," meeting his eyes with unwonted and bewildering shyness, "if he had asked me, Bart, I should have told him the truth. I've resolved to be as honest as the day hereafter."

Graham's head swam in the great light breaking on him. Impulsively he strode forward and took both her hands.

"Miriam, be honest with me, then, as I am with you. I've loved you all the while I was pretending friendship, and when I thought another man was winning you I was beside myself with misery. Tell me, little chum, could you love me in that 'other way?'"

The flushed face was instantly buried against his sleeve. Graham as promptly unearthed it and forced its shy eyes to meet his again. What he saw there only he knows, but it proved to him beyond a doubt that Miriam's impersonal friendship was as preposterous a fraud as his own.

A Vegetable Pepsin.

The useful properties of the papaw plant have long been known to the various natives and have been taken advantage of by them, as can be seen by reference to the works of travelers, who can themselves vouch for the accuracy of the accounts they narrate. Thus Drury in "The Useful Plants of India" states that old hogs and poultry which are fed upon the leaves and fruit, however tough the meat they afford might otherwise be, are thus rendered perfectly tender and good if eaten as soon as killed. Browne, too, in his "Natural History of Jamaica" says that meat becomes tender after being washed with water to which the juice of the papaw tree has been added, and if left in such water ten minutes it will fall from the spit while roasting or separate into shreds while boiling.—Chambers' Journal.

A Great Player.

Many good stories are told of Sir Walter Parratt, the master of the king's music. Here is one illustrative of his extraordinary memory: Some eight or ten men were assembled one evening in one of the lodges attached to St. Michael's college, Tenbury. Sir Walter Parratt and Herr von Holst played in turn upon the piano such music as was asked for. This went on for some time, until at last the chessboard was brought out. Sir Walter then proposed to play two men at chess in consultation, still remaining at the piano and playing from memory what was demanded either from Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Chopin or Mendelssohn. Without even a glance at the chessboard he won the game in an hour.—London Globe.

Meet Me at the Inside Inn.

Never Before Did a Great World's Fair Have a Big Hotel Inside the Grounds:

RATES WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

"Meet me at the Inside Inn." That will be the expression most frequently heard at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. This hotel is an immense structure, 400 feet wide and 800 feet long, with 2,257 sleeping rooms and a dining room seating 2,500 persons. The hotel is inside the Exposition grounds, and operated under the supervision of the Exposition management. It is well appointed and furnished in modern up-to-date style, and will be the center of social affairs in the way of dinners and family reunions inside the grounds.

This hotel is in the southeast portion of the grounds, not far from the Plateau of States, and to the north a short distance are the famous Cascade Gardens, Festival Hall and Connade of States, which form a part of the main picture of the Exposition. Street Railways running by the door go direct to the Union Railway station downtown, and the Intramural Road, inside the grounds, carried guests from the hotel entrance to all points of interest. Here is a cool retreat, where persons can find rest, enjoyment and quietude away from the noise and crush of the crowds along the avenues of the Exposition grounds. Sightseeing at a large Exposition is the most tiresome pleasure, because the mind is busily engaged and finds diversion by constantly changing scenes, while the body is becoming weary and the visitor does not realize how tired he is until he stops to rest. The place to rest is the Inside Inn. The hotel rates cover the daily admission fee to the grounds, and the registered guest at this hotel is free from the annoyance of pushing through the crowds at the gates. There are 500 rooms at $1.50 per person, 500 at $2.00, 500 at $2.50.

The Inside Inn will long be remembered as a distinctive feature of the largest Universal Fair ever held in the world—a fair representing a total cost of $50,000,000 and as large in size as the Columbian, the Pan-American and the Paris fairs combined.

THIRD LINE THURLOW.

The weather is fine now and the soil works good. Farmers are busy seeding and prospects are bright for a good crop of hay and fall grain.

The funeral services of Mr. Wm. Vanvalkenberg were held in our church. Rev. W. D. T. Wilson preached a very touching and pathetic sermon. The remains were laid away in Belleville cemetery. He lived an industrious and moral life, and died, we believe, in the triumphs of faith. He will be missed by both young and old, for his genial manner and upright conduct made him a general favorite with all with whom he came in contact.

We are sorry to hear that Mr. Jay Ross is not improving. He is quite feeble yet.

Miss Emma Latta has returned home from Colborne. Her sister, Mrs. Swain, came with her for a visit at her old home.

THE WORST KIND.

Symptoms indicating other troubles may appear to a thoroughly Pile-sick person.

This is when Hem-Roid, the only internal, the only absolute Pile cure, brings the results that has made its fame.

It will cure the most stubborn case in existence and a bonded guarantee to that effect goes with each package.

BY ST, GEORGE RATHBORNE

pleasure but something more lasting."

"You need never fear that this unlucky wretch will ever offend again in the same way. I can guarantee that, Miss Molly. It was all a mistake, anyhow, which I can explain. You see, he had a positive idea—"

Unfortunately for his peace of mind, Mynheer Joe gets no further than this. They are interrupted. The baron and a companion come up and introduce some subject that all Cairo is talking about.

Molly looks annoyed, while Mynheer Joe is secretly fuming. He silently nurses his wrath, hoping that some time the chance may come when he can take it out upon the baron. Depend upon it, he will no longer stand between the other and any vengeance he may invite; indeed, it would do him good to watch a man of about Tanner's build use the baron neatly up. His ideas have changed, you see.

Then Sandy makes his appearance, and Joe presently finds himself tete-a-tete with his voluble newspaper friend.

There are times when one desires a confidant; even a man likes to pour his woes into a sympathetic ear. Mynheer Joe's life has been such, that, as a general thing, he has been deprived of this privilege; but he has the feeling deep down in his heart all the same.

In Sandy he sees the friend who may help him out of the hole. A suggestion will do it, for his brain, usually so clear, seems strangely muddled just at present.

Besides, the war correspondent knows Molly and her father very well, having met them in various places. Perhaps he can discover a loophole of escape, whereby Joe may crawl out of his awkward scrape with honor.

Having made up his mind to trust Sandy, he first of all draws a pledge from him that he will not reveal a word of the story or hint at it in any of his correspondence; all of which Sandy, duly impressed with the gravity of the situation, solemnly promises.

Then Joe relates the difficulty into which his impetuosity and love of fair play have led him, nor does he forget to lay due emphasis on the fact that when taking the little man's part he fancied and truly believed he was defending the dear old governor himself.

Sandy holds in as long as he can, and at last, doubling up, shakes all over with laughter. It is silent, too, all but the gurgling sounds as of water bubbling down a rocky ravine.

Mynheer Joe appreciates the situation knows he has made a consummate donkey of himself, and although naturally tempted to make use of his boot, firmly refrains. Two mistakes do not make a right. Sandy has reason to be merry. And, besides, Joe realizes that he has need of advice from this sagacious writer—this little man who has, figuratively, waded knee-deep in gore at battles searching for news.

The great obligation under which he has, this night, placed Sandy, by giving him the story of Khartoom's downfall and Gordon's death, must serve as a lever to lift him from the slough of despond. Back of it, of course, is Sandy's personal regard for his fellow-citizen. That goes a great way. He patiently waits till the other has had his laugh out.

"I must beg your pardon, Joe. Awful trick, that of yours. Too impulsive by half, my dear boy. If you had known the baron as I do—"

"I would have danced to see him knocked out!" cries Mynheer Joe, vindictively.

"Ho! You've come to it already, eh? Thought it would be that way. Expect pistols for two between you and the baron yet.' Sly fellow, that man. They do say he's downed half a dozen men in affairs of honor, with sword or pistol."

Mynheer Joe snaps his fingers.

"To the deuce with the baron! If he ever comes in my way, I'll ring his beastly neck as I would that of a chicken!" he mutters.

"Good! Glad to hear you say so! Despise the fellow myself. And yet, Joe, he's a power in the land, protected by a hired gang that is paid by Russian gold. When the time comes, if it ever does, for you to lay that plotter out, remember that the moment your hand touches him it will be a signal for several desperadoes to leap into the game, armed, and ready to take life, if necessary, in order to save the emissary who is worth so much to Russia."

Mynheer Joe gives a low whistle.

"The deuce! Do you happen to know these men, Sandy?" he asks in a low tone.

"Two of them I am sure of. There is another who baffles me. Without any apparent motive, cast your eyes across the room. Do you see that tall, eleguat-looking man in full evening dress? He is known here as Colonel Taylor, an ex-Confederate officer. In reality, he is a Russian spy, and one of the things he is paid for is to be always at the elbow of the baron, so that a signal will fetch him up. I've seen the baron in many places since coming to Cairo, but never has Colonel Taylor been more than fifty feet away."

"And the other shadow?" pursues, Joe, whose mind is working upon a subject.

"He is a dark-skinned fellow—a native of India, I believe. You know the baron leaves Cairo for Bombay or Calcutta soon, and this man will be of great use to him there."

"See here," says Joe, quietly, "I remember such a fellow. He caught my eye on the square at the time I noticed the disturbance. He made me think of my faithful Kassee, which fact causes me to remember him. At the time he was just back of Tanner; indeed, not five feet separated them."

"Just so," remarks Sandy, significantly.

"An idea strikes me."

"Well, let's hear it."

"It is possible that had Tanner been forced into conclusions with the baron, he would have been set upon by these Thugs."

"I am positive of it."

"Such a thing would explain the confident assurance of the baron."

"Yes."

"A brilliant thought comes to me, Sandy."

"I can guess it, old fellow."

"In knocking Demosthenes Tanner out, I was really doing him the greatest favor."

"No doubt of it."

"Saving his life."

"They would have nearly or quite finished him."

"If she could only be induced to see the thing in that light."

"Depend upon it, Joe, dear fellow, she shall. I myself will undertake to open her eyes."

"God bless you, Sandy!"

"One good turn deserves another. You gave me a monopoly of your startling news, and that is something I can never repay. Rest assured that when Sandy Barlow has had his tete-a-tete with Miss Molly, she will believe you a god."

"Heavens, don't draw it too strong, my boy!"

"I shall deceive her only in one thing."

"What is that?"

"You knew or suspected the truth when you rushed into the breach."

"That will hardly do, for you remember I thought the small man was her father."

"Bosh! Don't tell her that—she will feel insulted—thinks the old governor is the handsomest man in the world. No, no, you must have suspected the truth beforehand—we'll give you the benefit of the doubt, anyway."

"Take a look across—as I live, that little fiend is himself telling Molly the truth. Notice the look upon her face—she can't wholly believe him. Confound the villain, he's got the start of me! Now, what am I to do, my good friend?"

Joe has been considerable shaken up by what he has just seen, and he turns to his companion for conselation.

Fortunately, Sandy is equal to the emergency, and quickly responds:

"Leave Miss Molly to me, Joe. I'll undo all that rascal has built up, and establish you in her heart more firmly than ever," he says, at which the traveler squeezes his hand in a way that marks his gratitude.

"Again I say, bless you, my boy. What a fix I would be in, only for your genius in arranging things."

"Don't mention it. Time may be near at hand when poor Sandy shall have need of your strong right hand—who knows?"

"And willingly shall it be placed at his disposal. But, see here, I ought to have a hand in my own redemption— I don't like the idea of standing around doing nothing while you accomplish the work."

"That's just like a man of your size, Joe. Well, I see no reason why you shouldn't hold up your end of the log!"

"Good!"

"While I win over the daughter, you can be patching up the peace with the awful old."

"Good heavens, face that tartar again! I'd sooner take a whipping!"

"Hush! He's her dear old governor—a savage. I'll admit, someways, but the better you know him the more you'll find in Demos to admire. Diamond in the rough, you see."

"Exactly. Well, I do admit I could see something of a sterling character back of the exterior. Yes, I'd even grow to like the old bear, if need be."

"For Molly's sake!" says Sandy, slyly.

"For Molly's sake," returns Joe, unabashed.

"See here, old chap, don't you think you're—well, rushing matters?"

"How so?"

"Just got in to-night from Khartoom—fought a duel on Esbehiyeh square and already arranging to make way with your rival for the hand of the belle of Cairo, whom you have met to-night—"

"Do you mean Molly?" interrupted Joe.

"Of course, man."

"You forget, Sandy, she has belonged to me for a whole year. I saved her from death in the Mediterranean at Malta, and ever since her fair face has haunted me, sleeping or waking. I felt that, if I lived, we would come together somewhere. You don't know what a solace it has been to me, in times of danger, to think that I had been able to do her a service and that this invisible bond united us, though we might be thousands of leagues apart."

"I see, you're a gone case, Joseph."

"Proud to admit it, Sandy. Think of the peculiar circumstances that unite us, outside of the fact that I saved her life and that both of us are crazy on the subject of travel."

Hereupon, in a sketchy way, he relates the story of the legacy in all its peculiar details.

Sandy's mouth opens as he hears. He utters exclamations repeatedly about it being the most remarkable thing he ever listened to and worthy of recording. When Mynheer Joe finally ceases, the little war correspondent finds it his turn to do the squeezing act, and lends all his power to the work of crushing the traveller's strong hand, but Joe minds it little more than he would the buzzing of a fly. Sandy evidently is not much of a success at such work.

"Most remarkable case. Never heard the equal of it, my boy. Oh, the baron little suspects what a miserable show he has! Not that she would probably look at him even if you were not here; but then, there's no accounting for the taste of our American belles, I'm sorry to say,' heaving a sigh as he catches a glimpse of his own diminutive person in a glass.

"Many a flower, you know, Sandy, is born to blush unseen,"says Joe, consolingly, "And who knows but what some day you may jump in and save an heiress from a watery grave, to be rewarded with her hand."

"All very good," groans Sandy, with mock despair, "but I can't swim a stroke."

"Then I advise you to take lessons in the Nile at once. Every man should be prepared to accept his fate as it comes, and be ready to rescue a drowning maiden."

"I'll do it!" said Sandy impulsively.

"Oh, not just now, I hope?" as the other moves off.

"Hardly, my boy. I notice that the baron has left Miss Molly, she stands there looking disconsolate. I am off to cheer her up—to whisper words of consolation in her gentle ear that will warm her heart toward a certain person of my acquaintance."

"Thanks, my fine fellow, and don't forget to pray for me."

"Eh—what now, Joe?"

"Because, while you enjoy your tete-a-tete with an angel, I shall be engaged with—well, hardly the Old Nick, but at least, the governor. I go now to beard the lion in his den, and fate holds the scales in the balance.'

CHAPTER IX.

It is little trouble for Mynheer Joe to find out where Demosthenes Tanner is quartered. One of the English servants of Shepherd's gives him the information, and is tipped immediately in a way that warms his heart.

As Joe passes by a window, on his way to the quarters of the great American orator, he is given a last glimpse

The Dress of Hindoo Women.

There has been no change in Indian women's dress for 4,000 years. All wear the sari, a single piece of stuff a yard and a quarter wide, ten, twenty, thirty yards long. It is arranged on the body, and forms skirt, garment, veil, first plaited with the hand in accordion folds in front, wound round and round, and the richest end, if embroidered or woven with gold, finally brought over the head. It may be of simple cotton cloth; of silk, plain in design, woven with golden threads; solid with embroidery, strung with pearls, or of kincob, the royal cloth of gold. Some cost thousands of rupees. No pin, hook, button or string, the garment is formed on the architecture of the body, and takes its expression and nobility from its perfect harmony with the lines of the human form. And Indian women, whether of high or low class, have jewels everywhere; have sleeping gems and day gems, as we have day and night shirts.—Everybody's.

The Oak.

England won her supremacy on the seas with her ships of British oak, a wood that is renowned for strength and durability. When the Spanish armada set sail for England its commander had express orders from the king of Spain to burn or otherwise destroy every oak in the forest of Dean, then the great source of shipbuilding supplies. But, as blunt old Drake prophesied, Philip's beard was singed instead. Admiral Nelson declared that without "heart of oak" the British navy and empire would soon come to an end.

The oak is beautiful at all seasons. From the time it opens its delicate green buds, close pressed in their resinous overcoat, and emerging flame tipped with bronze or crimson, until they come again an acorn bearing spray is most artistic, and the ruddy hue of the tree in autumn combines well in nature's color scheme.

One Sided Sport.

A London paper tells a story of a certain shortsighted sportsman. He was asked one morning by a fellow sojourner in a small hotel on the shores of Loch Carron what sport he had had. "Just seen a seal," he said. "Shot at it three times and missed it each time." At dinner, an hour later, he sat next to a man with a bandage round his head. "Accident?" he inquired. "Accident!" was the indignant response. "Attempted murder, you mean. I was having a bath about an hour ago when some lunatic fired at me three times from the shore and shot part of my ear off." "Wonder who it could have been!" murmured the sportsman, and then he changed the conversation.

A Story of Storey.

An English paper tells a little anecdote of the distinguished painter Storey in his capacity of teacher of perspective at the Royal academy: On one occasion Mr. Storey accepted an invitation to dine with the wealthy—and Philistine—father of one of his pupils. Over the undeniable port the by no means doting parent inquired how his son was getting on, and, although the kindliest of men, Mr. Storey could not bring himself to say much that was favorable. "Humph!" grunted the man of money. "Well, I hope he will turn out an artist, for I am quite sure he's not fit to be anything else."

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affliction from a NEGLECTED COLD, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedella."

Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Few men realize what large dividends they can draw on kindness.

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

Always on Hand.—Mr. Thomas H. Porter, Lower Ireland, P.Q., writes: "My son, 18 months old, had croup so bad that nothing gave him relief until a neighbor brought me some of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which I gave him, and in six hours he was cured. It is the best medicine I ever used, and I would not be without a bottle of it in my house."

Messrs. Northrop & Lyman Co. are the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is now being sold in immense quantities throughout the Dominion. It is welcomed by the suffering invalid everywhere with emotions of delight, because it banishes pain and gives instant relief. This valuable specific for almost "every ill that flesh is heir to," is valued by the sufferer as more precious than gold. It is the elixir of life to many a wasted frame. To the farmer it is indispensable, and it should be in every house.

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

A Wonderful Cure. — Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore, but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle, and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Never is time more precious than when some member of the family is attacked by colic, dysentery or any bowel trouble. The doctor is distant,

HARMONY IN FASHIONS.

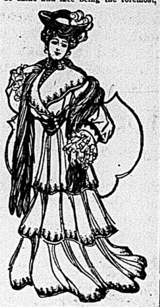
A Waist of One Color and a Skirt of Another Are Not Permissible.

Brown still continues to be most popular. Hat, waist, gloves and fur should match in this color to give it the proper chic.

Sometimes, however, a dress of a lighter shade of color will be relieved by bands of a darker shade of velvet, but the two tones must be chosen with great care.

The old idea of a pale blue or pink blouse with a black skirt has entirely gone out of style. If with a black skirt one wishes to wear a colored blouse, a little bolero of lace, jet, accordion plaited chiffon or net is designed to go over it, and when combined with a wide belt of black silk or satin the "cut in two" appearance is obviated.

There are, however, so many pretty blouses and thin black materials, crepe de chine and lace being the foremost, that they are much to be preferred to any color combination. If desired they can be relieved with a little touch of color at the throat in the shape of a velvet band or tulle bow.



A BROWN COSTUME.

Belts for wearing with afternoon gowns are made in the same material as the costume. Those in cloth usually are flat and deep in front, but are drawn into folds at the back and finished off with fancy buttons. In taffeta the material is cut on the bias about a quarter of a yard wide. It is then wound twice round the waist and afterward drawn through a jeweled buckle, which can be placed in front or at the back, as the fancy dictates.

The illustration shows one of the brown combinations spoken of above. The light brown cloth gown is trimmed with bands of chiffon velvet of a lighter shade, the scarf is of mink, and the hat, also of mink, is relieved by an ecru feather. The skirt of the gown shows the fashionable three flounce effect. JUDIC CHOLLET.

DAINTY FASHIONS.

Muff and Stoles For Spring Wear, Also the Latest In Hats.

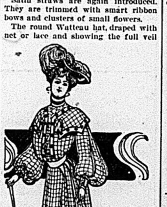
Fancy braidings are more popular than ever and with embroideries will be a feature of the spring tailor mades. Tiers and flounces are still as much copied as ever, and the edges of these are usually trimmed in some fancy way.

There is a perfect craze at present for pointed toques, elongated over the face. They are in direct contrast to the soup plate order of hat, and they are not becoming to every woman.

Brown is as much worn as ever, and bronze effects are being exploited by smart Parisians.

Satin straws are again introduced. They are trimmed with smart ribbon bows and clusters of small flowers.

The round Watteau hat, draped with net or lace and showing the full veil behind, is one of the favorite tailor made hats with the Parisiennes.



A SPRING COSTUME.

Both muffs and stoles of black, brown and white ostrich feathers are on sale in the best shops. There are also more perishable confections for spring wear made of bronze chiffon mixed in with tiny roses.

The picture shows a costume of checked black and white cloth trimmed with taffeta bands embroidered in black dots. JUDIC CHOLLET.

ROLLINS—McCONNELL.

A very pleasing event occurred at the home of Mr. Robert J. McConnell, of Melrose, on Wednesday evening, April 27th, when his youngest daughter, Lucy, was united in marriage to Mr. John W. Rollins, of Plainfield, formerly of Madoc. To the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Maud Crookshanks, the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the parlor where the ceremony was performed under an arch of evergreens, by Rev. S. Crookshanks. The bride looked charming in a dress of white organdie, trimmed with overlace and ribbons and carried a bouquet of white roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Jennie, who being similarly attired, carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom was ably supported by her brother, Mr. William Rollins. At the conclusion of the impressive ceremony, about forty guests partook of a sumptuous repast, after which an enjoyable time was spent. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly gifts. Their many friends unite in wishing them every happiness and prosperity in the future.

City Council Holds A Special Meeting.

ORDERS PREPARATION OF A BY-LAW DEEDING DISPUTED LOTS TO MR. CALDWELL — OTHER BUSINESS.

A special meeting of the City Council for the purpose of passing by-laws authorizing the building of granolithic walks, and for general business, was held yesterday afternoon.

Those present when the meeting was called to order were Mayor Chown, Ald. Paterson, Gordon, McFee, Panter Magrath and Green. Ald. Sinclair came in later.

Under the head of communications the following letter was read:

Belleville, May 3, 1904

W. W. Chown, Esq., Mayor of the City of Belleville.

Sir,—On behalf of Mr. J. P. C. Phillips, I protest against any sale or disposition of the forty-four lots in the City of Belleville, referred to in the city's official request for tenders and Mr. Phillips' tender in accordance therewith, being made to any person or persons other than my client, the said J. P. C. Phillips, and I notify you, as Mayor of the city, not to sign or execute any memorandum or deed of the said lot to any other person other than the said J. P. C. Phillips, whose marked cheque payable to the corporation of the City of Belleville in gold for $326.50 you hold in payment for the said property, the same being the highest tender made for the forty-four lots referred to. Should any attempt be made to prejudice or interfere with Mr Phillips' legal and equitable rights in this respect, an action will be brought against the City of Belleville, and against any officials of the city, personally, who may be parties to this illegal act, and I again call your attention to the legal and equitable rights of Mr. Phillips with regard to this property and other lots which have been the subject of previous correspondence and negotiations upon which rights and equities Mr. Phillips will also appeal and rely. The action of the City Council at last night's meeting if correctly reported, is, from my client's point of view, and in my opinion, nothing short of a municipal outrage, for which, if attempted to be carried out, the members of the City Council, who voted for it, will be held responsible to him in his private capacity and also in his capacity as a taxpayer of the City of Belleville.

Your obedient servant,

(Sgd.) W. N. PONTON,

Solicitor for J. P. C. Phillips

Ald. Panter asked if there was any ground for entering an action against the city.

Ald. McFee and Green thought that the whole matter was a bluff.

The Solicitor, in answer to Ald Panter's enquiry, said he didn't see what cause there was for any action against the city.

In answer to an enquiry if a by-law in regard to the matter would make it more binding, the Clerk said it might be well to pass a by-law.

Ald. McFee moved, seconded by Ald. Gordon, that a by-law be prepared to deed the lots to Mr. Caldwell. Carried.

Gas Debentures.

Ald. Gordon moved, seconded by Ald. Green, that the matter of the sale of gas debentures be referred to the Mayor, Chairman of the Executive and Treasurer, to try and negotiate the sale of the same. Carried.

A by-law regulating the building of a number of granolithic walks in the city was introduced.

The Council then went into Committee of the Whole on By-laws, Ald. Marsh in the chair.

The streets upon which the walks are to be built were named, the width of the walks and whether inside or outside of the trees, was considered and the by-laws were passed.

Where New Walks Will be Built.

Front Street, East side from Victoria Ave. to Pinnacle St., less that section already constructed.

Bleecker Avenue, East side, from Pine St. to Station St.

Pinnacle Street, East side, from Hotel Quinte to Bank of Montreal.

Big Naval Engagement Believed to Have Taken Place—Japanese Army Has Again Attacked the Russians in Manchuria..

St. Petersburg, May 5.—There are persistent rumors here of a naval engagement between the Vladivostok and Vice-Admiral Kamimura's squadrons, but no confirmation of the reports have been received here up to 1 o'clock this afternoon.

London, May 5.—A despatch to the Central News, dated at Seoul, Tuesday, says: "Heavy cannonading was heard off Gensen Monday and this morning. It is supposed that Rear-Admiral Urin's fleet has succeeded in engaging the Russian Vladivostok squadron."

London, May 5.—A special despatch from St. Petersburg this morning officially reports that the Japanese army already had advanced thirty-six versts beyond Sunday's battle towards Fenwangchong, where the Russian forces are gathered to bar the way to the Liao Yang. As the distance from the Yalu to Fenwangchong is only sixty versts, only twenty-four versts now separates the two armies. News of heavy fighting is expected hourly. St. Petersburg says Gen. Kuropatkin has ordered 32,000 more men from Liao Yang to Fenwangchong. Hardly had the above message been received when a second arrived from the capital declaring that the Japanese advance already had been resisted. It is believed another decisive battle is now raging.

London, May 5.—A despatch to the Central News from St. Petersburg says a rumor is current here that a second battle has been fought at Kiu Lien Cheng in which the Russian loss was 7,000 and the Japanese loss 10,000, and which resulted in the Japanese being driven back in disorder, Professional League May be Formed.

Montreal, May 4. — There is now little doubt here that during this summer the hockey magnates of Pittsburg and one or two other places will endeavor to form an American Hockey League on the lines of the professional baseball leagues. The co-operation of several Canadian teams will be absolutely necessary, and it is said that the increasing favor with which professionalism is regarded in Toronto, as shown by the recent lacrosse episode, is very encouraging to the Pittsburgers.

In Montreal it is believed a professional league team could be maintained with every chance of pecuniary success. The new rules regarding professionalism are going to deprive certain Canadian teams of an important part of their revenue, and there is a feeling abroad that amateur status may be paid for too high.

The present is a particularly opportune time for an attack upon the purely amateur position, because the undignified squabbles over the Stanley Cup and the professionalizing rules have greatly weakened it. In a word, the present position of the game is not such as to awaken great enthusiasm among its defenders.

The idea is a good one, and the formation of a professional league would be welcomed by the public, most of whom are tired of "amateurism," which is nothing better, in many cases, than veiled professionalism.

MAY BE HOT TIMES AT TWEED VILLAGE.

C.P.R. HAS MANY MEN TO GUARD ITS TRACKS THERE.

Tweed May 4.—Since the Railway Commission awarded the Bay of Quinte Railway the right of a diamond over the C.P.R. tracks to connect the new extension to Bannockburn with the present line, the B. of Q. R. R. have been grading their track up to the C. P. R. Yesterday the C.P.R. men were surprised to see that the B. of Q. track had been extended right up to theirs, and to prevent them from putting in the diamond they despatched 150 men to this village. The B. of Q. R., to prevent the destruction of their track already laid, got together a similar number, and watch on both sides is being kept night and day. Several C.P.R. detectives are constantly on the scene. The official car from Toronto arrived in Tweed last night, and it is thought some arrangement will be made to-day.

For Dominion Day.

The Committee which have in hand the arrangements for a demonstration here on Dominion Day are working to make it a decided success. Meetings are held at intervals to consult as to what is being done and on Monday evening next a general meeting will be held in the city building.

PROVINCIAL HEALTH BOARD.

Province Should Register All Cases of Tuberculosis—Canned Goods.

Toronto, May 5.—Consumption and means of grappling with it were the main topics before the Provincial Board of Health yesterday, which met under the presidency of Dr. Kitchen, St. George. There were present: Drs. Cassidy and Oldright, Toronto; Boucher, Peterboro; Thompson, Strathroy; Douglas, Cobourg, and Hodgetts, the secretary of the Board. Routine business having been disposed of, Dr. Hodgetts' first report, upon which Dr. Kitchen complimented him as being equal to that "of an old stager," was read.

The report fully considered various systems of notification in practice in tubercular cases. One paragraph said: "I am of the opinion it is proper this board should consider the adoption of some system of notification and registration of all cases of tuberculosis."

Not What They Seem.

The report of the laboratory was of an extensive character. A number of samples of canned goods had been examined, peas, corn, tomatoes, raspberries, strawberries, plums, peaches, black currants and apricot jams. Some copper and zinc, but in innocuous quantities, were found in tomatoes.

"None of the ordinary preservatives were found. Seasonings were few, in small quantities. Flavorings also were in limited quantities. The cheap jams were chiefly filled (apple or turnip pulp). In these very little of the fruit was present, simply enough to give a seed here and there through the mixture."

It was also stated that some of the seeds in the jams were not recognized. "They are not what they are labelled to be, and the matter will be pushed further."

The Irish Crimes Act.

London, May 5.—The House of Commons last night, by a vote of 197 to 124, rejected a resolution in favor of the repeal of the Irish Crimes Act. Geo. Wyndham, Chief Secretary for Ireland, said that the repeal of the Crimes Act could only do harm by reviving the angry passions now laid at rest.

John F. Redmond, leader of the Irish party, expressed his extreme dissatisfaction with Secretary Wyndham's statement, which he declared would lead the Irish people if they had the means into open rebellion.

Lost a Hand.

MEMORIAL FLAG FLIES

W. F. McCreary, M.P., Found Dead in His Room at Ottawa.

Senator Reid of British Columbia Also Dead—Western Member of the Commons Was Evidently the Victim of a Stroke, and Lay Dead For Sixteen Hours Before Being Discovered—Interment at Winnipeg.

Ottawa, May 5.—Last night the flag on the tower of the Parliament Buildings flies at half-mast in honor of the memory of two members of Parliament, who have been taken away within the past twenty-four hours. Senator Reid of British Columbia died after a lingering illness. The death of W. F. McCreary, M. P., for Selkirk, came with shocking suddenness. His body was discovered in his room at the Russell House, last evening, where it had evidently lain for some hours.

Chief Powell made the discovery at 6.30 o'clock. While leaving his room a chambermaid stated that she had not been able to get into the room all day, and that she feared something was wrong. Looking through the transom a portion of the body could be seen, and it was evident that the occupant of the room was dead. Chief Powell forced the door, and entering, the dead body of W. F. McCreary was found lying on the bed. The body lay in a natural position. William McCreary had evidently passed away in his sleep. It was clear that Mr. McCreary had no warning of the fatal stroke.

Chief Powell at once communicated with the coroner. Intimate friends of Mr. McCreary will break the news to the widow and seven children, who live in Winnipeg.

Members of Parliament were stunned by the news. As late as eleven o'clock Tuesday night Mr. McCreary was in the House, apparently in his usual good health, taking part in the debate. He was the picture of health. Hardly fifty years of age, of massive frame, strong, rugged face and the muscles of an athlete. W. F. McCreary was one of the last in the House who would have been thought of as likely to meet an early death.

Only two or three of his nearest friends had ever heard a murmur of complaint from him. To these friends, it appears, Mr. McCreary had recently complained of dull pains in his chest. It is said also that on one or two occasions last session he admitted that his heart was not strong.

The doctors who were called in considered an inquest unnecessary. They said Mr. McCreary had been dead for probably sixteen hours when he was found. Death was attributed to heart disease. The body was taken to Rogers' undertaking establishment.

Interment will take place at Winnipeg, whence the body will be conveyed by the Winnipeg train leaving Ottawa to-day at one o'clock.

House Adjourns in Sadness.

As a special mark of respect to the memory of Mr. McCreary the House adjourned soon after meeting last night. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said the circumstances of Mr. McCreary's death were all the more sad in that they came so unexpectedly upon us. Like Mr. Cargill, Mr. McCreary was apparently in the best of health up to the last moment.

"Indeed only yesterday," said the Premier, "he was engaged with us in debate and defending his opinions on the most important questions. While thus addressing the House the hand of death was already upon him, which shows how true it is that we are only shadows and only shadows pursue. I am sure that Mr. McCreary had on both sides of the House only friends. He was of an ardent temperament, defended his opinions with vigor, and at all times enjoyed the keenness of debate, but there was no more kind-hearted man in the House. Even those who did not share his opinions respected his views and cherished his kindly disposition. We have had many evidences since the news of his death spread through the House, that on the other side as well as this the feeling of mourning is very deep."

Tribute From Opposition.

Dr. Sproule, in the absence of the leader of the Opposition, replied. "The death of a colleague under such circumstances," he said, "overshadowed not only the House, but the part of the country which loses its representative. It is marked with additional sadness when, as in this instance, one who was in the prime of life only yesterday, taking part in the duties of his position, is so suddenly called from among us and we shall see him no more forever. On behalf of this side of the House, I say with pleasure that we always found the late Mr. McCreary a most sociable, genial and kind-hearted man, attentive to his duties, assiduous at his work and always endeavoring faithfully to represent his people and work in the best interests of his country."

Hon. Clifford Sifton, who was a law student with Mr. McCreary 24 years ago, also referred feelingly to the death of his colleague.

The House then adjourned.

Sketch of His Career.

William Forsythe McCreary was born at Pakenham, Lanark County, Ont., on May 5, 1855. His father, Jas. McCreary, was an Irishman from County Armagh, while his mother, Elizabeth Wallace, was a Scotswoman from Glasgow on the Clyde. Educated in the Public, Grammar and High Schools of Arnprior, he became a barrister at law, removed to Winnipeg, where he sat in the City Council as alderman during the years 1883 and 1884, and again in 1895 and 1896. The following year saw him occupying the Mayoralty chair. From 1897 to 1900 he acted as Dominion Commissioner of Immigration, and entered the Federal House of Commons at the general election of 1900 as a Liberal. Mr. McCreary was married in 1882 to Annie Ellis Guene, and in church matters was an attached member of the Methodist community.

LIBERAL AGAINST LIBERAL.

A Political Dish on the Side in the House of Commons.

Ottawa, May 5.—Liberal warred with Liberal in a tariff discussion which took place in the House yesterday concerning the needs of the Canadian West. Towards the close of the controversy a few Conservatives took sides with the exponents of high tariff. The issue was British Columbia versus Manitoba and the Northwest Territories. Aulay Morrison, M.P., for New Westminster, pleaded the case of the British Columbia manufacturers, who, he said, were being driven to the wall by unfair competition from United States lumbermen. He attributed the whole trouble to the insufficiency of the tariff on lumber. He was followed by the Liberal members from British Columbia and their colleagues from Manitoba and the Territories. The British Columbians accused Manitoba and the Territories of selfishness in demanding protection for what they produce while denying to British Columbia lumber the measure of protection which would ensure for it a Canadian market. To this members from Manitoba and the Territories replied that the British Columbian lumbermen had organized a combine which had put the price of lumber away up and made United States competition possible.

Hon. W. S. Fielding, in words that left the intentions of the Government in the matter of tariff revision artistically obscure, deprecated the introduction of a debate on the tariff at such a time, but promised that the representations should be dully considered.

Letter Carriers Plaint.

Sir William Mulock informed the House that petitions had been received from letter carriers in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa and other cities respecting grievances said to arise from the amended Postoffice Act. So far 239 letter carriers have taken advantage of the statute. The number who failed to come in within the original time limit, three months, was 232. Some of the latter carriers wanted additional time in which to come in.

The House then went into committee on the Transcontinental Railway Bill.

Fast Freight Wrecked.

Windsor, May 5.—The fast freight, leaving Windsor at 1.30 yesterday, ran into a flat car loaded with lumber at Higgs' Siding, about twenty-three miles from Windsor. The fireman, Geo. Blois, was thrown out of the cab, and while crawling up the bank to get out of the way the forward truck of the tender broke, and one of the wheels ran over his right leg, crushing the bones below the knee. Engineer Hennessey was buried under the cab, and crawled out from an incredibly small place unhurt. The engine was smashed beyond repair.

10,000 Pounds of Powder Exploded.

Newport, Ind., May 5.—A powder mill owned by the Northwestern Powder Company, three miles from Newport, was blown up yesterday. Four men were killed outright and two were injured. Ten thousand pounds of powder exploded, and the bodies of two of the men were blown into such small pieces that they could not be picked up.

PORT ARTHUR SAID TO BE IN DANGER OF ISOLATION.

Viceroy Alexieff Leaves That Place in a Hurry.

Japanese Preparing to Land Troops Since the Harbor Has Been Sealed Up—Togo Still Working—Russians Fear Japs Will Capture All Their Stores Accumulated at Fengwangcheng—Heavy Mortality of Correspondents.

London, May 6.—Viceroy Alexieff's departure from Port Arthur is interpreted here to mean that the place is in imminent danger of isolation and the Japanese preparations for landing are considered as confirming the belief that Port Arthur has been sealed up, probably by two of the sunken ships which the Russians failed to locate.

Togo Still Working.

According to The Daily Telegraph's Tokio correspondent, to-day's Jiji Shimpo says: "Our fleet has not returned to its rendezvous and is still engaged in the execution of a prearranged program. There is reason to believe that the Japanese intend landing their second army at Newchwang upon the successful bottling up of Port Arthur."

The Daily Mail's Paris correspondent hears that Russia has cancelled its contracts for a supply of coal, en route to the Far East, which were made with a view to the despatch of the Baltic fleet.

The Berlin correspondent of The Daily Mail asserts that the Russian military authorities are in a state of the most extreme anxiety regarding the chances of saving the baggage of the Yalu army. The roads are so bad that a wheeled transport is able to move only five miles daily and it is feared that the Japanese will capture all the stores accumulated at Fengwangchang.

No Change in Situation.

Despatches received from Port Arthur yesterday afternoon and from Newchwang Wednesday, report no change in the situation, so far, no confirmation has reached London of the Japanese preparations for landing on the coast of the Liaotung peninsula.

According to The Daily Telegraph's Shanaikwan correspondent, M. Pavloffs, Russian minister to Corea, has gone to Pekin for the purpose of endeavoring to induce China to cede to the Russian administration the Chinese railways, from Koupangize to Sinmintung, and Yinkow, for military purposes.

Why There Is No News.

The absence of press despatches telling of the fight on the Yalu is partially explained by the heavy mortality among the correspondents. Three of the Novosti's correspondents are missing, and it is believed they were killed, while The Russ lost one of its correspondents. The other journals are wiring to ascertain if their representatives are alive.

The Japs Have Landed.

Tokio, May 6.—(12 noon.)—It is officially announced that Japanese forces began landing on the Liaotung Peninsula yesterday. The place where the landing is occurring and the number of men being landed is withheld.

More Dead Russians.

Tokio, May 6.—A telegram has been received here from Gen. Kuroki, dated May 3, in which he reports that a careful search of the battle-field of last Sunday revealed two hundred additional wounded and dead Russians.

Rumor of Terrible Battle.

London, May 6.—A despatch to The Central News from St. Petersburg says a rumor is current there that a second battle has been fought at Kiulienchong, in which the Russian loss was 7,000, the Japanese loss 10,000 men, and resulted in the Japanese being driven back in disorder. The despatch adds that no confirmation of this report is obtainable.

Naval Battle Rumored.

London, May 6.—A despatch to The Central News, dated at Seoul, Tuesday, says: "Heavy cannonading was heard off Gensan (on the east coast of Corea) Monday and this morning. It is supposed that Rear-Admiral Uriu's fleet has succeeded in engaging the Russian Vladivostock squadron."

The Jap Squadron.

Port Arthur, May 6.—The Japanese squadron is behind the Liaoshan Promontory, south of Port Arthur. Transports, with Japanese troops on board, have arrived at Piasewo, northeast of Port Arthur, with the object of making a landing.

Seen Near Kinchou.

Newchwang, May 6.—Five Japanese warships, with a large number of transports, have been seen near Kinchou Bay, on the west coast of the Liaotung Peninsula, north of Port Arthur.

May Die From Wound.

Brockville, May 6.—John Bailey, the eleven-year-old son of C. Bailey of Alexandria Bay, N.Y., lies in St. Vincent de Paul Hospital here, probably fatally injured. He and some companions were shooting at a target at Alexandria Bay Wednesday, when the rifle they were using was accidentally discharged, the ball entering the lad's abdomen. His condition is critical.

Serious to Britain.

Literary Notes.

THE JUNE DESIGNER.

Fashions, fancywork and fiction are the strong points of The Designer for June. There are all kinds of cool and dainty things in the apparel line, and a special article on "The Shirt Waist Costume," while aside from the regular "Lesson in Millinery" there are directions for "Making a Raffia Hat," "Pillow Lace," "Bags, Cushion Tops and Buffet Spreads in Cross Stitch," "Stocks and Yokes in Fancy Fagotting," and "Baby Cap and Stock Collar" in tatting comprise the fancywork; and "Mothers' Higher Education," "A Morning Call," and "The Land of Wish-to-be" supply the fiction. The practical articles are "Pet Stock Farming," "Club Rooms for Girls," "Mother Burleigh and Her Rugs," and "The Home Kindergarten," the entertainment features being "A Rose Luncheon," "A Trip Around the World," and "Knots and Whatnots." A liberal supply of verse is given this month, and it is of unusually good quality.

WILSHIRE'S FOR MAY.

Julian Hawthorne, in the May number of Wilshire's Magazine, has a diverting discussion of "Woman and Socialism." Another article, "The Foreign Peril," pays tribute to America's foreign born citizens and ridicules the idea that they constitute a menace to "American institutions."

3 MISERABLE MONTHS

South American Nervine cured this severe case of a generally upset nervous system which developed into Neuralgia of the stomach. No nervous trouble that it will not cure quickly and permanently.

William Davidson, of Thedford, Ont., put in three miserable months of very acute suffering from neuralgia of the stomach and a generally disordered nervous system. Doctors failed to find any treatment that would give me any permanent help. A friend, whom South American Nervine had cured of a very stubborn case of stomach trouble, recommended it for his case. He tried it—one bottle greatly benefited and six bottles effected a permanent cure. 90

DEGRADING THE CIVIL SERVICE.

People in touch with Parliamentary events will remember that, about a year ago, Hon. Wm. Paterson, Minister of Customs, asked Parliament to vote a sum sufficient to enable him to appoint a Deputy Commissioner of Customs. It was explained to the House that the Commissioner was so over-worked that an assistant was indispensible. The Conservatives offered no objection to the appointment and Mr. John Bain, Mr. Paterson's private secretary, was given the position. The salary was fixed at $2,800. But a beautiful state of affairs has resulted. Mr. Bain never ceased to be the private secretary of the Minister of Customs. The enormous amount of work that was awaiting the Assistant Commissioner vanished into thin air as soon as the salary was voted. Moreover, Mr. Paterson had the bad taste to order Mr. Bain to write campaign literature and the result is a series of attacks on the Conservative party known as "Political Pointers Nos. 1, 2 and 3." The work of the Department was allowed to stand over while the Opposition were being abused by this civil servant. Considering that Mr. Paterson has dismissed more employees since 1896 for political partizanship than any other Minister, the situation stands out in the worst possible light. Mr. Bain had no right to pen the matter, which is to to used against the Conservative party at the next general election, and Mr. Paterson is guilt of a worse offence in ordering his employee to violate his oath of office. It is a degrading spectacle to see a man, who has himself turned men out of office for trivial offences, committing and ordering to be committed acts of partizanship far more serious than those for which heads of families were turned adrift. Mr. Paterson spent thousands of dollars to find pretexts for dismissing officials from his employ, and he now, appears in the role of one who has ordered a public servant to out-Herod Herod. It is a delightful spectacle. Mr. Bain should be dismissed from the service, or Mr. Paterson, if guilty of forcing his secretary to write the pamphlets, should be left at home when the next opportunity offers.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"OLD LAVENDER."

"A Diamond in an Ash Barrel" is what Mrs. Chrittien of the San Francisco Examiner called "Old Lavender" when first played at the Golden Gate. Edward Harrigan had some great contemporaries in those days. There was John E. Owens, Joseph Jefferson, Sol Smith Russell and John Raymond to compete with and this one role placed Harrigan in the line with the best character actors of the period. The fact that he was a clever author was not considered by the public. The newspapers knew it, but the people went to see him play. Since those days we have seen upwards of twenty successes from the pen of this able author and actor, masterpieces of realistic comedy without a single failure. Edward Harrigan with many of the old favorites of his company in this same "Old Lavender" is the attraction offered at the Carman next Monday, May 9.

A Slight Accident.

Yesterday afternoon, as the hook and ladder waggon was going down street at a fast gait, it struck a dogcart in which was seated Mr. Wm. Hadrell, of Sidney. The occupant was thrown out, but fortunately escaped serious injuries. Mr. Hadrell's horse then ran away, but was captured before proceeding far. Some damage was sustained to the conveyance.

A GOOD COMPLEXION

Is a joy to every woman's heart and man is vain enough not to despise it. Beautiful complexion means pure blood, or in other words a healthy body. Tens of thousands of women take Ferrozone because it's a splendid blood builder, keeps the system in perfect order and helps the complexion wonderfully. "I consider Ferrozone the best remedy to give you a clear, ruddy complexion I know of," writes Miss Ada E. Brandon, of Pembroke." My skin used to be sallow, but after taking a few boxes of Ferrozone a rosy tint was noticeable on my cheeks. I can recommend Ferrozone as a tonic also." For good health and beauty use only Ferrozone. Price 50c. at druggists.

Get My Book, If Sick.

Don't Send a Penny.

Don't send a penny.

Just wait till you see what I can do.

Let me take the risk. Let me prove up first what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do. The Restorative will gain your friendship, your endorsement, if you test it. And for a whole month you can use it without the slightest risk.

I will tell you of a druggist near you who will furnish six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Restorative a month on trial.

I will absolutely stand all the cost if it fails. If you say, "It did not help me," that ends it as far as cost to you is concerned. Do you understand me? I am telling it as plainly, as clearly as I can. I want you to know absolutely and without doubt that this offer is made on honor. I have the prescription that cures. My only problem is to convince you that Dr. Shoop's Restorative will cure—is an uncommon remedy. A common remedy could not stand a test like this. It would bankrupt the physician making the offer. And I am succeeding everywhere and here is the secret of my success. I found invariably that where there was a weakness, the inside nerves were weak. Where there was a lack of vitality, the vital nerves lacked power. Where weak organs were found, I always found weak nerves. Not the nerves commonly thought of but the vital organs' nerves. The inside — the invisible nerves.

This was a revelation. Then my real success began. Then I combined ingredients that would strengthen, that would vitalize those nerves. That prescription I called a Restorative. It is known the world over now as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Thousands are accepting my offer and only one in each forty writes me that my remedy failed. Just think of it. 39 out of 40 get well and these are difficult cases, too. And the fortieth has nothing to pay. That is a record I am proud of. It is wrong to stay sick when a chance like this is open. If well, you should tell others who are sick, of my offer. Don't let a sick friend stay sick because he knows not of my offer. Tell him. Get my book for him. Do your duty. You may be sick yourself, sometime. Sick people need help. They appreciate sympathy and aid. Tell me of some sick friend. Let me cure him. Then he will show to both of us his gratitude. Your reward will be his gratitude. Send for the book now.

Do not delay.

Simply state which book you want and address Dr. Shoop, Box 69, Racine, Wis.	Book 1 on Dyspepsia. Book 2 on the Heart. Book 3 on the Kidneys Book 4 for Women. Book 5 for Men (sealed.) Book 6 on Rheumatism.

FORMER BELLEVILLE POETESS IN TROUBLE

MARIE JOUSSAYE CHARGED WITH FRAUD IN DAWSON CITY.

(Toronto Star.)

Marie Joussaye, formerly a well-known journalistic woman of Toronto and other eastern cities, and who drifted into Dawson City two or three years ago with letters of introduction purporting to be signed by many influential gentlemen, was arrested a few days ago on two charges of obtaining money under false pretences. A letter received today by Chief Inspector J. W. Murray, of the Provincial detective force, from the Mounted Police Department of Dawson City, asks for information about her.

Last December she was married in Dawson City to an ex-constable of the force named Fotheringham. The present charges against her are said to arise out of some mining deal which she was personally conducting. She had staked some properties back at Clear Creek, and appears to have been floating a company among her acquaintances. Mrs. Rose Kirkpatrick charges her with misappropriating $350, the proceeds of certain diamonds, and Miss Caroline Meredith makes a similar charge with regard to $250. Mrs. Fotheringham was remanded, being released in her own surety for $500 and two sureties of $250 each, signed by Rev. Dr. Andrew S. Grant and Frank A. McKay.

In Dawson City Mrs. Fotheringham appears to have impressed the residents with her capabilities and reputation as a journalist, and a rumor was in circulation that she is a cousin of Lord Strathcona.

Ten or fifteen years ago Miss Joussaye worked for several of the Toronto papers, and some of her articles over the signature "Only a Working Girl," attracted considerable attention. She undertook, at one time to organize the working women of the city for the purpose of increasing their wages and better their conditions. She was an eloquent speaker, and made free use of poetry, such as the following:

"There are ninety and nine who must live and die
 In hunger and want and cold;
That one may revel in luxury,
 Enveloped in its silken fold,
And the one owns houses, and gold,
 and lands;
But the ninety and nine have empty hands."

Miss Joussaye took an active part in the Sunday car campaign, and was a strong platform advocate of the innovation. She came to Toronto from Belleville, and went west from here.

Our Smart Fire Brigade.

Shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the fire brigade were called out and quickly responded to the alarm, which proved to be a false one. The many visitors in the city were complimentary in their remarks in reference to the alacrity with which the brigade responded.

Two in One
SHOE POLISH

First came the old fashioned liquid polish, that blacked shoes without shining them. The bottle-and-box combination was an improvement, but meant too much hard work.

"2 In 1" is the perfection of shoe polishes. It's a Paste that embraces the good points of all other polishes, with none of their faults. One application—one rubbing—and the shoes are shined. It's made of pure oils, that preserve the leather.

Contains no acids or turpentine.

When you think of the splitting of wood, carrying of coal and dumping of ashes—the tiresome weariness of a summer with a coal or wood range—the dirt and heat of the kitchen—you'll turn with joy to the helpfulness of the

Oxford Gas Range

It means a cool, clean, cheerful kitchen all summer. No fire except when you are using it. No trouble—just the lasting satisfaction of a perfect cooking apparatus.

The Jury's Verdict.

An English coroner had directed the jury in a suicide case to find a verdict of felo de se. "Well, chaps," said the foreman of the jury when they had retired to consider the verdict, "it appears to me that this 'ere chap shot 'isself with a gun after shootin' another chap with a gun, but Dr. Jones, the coroner, who we all know and 'ighly respect, 'e says that this 'ere chap fell in the sea. Well, it ain't for the likes of us to go arguin' the point with the doctor, for 'e knows more about it than we do. So, I propose we find a verdict of found drowned"—and they did.

Browning's Maid.

Browning had a maid in his service who had a gift for saying quaint things. When the poet was going to pay the last mark of respect to George Henry Lewes, she said she "didn't see the good of catching cold at other people's funerals." And once, when he was away on a holiday and a journalist came to the door to inquire if it was true that the poet was dead, she indignantly answered, "I have not heard so, and I am sure my master is not the kind of a man to do such a thing without letting us know."

India's Varied Cuckoos.

In the matter of cuckoos India can give points to the British isles. The good folk at home see only one species of cuckoo, and that spends less than half its time on the British shores; we in India, on the other hand, can boast of an avifauna in which the subfamily cuculinæ is represented by no fewer than thirty species.

Problem In Millinery.

"Why, oh, why," remarked the observer of events and things, "will a woman smile with delight when she sees a hat in a milliner's window and frown when she sees the same hat on her neighbor's head?"

Reciprocity.

She—But if you say you can't bear the girl, why ever did you propose? He—Well, her people have always been awfully good to me, and it's the only way I could return their hospitality.—Punch.

A Bright Scholar.

Teacher—Do you know anything about algebra? Bertie Young—Please, teacher, I do. It's a mule what is covered with stripes. I saw one at a circus.

The average man will die for want of air in five minutes; for want of water in a week; for want of sleep in ten days.

Take a good book slowly. You see much finer country in a mover's wagon than you do from a car window.

NEGLIGEES AND TEA GOWNS

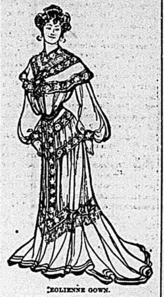
Quaint French Flannel Pattern—China Silk and Flowered Challie.

Accordion plaited negligees are worn with flowered petticoats, and some of these little, short affairs reach only to below the waist line.

A pretty pattern in French flannel is cut in points. One falls on the middle of the arm, another in the back, and two cross in front. Two little straps hold in the arm underneath each sleeve point. This is very pretty made of pink flannel with a banding of white flannel polka dotted in black.

One of the prettiest negligees, or tea gowns, is made of ribbons and lace alternately sewn together.

China silk, both plain and colored, forms dainty negligees, and so do flowered challies. The latter wash beautifully and look each time as good as new.



ÆOLIENNE GOWN.

Wide lace collars, which are inexpensive and trim an otherwise plain garment so that it hardly needs anything else, will be found very useful in making these simple little negligees.

The cut shows a gown of colienne in a lavender shade trimmed with bands of ecru lace and a deep violet ribbon.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

No Question About It.

Mrs. Benham—Well, if worst comes to worst I can keep the wolf away from the door by singing. Benham—You can if he has a correct ear for music.

Vividly Described.

The reporter from whose account of a fire the following is quoted must himself, says the representative of a rival journal, have been in great danger of being consumed by the fire of his own eloquence:

"The water seemed to spur the fire to wilder deeds. The flames and the smoke rolled higher and higher, and the scene became luridly, awfully magnificent, beyond tottering words' power to paint. It was a canto of Dante's 'Inferno' acted in all its fiery pomp and splendor. Banners of flame would now be waved out by dark smoke bands, then ten million curling little pennons of the fire would hiss and flutter, then vanish, and a great reeling tower of smoke, whose darkness was stabbed and spangled with flames and sparks, would fill the buildings, grimly shoot back from reflected surfaces a crimson greeting, and up in the far-off sky the outglistened stars turned pale for shame and the moon through the drifted smoke glowed like a bowl of blood."

The Olive.

The olive has been applied for various medicinal purposes since old Rameses I. held sway over his dark skinned subjects in northern Africa. In the days of ancient Rome the leaves and bark of the tree were used by the remarkable medical experts of that time to allay and cure violent attacks of intermittent fever, while the resinous gum which exuded from the tree in the hot season was used for many of the ills to which flesh is heir. The oil of the olive itself later was used by the Roman athletes to soothe their heated bodies after indulging in heroic attempts to break the early records for 100 yard dashes and putting the discus or shot. Then the oil of the wild olive was employed as an extraordinary panacea, guaranteed to stop the ravages of all ailments. Last of all, in more modern times the women of our own day use the olive oil in the form of soap to beautify the complexion by softening the pores and nourishing the skin itself.

A TIP ON THE DARDANELLES.

War Between Russia and Japan Will Not Affect the Dardanelles.

While the attention of the civilized world is turned to the East, we think the moment an opportune one to deny the statement made recently that the Dardanelles might be affected by the war between Russia and Japan. All smokers are convinced of the fact that the quality of the Dardanelles pure Egyptian cigarette is always uniform. A trial will prove this fact beyond the shadow of a doubt.

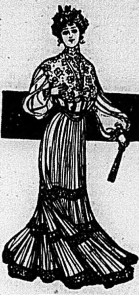
COLORS AND MODES.

Wide Belts and Shirt Waist Suits. Green Being Revived.

There is at present a craze for wide belts, and this applies to all styles of dress, from the simple walking costume to the most elaborate evening or reception gown.

Gowns made with skirts clearing the ground all around and the waists blousing back and front over a wide knit belt are ultra smart. The waists of such gowns are usually made with a long shoulder effect and neatly stitched tucks. The skirts are very full and kilted, being merely held down as far as the knee. If the costume is of blue serge or linen a pretty idea is to have the tie and belt of scarlet. The same touch of scarlet may be repeated in the French sailor hat which goes with this.



CHIFFON GOWN.

Green is a color now being industriously "boomed" by the shops and dressmakers. It will be much seen in foulard.

Pale green cloth is being made up by smart dressmakers. It is combined with a heavy silvery white lace worked out with much embroidery.

Ruffled undersleeves are the prettiest and the newest. The foundation is of china silk or mousseline, and on this is sewed row upon row of narrow lace or chiffon ruffling edged with a tiny beading, often of a contrasting color. Thus a pair of undersleeves designed to go with a blue cloth gown were of pale blue mousseline de soie edged with tiny beading in black and white.

The picture shows a gown of putty colored chiffon. The bands of lace and fichu collar are dyed to match.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

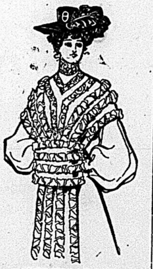
NOVEL FASHION FEATURES.

Shirrings of Every Sort the Rage. Dyed Lace Very Popular.

Shirred effects are the most prominent feature of fashion just now. A dress recently made for a bride had a wide shirring of many rows, like a collar, which came well over the shoulders. Below this the fullness spread out into a blouse, which pouched over a chiffon velvet belt both at the back and at the front. The same shirring extended well over the tops of the sleeves, which were very full and were confined at the wrist in a wide cuff of veiling lined with a double frill of lace. Around the neck and falling down the front there was a stole of chiffon velvet with fringed ends. The skirt was very full, with three wide tucks for sole trimming.

Dyed lace has become so popular that it is now almost the rule instead of the exception.

The picture hat is very much out of place with the tailor made gown. With the latter should be worn one of the small trim shapes now so much the fashion.



SPRING STOLE AND MUFF.

The all black hat is coming back into style again, particularly with the gray gown, and this is a very French combination.

A cream lace hat properly made looks well on a woman of any age.

Accordion plaited costumes will be seen again both for house and street wear. Nothing can be smarter than an accordion plaited bolero and skirt of fine black cloth worn with a lacy white waist and a big white hat.

The cut shows a spring stole and muff of taffeta in plain and shirred bands.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

CAME NEAR DYING

CURED BY CUTICURA

One Application Soothed Him to Sleep. Cure Speedy and Permanent.

"When my little boy was about three months old his head broke out with a rash, which was very itchy and ran considerable watery fluid. We tried everything we could, but he got worse all the time till it spread to his arms, legs, and then to his entire body, and he got so bad that he came near dying. The rash would itch so that he would scratch till the blood ran, and a thin yellowish stuff would be all over his pillow in the morning. I had to put mittens on his hands to keep him from tearing his skin around his wrists. He got so weak and run down that he took fainting spells like we would think him dying. He was almost a skeleton and his little hands were thin like claws.

"He was bad about eight months when we tried Cuticura Remedies. I had not laid him down in his cradle in the daytime for a long time. He had got so that he just slept in our arms all the time. I washed him with Cuticura Soap and put on one application of Cuticura Ointment and he was so soothed that I put him in the cradle. You don't know how glad I felt when he felt better. It took one box of Cuticura Ointment, pretty near one cake of Cuticura Soap, and about half a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, to cure. I think our little boy would have died only for the Cuticura Remedies, and I shall always remain a firm friend of them."

MRS. M. C. MAITLAND, JASPER, ONTARIO.

No return in 14 years. Mrs. Maitland writes, under date of Feb. 24, 1903, that the cure is permanent.

"It affords me much pleasure to inform you that it is fourteen years since my boy was cured of the terrible skin disease from which he suffered.

"He has been permanently cured and is hearty and strong."

Cuticura Resolvent, liquid and in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chemical Corp., Sole Proprietors. Meet Me at the Inside Inn.

Never Before Did a Great World's Fair Have a Big Hotel Inside the Grounds.

RATES WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

"Meet me at the Inside Inn." That will be the expression most frequently heard at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. This hotel is an immense structure, 400 feet wide and 800 feet long, with 2,257 sleeping rooms and a dining room seating 2,500 persons. The hotel is inside the Exposition grounds, and operated under the supervision of the Exposition management. It is well appointed and furnished in modern up-to-date style, and will be the center of social affairs in the way of dinners and family reunions inside the grounds.

This hotel is in the southeast portion of the grounds, not far from the Plateau of States, and to the north a short distance are the famous Cascade Gardens, Festival Hall and Connade of States, which form a part of the main picture of the Exposition. Street Railways running by the door go direct to the Union Railway station downtown, and the Intramural Road, inside the grounds, carried guests from the hotel entrance to all points of interest. Here is a cool retreat, where persons can find rest, enjoyment and quietude away from the noise and crush of the crowds along the avenues of the Exposition grounds. Sightseeing at a large Exposition is the most tiresome pleasure, because the mind is busily engaged and finds diversion by constantly changing scenes, while the body is becoming weary and the visitor does not realize how tired he is until he stops to rest. The place to rest is the Inside Inn. The hotel rates cover the daily admission fee to the grounds, and the registered guest at this hotel is free from the annoyance of pushing through the crowds at the gates. There are 500 rooms at $1.50 per person, 500 at $2.00, 500 at $2.50.

The Inside Inn will long be remembered as a distinctive feature of the largest Universal Fair ever held in the world—a fair representing a total cost of $50,000,000 and as large in size as the Columbian, the Pan-American and the Paris fairs combined.

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

The truthfulness of what a man says doesn't always depend on the amount of noise he makes in saying it.

HOW IT SPREADS.

The first package of Hem-Roid (the infallible Pile cure) that was put out went to a small town in the State of Nebraska.

It made the cure of a case of Piles that was considered hopeless.

The news spread and although this was only two years ago the demand prompted Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., the discoverer, to prepare it for general use. Now it is being sent to all parts of the world.

It will cure any case of Piles. There is a month's treatment in each box.

Sold for $1.00, with absolute guarantee.

It is for sale by druggists.

Sold in Belleville by J. S. McKeown.

BY ST, GEORGE RATHBORNE

of the drawing-room or parlor of the hotel and avails himself of the opportunity to take a look in the direction where he saw Molly standing. She is still there, but seated upon a Turkish divan; and at her side is the little war correspondent, talking earnestly. Joe's heart gives a bound of pure delight when he notes the look of pleased surprise spreading over her fair countenance as she hears Sandy's marvelous tale; for the latter is used to making the most of any news; it is his daily business, and surely time has never given him a morsel he can enlarge upon with more pleasure than the valor of his dear friend Joe.

"God bless him—he's a comrade worth having. In battle brave as a lion despite his size; in time of trouble a wise counselor. I hope the day will come when I can do as much for Sandy."

Thus muttering, Mynheer Joe moves along the corridor until he finally reaches the door to which he has been directed. He makes a survey and finds that the light flows from the windows, which is a pretty good indication that the inmate has not retired. Boldly he knocks—this thing has to be gone through with, and the sooner he starts at it the better. Besides, Joe has a pretty good idea that he holds the trumps and can best Demosthenes Tanner as readily at argument as he did in the duel.

"Come in!" roars a voice that would scare a crocodile half to death.

Mynheer Joe opens the door and pushes through into the room, surprising the giant in the act of saturating a handkerchief with the extract of hammamelis, as Joe instantly recognizes the odor. His back is toward the door, and he does not even turn his head to see who it is.

"A beastly long time coming, Tom! Told Molly to send you here half an hour back. Don't ask what's the matter now. Been in one of my usual rows, you see; only the seventh since leaving Constantinople. This time met a Tartar. Infernal rascal played with me. Just think of it—played with the only Tanner as a cat does a mouse, and then when he got tired, knocked me out. If I could only have him alone in this room five minutes. I'd let him know I ain't so green as I look, if I was caught napping once! Here, Tom, you old heathen, take hold and tie this handkerchief back of my head. Have a stiff neck for a week most likely. Not so tight, you murdering Hoosier! D'ye want to kill me outright? There—that'll do. Now sit down and have a glass with me. Be social, if it is past midnight. That's the best part of the day in this abominable country. Why don't you say something, you miserable mute! What! You? Death and furies! Here's treachery!"

The roar he gives as his one uncovered eye falls upon the face and figure of Mynheer Joe is absolutely appalling. He starts back and attempts to throw himself into an attitude of defense, but striking an obstacle, he sits down in an easy chair so forcibly, that the breath is driven from his huge body, and he can only sit there and gasp, blinking at Joe like a great owl.

The latter is strongly tempted to laugh. There is something so ridiculous in all this affair, but he realizes that such an act must forever ruin his chances of a reconcilation. He must control himself until a more favorable opportunity comes about.

Acting upon this impulse of the moment, he holds out his hand.

"Mr. Tanner, I have come here to beg your pardon for what has occurred. It was all a misunderstanding on my part. I want you to shake hands with me and tell me you bear no malice," he says frankly.

Demosthenes Tanner grins a little, but as yet makes no move toward accepting the proffered hand. His neck twinges, and this sets him against his late antagonist.

"Fine words don't cure a stiff neck, sir. I confess I admire the way you took the part of a small man, and your style of using your dukes nearly won my heart; but I refrain from making a peace, for I live in hopes of having another set-to, when I may have my revenge," replies this singular specimen of Western chivalry.

"That will be impossible, sir. I will never strike a blow against you again since I have learned that you are Miss Molly's father."

"What the deuce has she to do with it? If you and I choose to engage in a little sport of our own, whose business is it?" growls Tanner, his hand now slowly advancing to meet that of the honorable antagonist, whom he respects as a foeman worthy of his steel.

"I repeat what I said, sir. I am sorry to have struck you. You must pardon my indiscretion—for Molly's sake."

"Now, that's twice you've brought her name into the affair. What in the mischief has she to do with it? What is she to you? I don't ever remember seeing you before to-night. Molly has a regiment of admirers, but she introduces me to every one. Who are you, sir?"

"I am know as Mynheer Joe, sir, a corruption of my real name."

"Ah, the fellow they're all talking about! Been up with Gordon, eh?" Great man, that Gordon—wonderful man! Tell me something about him. Since it was you who put me into this fix, it's only fair to insist on you amusing me."

"Presently, Mr. Tanner. First, are you going to shake hands with me?"

"By Jove, yes, sir! I like your looks. I like the way you swung that terrible right arm into my neck—I like you! There's my hand, and once Demosthenes Tanner gives it he never goes back on a friend."

Mynheer Joe has won, and as yet he has only made a beginning. Flushed with victory he squeezes the huge fist of the governor, who looks very amiable in his eyes now. Circumstances alter cases. The bull-like roar of the Western orator will never seem the same to him after this.

"Perhaps I have a claim on your friendship, Mr. Tanner," he says modestly.

"How's that. Unbosom yourself, my boy."

"It seems like egotism to speak of it, but your daughter will soon be telling you. I had the extreme pleasure of jumping overboard at Malta, a year back, and assisting Miss Molly when she was thrown into the water."

Tanner gives another roar. He actually throws his arms around Mynheer Joe and hugs him much after the bear style. The explorer's ribs threaten to give way under the pressure, and he is immeasurably relieved when Tanner has finished his demonstration, which is accompanied by a string of delighted expletives and a running fire of questions.

Mynheer Joe explains matters as best he can, telling why he hurried away without waiting to give even his name or meet the father of the young girl whose life he had saved. The orator has evidently fallen deeply in love with him; he keeps his eyes constantly on Joe's face and rubs his hands together in a delighted manner.

The victory is so complete that Joe cannot but feel proud. He only hopes Sandy may have as earnest a measure of success in the other direction. Knowing the capacity of his friend for accomplishing what he sets out to perform, he does not much doubt the ultimate result of the other's quiet interview with Molly.

There is something more to tell, and he believes the opportunity is ripe for it. This is the line of thought advanced between Sandy and himself, and which concerns the probable outcome of the difficulty between Tanner and the baron, had it been allowed to go on.

Tanner listens with wondering eyes and nodding head. It is all news to him, and yet he can easily believe it. Certain circumstances combine to force him to this conclusion.

"So," he burst out with, at the conclusion of the recital, "I was near being the victim of a conspiracy, eh? Perhaps the rascal had an idea he could run off with my girl, once the old man was out of the way. And you really saved my life by stepping in? Mynheer Joe, I am your debtor forever? Show me a way by means of which I can repay you. The baron is a Russian secret agent on his way to Indian. eh? Perhaps we'll see more of him. I'm something of a diplomat myself, once I put my mind on it. Now, do you know what Demosthenes Tanner has a good notion to do? Set up in opposition to this rascally baron—play him for a sucker and land him in the arms of the British in Bombay. Why not—I come of old English stock, and my sympathies are against the movement of the bear in the direction of Fair India. Now don't think me a fool—I reckon I can meet him even, brain for brain, and give him points. As for his dogs of war, I match 'em here," and the orator, with an astonishingly rapid movement, such as these Western men alone can show, produces a weapon from some secret pocket—a revolver that looks ferocious in the lamp light.

Mynheer Joe's opinion of Molly's father takes an upward bound. He realizes that the giant is no simpleton, and has met too many strange people in his past to give up easily when brought in contact with a man of the baron's calibre.

The two gentlemen smoke a cigar in company, and then Joe takes his leave, promising to see the other on the morrow, and relate much of what occurred at Khartoom. He hopes Molly may be present, for her company will inspire him to do his best.

"I trust your inconvenience may be slight, and that you will harbor no ill-feeling toward me as the cause of your discomfort," the explorer says, when taking his leave.

"Nonsense! A mere love-tap! Don't bother yourself about it, my boy. I'm used to worse things than that. I can tell you," replies the orator, shaking hands warmly.

Thus Mynheer Joe leaves him, and feels that his work has been a grand success. Light-hearted, he quits the apartments of Tanner, and once more seeks the realm where music and gayety abound, for the guests are having a last dance ere the enjoyable affair breaks up.

He looks for Sandy, but that worthy seems to have vanished. It may be he has found something new to attract his notice, and is busily engaged getting it down in black and white.

Joe only has a glimpse of Molly, and she does not see him as she passes through the rooms, bidding several lady friends good-night. Undoubtedly she is about to retire.

This makes him think it might be as well for him to do the same, although he does not feel sleepy, after having wooed the gentle goddess for 24 hours.

Presently he runs across Mr. Grimes and that worthy, being interested in all that pertains to his fortunes, at once asks numerous questions, receiving in reply a variety of information that he can sort over at leisure.

He takes Joe to the office of the hotel in order to book him. Fortunately, some one has just departed, and there is a vacant room, to which he is assigned. Another chance places it next that of Mr. Grimes.

By this time the strains of the music have ceased, most of the people retired and many of the lights are being put out, so that Shepherd's, after the hop, resumes its natural appearance.

Out on the square of Esbehlyeh the utmost solitude reigns, broken only by the snarling of wandering dogs, which abound in the Cairo of to-day. The fakirs and mountebanks, snake-charmers and peddlers, curious idlers and beggars have all cleared out as the lights drop in the hotel.

Cairo sleeps.

Joe's one great vice lies in the fact that he is an inveterate smoker. Deprived of a cigar for six months, the weed seems doubly sweet to him just now; and he made sure to lay in a supply before leaving the office.

His first act, therefore, upon finding himself alone in his room, is to draw a chair near the window, throw himself into it, produce a cigar, strike a match and start the engine.

As with all old smokers this produces a train of reflection. He goes back to the moment when he opened his eyes on board the dababeah and met his friends, Sandy and Mr. Grimes. Then it is easy to follow the track of events down to the present, and there are several places where Joe lingers tenderly.

What a strange series of adventures he looks back upon.

"And the end is not yet," he mutters, as he contemplates the past through the halo of the blue smoke that circles around him, "for, unless I'm deucedly mistaken, there's going to be a continuation of this warfare. It may extend

PUSHING AHEAD....

Everyday finds us steadily advancing and requiring more and more men to do our work.

And we get the workmen—workmen of the best type, too. Just the kind you want to do your work, that's the style of men we are looking for.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out —appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

An Old Testament Verse.

The twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra in the Old Testament contains all the letters of the alphabet. "And I, even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra, the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily."

There has been but one total eclipse of the sun at London since the year 1140, that of 1715, and, according to Professor Holden, there will not be another until after the opening of the twenty-first century.

The carnival of Venice, which once was celebrated by the whole populace of that city, has now become a monopoly of the children.

Artificial eyes were first used by the Egyptians long before the Christian era. Mummies have been found with artificial optics. They were fashioned in gold, silver, copper or ivory.

FORESTERS GREET SUPREME CHIEF.

tlemen having, by their efforts, been largely instrumental in making the demonstration the grand success it was. The present gathering, Mr. Corby said, put him in mind of old times, when he was in the political arena. (Cheers and laughter) He was proud of Belleville and the Bay of Quinte district for the welcome they had given the grand old Chief, and proud to be a member of the Foresters, which had already paid out over $17,000,000 to widows and orphans.

The Presentation.

The Supreme Chief Ranger gracefully presented the watches to Messrs. Lazier and McGinnis, both of whom made appropriate replies. They had not expected the watches, but had worked simply for the good of the Order and out of esteem for the Supreme Chief. The watches, we were told, were presented to the gentlemen as a reward for each of them securing over 20 new members.

Miss Norah Lazier next sang "A Spring Song" in a charming way, being heartily encored.

The Supreme Vice-Chief Ranger.

Mr. J. D. Clark, of Dayton, Ohio, was the next speaker, and he gave a very racy and pleasing address. He had received a warm welcome here, which he would never forget. He had seen the D. and D. Institute and had been shown around by Mr. Corby, who was about the worst that ever came down the pike. (Laughter) Then when he had seen the handsome young ladies to-night he made up his mind that, right here in Belleville, he was as near heaven as he could get in this world outside of Ohio. (Laughter) He might never get so near 16 angels again. (Laughter) There had been one good thing after another till he was most tickled to death. He was a lone Yankee, but felt safe with the Union Jack on one side of him and the Stars and Stripes on the other. (Cheers) He was proud of his connection with the Order and his acquaintance with Dr. Oronhyatekha, who had enough Indian in him to stand by those who stood by him, "and that," said the Man from Ohio," is all we ask on my side of the line. (Cheers) Over 120,000 Yankees belonged to the I.O.F. and were loyal to it, for it helped, he was sure, to encourage and bring to life the highest ideals in men and women. The Supreme Vice closed a neat speech by thanking those present for their welcome and congratulating the local Foresters on the splendid showing they had made.

Miss Maysel Stork sang, very sweetly "Carita," responding gracefully to a hearty encore.

Hon. Dr. Montague.

Hon. Dr. Montague congratulated Dr. Oronhyatekha on the grand reception extended to him, and the local Foresters on the way they had managed things. No greater success was ever achieved. The speaker said Dr. Oronhyatekha was one of the world's greatest philanthropists; he had kept orphans from the street and brightened the lives of many widows. During 1903 the I.O.F. had made an unique record in increasing their risk obligations only one-quarter as much as they increased their assets, which fact placed the policy holders in a vastly improved condition. One grand feature of the I.O.F. was that at 70 years of age any policy-holder was entitled to draw 10 per cent. per year of his policy for ten years, the balance of the policy to go to his heirs at his death. The speaker told Mr. Clark to carry back to his fellow-Foresters across the line a message of respect and esteem from Canadians.

Mrs. James Grant, in splendid voice, sang "Golden Lilies" in a way which pleased the audience greatly.

The High Chief Ranger.

Dr. Herald, of Kingston, High Chief Ranger, was the last speaker. He was presented with a bouquet by little Miss Ross and Waters, and in turn threw a bouquet at Belleville Foresters, who, he said, had shown their loyalty to the Order by the present magnificent demonstration. When he, as High Chief Ranger of Ontario, asked for 1000 new members in Belleville, some people thought he had gone crazy. The answer was here. He had not received 1000, but 1061. In conclusion, Dr. Herald expressed the pleasure of himself and the Supreme Court officials at the success of the demonstration.

Mr. E. Henthorne sang "The Bandolero" in fine style, and the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close.

Notes of the Evening.

Mrs. Campbell acted as accompanist in her customary finished and unobtrusive way.

The distinguished visitors and committee were entertained at the residence of Col. Lazier, at the conclusion of the opera house programme.

Following were the chairmen of the different committees, all of whom worked hard to make the affair the success it was: Finance, H. Corby; Reception, R. Mathison; Programme, E. F. Milburn; Printing, J. W. London; Transportation, R. J. Graham; Initiation, J. E. Walmsley; Press, J. Frith Jeffers; Sec. General Committee, A. McGinnis; Chairman General Committee, S. S. Lazier; Messrs. G. N. Brown, D.H.C.R., and Jno. A. Glendinning, D.H.C.R., also acted on the General Committee.

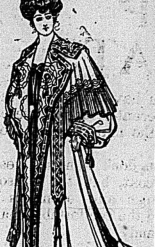
HANDSOME WRAPS.

Evening Coats of Fine Cloth and Lace Lined With Satin.

A long coat of some material is necessary during the spring and even the summer months. The present loose and shapeless style renders the garment easy to make at home by a neat dressmaker. Pale gray or tan cloth, heavy silk, all over linen lace lined with satin and later on pongee are all favorite materials.



A GRAY COAT.

Lace boleros are all the rage, and they are simply lined with chiffon, which renders any lace richer than if unlined or lined with other materials. Three-quarter length coats are also smart in lace, and for evening wear a long coat of lace and chiffon is the richest material possible.

The little bolero, which is sleeveless, is one of the best ways of utilizing remnants of veiling, chiffon, lace, etc. Odd lengths of embroideries also form the trimming and eke out the lace as well.

The collars of blouses are high, and they are often finished off in the front by tulle jabots. The tulle bow at the back of the neck seems to have disappeared owing to the low coiffure, with which it interferes. Jet dog collars made the same as the pearl ones are greatly in vogue.

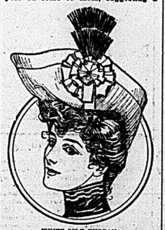
Fashion this spring has returned to the directoire period, with its long jacket, its embroidered waistcoats, its gauntlet cuffs and its jabot and frills of lace. These will be features of the early spring fashions. In velvet for the moment and satin for the future they will continue among the modes for the south. They must be worn with a fairly long skirt, or the effect is anything but elegant. They are not, of course, so universally becoming as the bolero and the bolero effects. The length of the directoire coat, though it has its uses and is reminiscent of a beautiful period of dress, detracts from the height of the wearer.

The picture shows a pale gray long coat with revers of lace and silver embroidery. The deep cape is edged with fringe. JUDIC CHOLLET.

SPRING FASHIONS.

Mixed Goods to Be Fashionable—The 1830 Sleeve.

The new woolen materials for spring wear are composed of different woven threads combining different tints, but the whole is so faint that at a distance it produces the effect of one color. Blurred white or colored squares appear on some of them, suggesting a check or even a tartan, and these are especially smart made up in short suits, with the coat and seams of the skirt piped with suede or velvet.



WHITE SILK TURBAN.

Velvet buttons are all the rage. They even appear on evening dresses. A costume of this sort which I saw recently had, in fact, two turquoise green velvet buttons holding down the end of a lace scarf. They were enriched with tiny applications in the center of guipure lace.

Gray hats will be another feature of the spring and particularly those where a touch of white is introduced.

Corduroys and lightweight striped velveteens will be worn late in the season, and these really make charming walking suits trimmed with braid and smart buttons.

The 1830 sleeve is becoming more pronounced, and it is changed by its trimmings into a multitude of styles.

The picture shows a white silk turban trimmed with a band of gold braid, a white rosette and a black hussar tuft. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FORESTERS GREET SUPREME CHIEF.

Brethren of This City and District Did Themselves Proud Last Night.

The Lady Guard of Honor—A Public Initiation—Large Audience Present.

Dr. Oronhyatekha's Speech—I. O. F. Evidently in a Flourishing Condition.

Yesterday was surely, for the Independent Foresters of Belleville and the Quinte district, what our old friend Sancho Panza would call "a day to be marked with a white stone," for did they not welcome their grand old chief, Dr. Oronhyatekha, in one of the most magnificent demonstrations ever tendered to either a public or private man, listen to words of wisdom and cheer from eloquent speakers, feast their eyes on pretty sights and their ears on dulcet music, and incidentally break the world's record for the greatest number of initiations ever made at one time? Yea, verily! And that's the reason why Foresters in this city are smiling so broadly today and patting each other on the back. When it comes to hard hustling, and sticking to it, the I.O.F. of Belleville and the Bay of Quinte district are the "real goods," all wool and a yard wide. Yesterday's demonstration, we were told, was one of a series which are being gotten up in order to increase the membership of the order; so far, as a result of the Belleville demonstration and the ones held before it, over 8000 new members have been, in Ontario, added to the I.O.F. since January, 1904. That's "gathering them in," with a vengeance!

The function in this city took the form of an entertainment in the opera house, one of the chief features of which was the grand initiatory ceremony, conducted by Dr. Oronhyatekha, assisted by the Companion Guard of Honor from Toronto. The proceedings last night opened at 7.30, and, after an excellent orchestra of eight pieces, under Prof. Denmark, had played a tuneful selection, the curtain went up and the Guard of Honor, after a series of fancy drill movements, conducted an initiatory ceremony. The Guard of Honor was composed of sixteen young ladies, clothed in white gowns, with red, blue and purple sashes, armed with spears and crowned with fancy coronets and things on their heads which added to their already decidedly prepossessing appearance. To say that the Guard of Honor pleased the audience is putting it mildly. Their intricate evolutions, faultlessly performed, combined with the handsome costumes, statuesque forms, bright eyes and pretty faces, helped to form a pleasing picture which those who saw will not soon forget. Dr. Oronhyatekha was, by the Guard, escorted to the centre of the stage, and then the ladies, after a few mystic rites, locked their spears over his head and sang "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." The Supreme Chief Ranger took his seat, and then the ladies proceeded to go through the initiatory ceremony of the I.O.F., the stage being laid out in the form of a Foresters' lodge room. Over a thousand candidates were initiated, but, as it was manifestly impossible to get them all on the stage, a proxy was presented in the person of Capt. W. S. Morden, his initiation typifying the initiation of all the candidates, boiled down into one. It was a thrilling scene when the gallant captain, surrounded by his Amazonian bodyguard, came out to slow music. He seemed to be a trifle warm, as though the close proximity of so much female loveliness embarrassed him slightly. The very solemn initiatory service was performed, the ladies speaking clearly and in very musical tones. When the obligation came, all the candidates in the house stood up and took it with Mr. Morden. The ladies marched that gentleman round the stage a few more times, handed him a chair, which he seemed to need, and then marched off, after which the curtain was let down and the stage prepared for the entertainment which was to follow.

The stage presented a pleasing appearance when the curtain went up, the decorations being in excellent taste. Lt.-Col. Lazier was chairman, and among those seated on the stage we noticed the Guard of Honor, Messrs. H. Corby, ex-M. P., Mayor Chown, ex-Mayor Graham, ex-Mayor Johnson, Rev. A. H. Drumm, J. Frith Jeffers, Col. Ponton, ex-Mayor Walmsley, Dr. Farley, R. Mathison, W. S. Morden, A. McGinnis, W. McCamon, Dr. Faulkner, warden of the County of Hastings; J. D. Clark, S.V.C.R., of Dayton, Ohio; Dr. Herald, Kingston; Dr. Montague, Dr. Marshall, N. B. Falkiner, W. H. Gordon, Judges Lazier and Fraleck, A. Walker, J. M. Hurley, ex-M.P., and many others.

The Chairman's Address.

Col. Lazier, after complimenting the young ladies who had performed the drill and initiatory ceremonies, congratulated the Foresters of the city and district on the success of the demonstration. They had initiated 1041 new members, which had beaten the world's record. (Cheers.) He was sure that the I.O.F. was the best insurance company in this country or any other country. The success of the order was largely due to the efforts of Dr. Oronhyatekha, to whom the chairman paid many compliments, and closed by hoping that he would long remain at the head of the I.O.F.

Miss Mabel Varmilyea's sweet soprano voice was heard to great advantage in "When Sylvia Saunters By," which was vociferously encored.

The Mayor's Address.

Mayor Chown then, on behalf of the City Council and citizens, read the following address to Dr. Oronhyatekha:

To Dr. Oronhyatekha, Supreme Chief Ranger, Independent Order of Foresters.

Dear Sir:—It becomes my pleasant duty as Mayor to present to you a few words of welcome on behalf of the city.

We welcome you because of the great success you have made of the Order, of which you are the Chief Officer, and, because we believe it is largely due to your own personal efforts that the Organization has attained the large number of members it has not only in this Fair Canada of ours, but in the Motherland, the United States, France and Australia.

We understand that when you took the position of Chief Officer, about the year 1881, the Order was but a struggling Society, but since that time it has gone ahead by leaps and bounds and the accumulated funds of the Order have increased from $2,967.93 in 1883, to $7,453,308 at January 1st, 1904, which should be to you sir, a great source of satisfaction.

You, sir, are an example to the young men of the country, showing them what may be accomplished by industry and perseverence.

I believe that previous to your taking up the work of the Independent Order of Foresters you were occupying a small sphere as a medical practitioner in one of the villages not far from here, and now, sir, your name is known and welcomed with honor in many of the countries of the world.

We welcome you to this fair City of the Bay. We think it is one of the finest residential cities in Canada. We have, as you no doubt are aware, beautiful shaded streets, comfortable homes, and, while we cannot boast of any large industries, we have a few small ones that are doing well. We point with pride to our educational institutions. We have our Public and High Schools, Albert College, two Business Colleges and St. Agnes' School. These advantages, together with our good market, our pleasant situation on the Bay of Quinte, make Belleville a very pleasant and desirable place to live in, and we should be glad to have you come and live with us.

We hope that your gathering here may be pleasant and profitable, and that the principles of brotherhood you are endeavoring to extend may receive quite an impetus by your gathering this evening, and I trust that you will bear in mind the greater brotherhood, for we read in an old book, "One is your master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren," and in him we may all be united.

Wishing you, sir, a long life and every blessing, and the Order of which you are the honored head every success, I am, &c.,

W. W. CHOWN,
Mayor.

The Foresters' Address.

Mr. Arthur McGinnis then read an address to Dr. Oronhyatekha from the Foresters of Belleville, as follows:

To the Hon. Dr. Oronhyatekha, Supreme Chief Ranger, Independent Order of Foresters.

Dear Sir and Brother,—It is with more than ordinary feelings of gratification and pleasure that the members of Court Moira, No. 33, Independent Order of Foresters, welcome you and the eminent brethren who accompany you on this, your first official visit to our fair City of the Bay.

We recognize and fully appreciate the honor conferred on us by your presence, and proudly claim you as an "Old Hastings Boy," returning to receive the heartfelt greetings of those who have known you the longest, and esteem you the most.

As brethren of the Independent Order of Foresters, we glory in the success which the Order has attained under your superb chieftainship from its inception with a few hundred members, to its present magnificent proportions, embracing a membership approximating a quarter of a million, and holding a surplus of $8,000,000.

You have, through the medium of this noble institution, bound together in the cause of humanity the peoples of two hemispheres, and united them in the beneficent work of assisting the distressed, relieving the widow and educating the orphan.

The deeds of the chiefs and warriors of your people are thrillingly recorded on history's page, but peace has its heroes as well as war, and you, as the representative of your race, have far excelled its greatest chiefs, and as the head of our noble Order, stand pre-eminently forward, as an advocate of all that tends to alleviate suffering and distress. We recognize you as one of the great benefactors of the human race, whose name will be classed on the scroll of fame with those of Howard, Wilberforce, Shaftesbury and Peabody.

We, as friends, citizens and Foresters, pray that the Great Giver of all Good may long spare you to continue the great and good work which has so marvellously grown under your fostering care, and we will ever look on you as the glorious head of a glorious Order.

Signed on behalf of the Foresters of Belleville.

S. S. LAZIER,
Chairman of Com.
A. McGINNIS,
Secretary of Com.

Another pretty little lady, Miss Gwendolin Ross, now presented a bouquet to Miss Oronhyatekha, who was in one of the boxes.

The Supreme Chief Ranger.

Three hearty cheers were given for Dr. Oronhyatekha, when he came forward to reply. It was, he said, a source of intense gratification to him to receive this magnificent welcome from his friends of long ago. He was, as one of the addresses stated, a Bay of Quinte boy, and it was one of his happiest thoughts. Fourteen miles from Belleville, in the village of Frankford, he had hung out his first shingle, as a doctor; there he had endeavored to prolong the lives of his patients, and, he regretted to say, was not always successful. (Laughter) The doctor then warmly thanked the Mayor for hoping that some day he (the Chief) might become a resident of Belleville, and regretted that the invitation did not come before the Temple in Toronto was built. It was possible, in that case, that the Temple might have been located here. (Laughter) He was proud that he was a Bay of Quinte boy, proud of his Indian blood and nationality. If he had not been a Mohawk he might never have been Chief of the I.O.F., which he described as a great army of philanthropists. A brief sketch of the Order's history was given. In 1881, when the I.O.F. was reorganized, it was a discredited concern, with an accumulated fund of $3.88 in the treasury. (Laughter) Now, after a lapse of twenty-three years, it had a membership of nearly a quarter of a million and an accumulated fund of over $7,500,000. And the good work of the Foresters would go on and on. They would help the widows and orphans and comfort the distressed till the millenium came, "And when the millenium comes," said the doctor, "you won't need any insurance." (Laughter) The Supreme Chief Ranger then gave a detailed account of the financial standing of the I.O.F., as follows:

The Death Rate of the Order.

The death rate figures showed how careful the Order was in the selection of its risks. The ordinary death rate of a community is 18 to 20 per 1,000, but that of the I.O.F. was only 6.46 in a thousand. Foresters did not die over one third as often as other people. (Laughter) The death rate of the Order, further, was decreasing. In 1881 it was 11, to-day it was only 6.46 in a thousand. The Order guarded the portals strictly and well.

Turning to the statistics of the Order the Supreme Chief Ranger said: "I shall not deal with many figures, but give you some tables and some comments upon the same. I do so because it was said by the manager of the North American Life that our Order in 1902 showed by its report that it was in its decadence. Now look at this table:

Totals	20.775	29,809,385	2,672,530	2,137,359	201,780,118
I. O. F........	36,316	29,685,000	1,653,183	547,453	238,124,000

What are the facts disclosed by this first table?

1st: That the North American Life began business in 1881. The I. O. F. was reorganized in 1881, and began business, under the new conditions, with only 369 members and $3.88 in its treasury. That in the year 1902, in which it was boldly stated that the I.O.F. was in its decadence, we took in over 30,000 new members, while the insurance company, The North American Life, of which the gentleman who made the statement was the general manager, issued only 3,826 policies.

2nd: That, while the I.O.F. secured in that year $24,509,500 of new insurance, the North American secured only $5,829,111.

3rd: That the I.O.F. at the end of the year 1902 had in force $226,849,500, while the North American Life had only $30,646,798.

Now as to table No. 2, which shows that the I.O.F. during 1903 increased the volume of its business, as shown by the figures under each heading, that is to say, it secured 6,215 more members in 1903 than it did in 1902. It secured $5,175,500 more new insurance, it paid $103,781 more benefits, and it increased its insurance in force by $11,274,500 in 1903. The only I.O.F. item showing a decrease in 1903 was the item of "General Expenses," which we reduced by $147.624. On the contrary, outside of the item showing the amount of insurance in force, the record of the North American Life shows a decrease in every item, except the item of the general or management expenses, which shows an increase.

That the I.O.F. at the end of 1903 had increased its total insurance in force to $238,124,000, a gain of $11,274,500, while the North American Life had increased to $31,682,536, or a gain of $1,035,738.

Let me just in a word or two point out the facts shown by the third comparative table submitted. It is the figures of the I.O.F. against the joint figures of the three of the Canadian Old Line Insurance Companies, whose managers are always boasting that they are the best and lose no opportunity to attack the I.O.F.

The table shows:

1st: That the I.O.F. alone secured more new members in 1903 than the three Old Line companies put together, notwithstanding it was said the I.O.F. was in its decadence.

2nd: That the I.O.F. spent in management expenses $547.453, while the three companies spent for the same item $2,137,359, about four times as much as the I.O.F.

3rd: That the I.O.F. leads them all in the amount of benefits paid during the year.

4th: That notwithstanding some of the companies have been doing business for over half a century, while the I.O.F. was only 23 years old, counting from its reorganization, the amount of insurance which the three old line insurance companies had in force at the end of 1903 was $201,780,118, while the I.O.F. had at the same date $238,124,000.

With these facts, taken from the Government "Blue Books," I think we are entitled to claim that the I.O.F. is very far from being in its decadence.

It is worth while calling attention to the fact that while we led the procession in benefit, paying in 1903, we added to our surplus fund nearly a million and a quarter of dollars, which now amounts to over seven millions and a half of dollars—to be exact, the amount is $616,944.98. We have paid in benefits over seventeen million dollars, and if the Order went to pieces to-morrow our existence during the past 23 years would be amply justified by the foregoing record.

But we are not going to die just yet, for just before going away at the end of last January, for a little rest, I had the honor to assist at initiations at eight different points in Canada and the United States of 4430 new members.

Since my return from abroad a month ago, the Companions and Brethren have been giving me meetings at five different points as a welcome on my return from abroad, at which 2560 more new members have been initiated. When we add the 1061 admitted to-night, the Order will have given me in fourteen meetings 8051 new members.

The Quinquennial Valuation.

One word more about figures and I shall cease. In England the Government requires a quinquennial valuation of such societies as ours. The report of an able actuary five years ago showed that we had, when properly valued, an actuarial surplus of £29,000 or a little over $130,000. This year the same actuary made another report, after much exhaustive investigation, and he found that we had now an actuarial surplus, when valued by the proper method for a society such as ours, of $2,273,133. (Cheers) That shows our increasing provincial strength.

In conclusion Dr. Oronhyatekha referred once more to his residence in Frankford, where he said he had made friends who had ever remained faithful to him, and who were welcome to "the half of his kingdom." Frankford people had contributed most to the success of this great demonstration so far as the number of candidates were concerned. He thanked the different Courts and officers for the great work they had done in presenting 1061 new candidates—not 1041, as the Chairman had said, 20 others came in after he had secured his figures—and assured the loyal members of the Order in this city and district that the present grand demonstration would nerve the officials to even greater efforts.

Mr. H. Corby.

Mr. H. Corby, who was very warmly greeted by the audience, requested Dr. Oronhyatekha to present gold watches to Col. Lazier and Mr. Arthur McGinnis, those gen-

Empire Club Eloquence.

Toronto, May 6.—Eloquence of the very highest from one who stands in the front rank of living orators, distinguished the season's final meeting of the Empire Club yesterday. The Bishop of Niagara said they would agree with him, that the verdict of history had been recorded in favor of constructive statesmanship. The Empire builders were the heroes of the world, Alexander, Caesar, Charlemagne, Napoleon, Clive, Hastings, and last, but not least, Cecil Rhodes. Bishop Dumoulin then gave a brilliant account of the three great companies which had given England three-fourths of her territory and nine-tenths of her population. These were: The East India Company, the Hudson Bay Co., and the last chartered company, the South African.

Jokai Is Dead.

Budapest, May 6.—Maurice Jokai, the distinguished novelist, journalist and politician, died last evening. Jokai was born at Komarom, a royal free city, on Feb. 19, 1825. He was educated at Pressburg till 1848, and at the Calvinist College of Papa, afterwards becoming an advocate. An ardent patriot, he took an active part in the revolution of 1848-9, under the leadership of Louis Kossuth, and in the subsequent struggle which resulted in the dual system of Government established under the leadership of Deak in 1867. At the age of forty he began the publication of the series of novels and romances, which has made him known throughout the civilized world.

Soaked With Wine.

Zurich, May 6.—While John Larmer was delivering a wagon load of port wine from Hansall Station to Eugene Breignult & Co., wine manufacturers, of St. Joseph, Zurich, he stopped to water his horse. While removing the bridles the horses dashed up Main street. The wagon struck a telegraph pole with such force that the large hogsheads were hurled to pieces. About 200 gallons of the finest imported wine soaked the streets. In trying to stop the team Mr. Larmer narrowly escaped being crushed to death by one of the flying barrels.

Progressive Fort William.

Winnipeg, May 6.—By a majority of 75 Fort William ratepayers passed a bylaw Wednesday to spend $28,500 to complete city and fire halls.

McINTOSH BROS.

CANADA PAID $800,000

Government Buys Canada Eastern Road of New Brunswick.

Beginning of Big Railway Absorption By the Dominion—Transfer Details Completed on Thursday—Canada Eastern Is 136 Miles Long and Runs From a Point Near Fredericton—Will Be a Feeder to the I.C.R.

Ottawa, May 6.—The Canada Eastern Railway, formerly known as the Northern & Western of New Brunswick, has passed into the hands of the Dominion Government. Details of the transfer were completed yesterday, when Col. Maclean of St. John, representing the Bank of Montreal, and Hon. Chas. A. Fitzpatrick arranged the final settlement. The price paid for the road is $800,000.

The Canada Eastern runs from a point near Fredericton in a northeasterly direction for 136 miles, when it taps the I.C.R. It has been heavily bonused, the Dominion Government granting $375,000, the New Brunswick Government $400,000, and the parish of Elgin $20,000, a total subsidy of nearly $800,000, or the amount that the Government has now paid for it.

On Canadian Soil.

According to the last report of the Department of Railways the total operating expenses of the road last year were $113,861; the total gross earnings were $116,536, leaving net earnings of $2,674. The total train mileage of the road was 170,119; passengers carried 53,831; freight carried, 107,690 tons. The rolling stock, which goes with the railway in the sale, consists roughly speaking of eleven engines, five first-class cars, two second-class cars, two baggage, mail and express cars, twelve box and freight cars, and 88 platform cars. The road will be operated as a feeder to the I.C.R.

Great importance is attached to the sale, meaning as it probably does the early absorption by the Government of all other feeders of the Government road in New Brunswick.

Fell Into Boiling Metal.

Chicago, May 6.—Making a misstep while walking on the edge of a vast caldron of boiling metal, Hainey Anderson, an employe of the Illinois Steel Company, at South Chicago, clung for life to the edge yesterday, while his feet burned off. Then, his strength gone, he slipped with a shriek into the seething mass below. In a few moments his body was literally consumed.

Britain Demands Release.

Washington, May 6.—At the American State Department yesterday announcement was made that the British Government had requested the Nicaraguan Government to release the crews of the Cayman turtle fishing vessels, which recently were thrown into prison by the Nicaraguan authorities of the Mosquito coast.

Britain Will Stand Aloof.

London, May 6.—Premier Balfour declines to commit the Government to any official part in the proposed international cotton congress at Zurich, Switzerland. In a letter on the subject he points out that little assistance can be expected from other nations in the efforts to increase the supply of raw material.

Killed By Explosion.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 6.—Two men were killed and seven injured by an explosion of gas in the No. 11 colliery of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Co., at Plymouth yesterday afternoon.

No Reciprocity With Canada.

Boston, Mass., May 6.—A proposition to memorialize Congress in behalf of Canadian reciprocity was defeated yesterday in the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

ONTARIO HEALTH BOARD.

More Alcohol in Some Patent Medicines Than in Whiskey.

Toronto, May 6.—Sewage disposal was the subject of discussion yesterday morning when the Provincial Board of Health heard City Engineer Rust and Dr. Sheard on the proposed plans for Toronto.

Oshawa's sewage plans were discussed and the plan utilizing the Western Creek approved. The town must adopt and enforce a plumbing bylaw and maintain a satisfactory degree of sewage purification.

The consideration of Dr. Amyot's report resulted in a cordial endorsement of the work done, and a resolution was adopted expressing the opinion of the board that the bacteriological and chemical researches carried on in the laboratory should be continued and extended, especially in the examination of foods, and that the department be requested to provide funds as may be necessary.

Alcohol in Patent Medicines.

Dr. Amyot called attention to the patent medicines which were being sold, and quoted the table of the Massachusetts State Board analyst, giving percentages of alcohol in patent medicines. Beer contains 2 to 5 per cent. alcohol, while some of these preparations are stronger than whiskey and much stronger than port, sherry, champagne or claret. The German method is to compel all patent medicines to be labeled with the analysis of contents. The board will take this up at a later date.

Water and Typhoid.

Some discussion followed on the analysis of water for typhoid germs. The report of the committee on epidemics was read by Dr. Cassidy and dealt largely with the question of notification of cases of epidemic disease, so that, as in typhoid, the originating cause may be traced.

As no time was left for a proper discussion of the several reports it was decided to hold three-day meetings in future if business requires it.

Tender For Big Contract.

Montreal, Que., May 6.—Eight Canadian and American firms have tendered for the construction of the permanent steel sheds to be erected in the wharves line. The James W. Davis & Sons, Ottawa; Milhken Bros., New York; the Canadian Bridge Co., Peterboro; J. Hanley, Toronto; P. Lyale & Sons, Montreal; the Canadian Foundry Co., Toronto; the Ridenater Bridge Co., New York; the Clintoch & Marshall, New York, are the firms which have tendered, and the different prices will be considered by the commissioners on Monday next. It is understood that the tenders range from $2,000,000 and $2,250,000.

Crushed to Death.

Carleton Place, May 6.—Wm. Hall of Addison, Ont., yesterday morning was driving a traction engine, hauling a truck on which was loaded a large boat from the shops of the John Gillies Estate Co. to the C. P.R. siding. The boat projected at both ends of the truck. In backing he was caught between the engine and the front end of the boat. His body was cut nearly in two, and badly scalded with escaping steam. He lived only thirty minutes after being caught. Mr. Hall leaves a wife and five small children.

Banker Denison Suspends.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, May 6.—R. E. Denison, private banker, who suspended payment about a month ago, has made a voluntary assignment to James Aikens for the benefit of his creditors. The statement submitted to the creditors by the assignee showed a deficit of about $2,500. It is not thought it will realize over fifty cents on the dollar. The largest creditor, aside from the Bank of Hamilton, which is secured by a bond and customers' notes, is Lady Wilson of Toronto, who has a claim for $1,833.

Explosion and Riot.

Philadelphia, May 6.—An explosion of a gasoline tank in the freight yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Thirtieth and Market streets early yesterday, in which twelve firemen were burned, was followed by a riot among Italian emigrants. Assistant Chief Waters of the fire department, was critically burned. Railroad Detective Connor was shot in the side by one of the Italians.

Italian Ex-Minister a Fraud.

Rome, May 6.—There was a great sensation in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday at the conclusion of the Parliamentary inquiry into the Ministry of Sig. Nasi, former Minister of Public Instruction. The inquiry proved Sig. Nasi to have been guilty of misappropriation of large sums of money, the falsification of documents, the suppression of evidence and continuous peculation.

Big Fire's First Fatality.

Toronto, May 6.—The first fatality in connection with the big fire came to pass yesterday, when John Croft succumbed at the Emergency Hospital as a result of his injuries by dynamite the day previous. The arm was shattered and his left eye destroyed and the shock to his system was great. Deceased was 38 years of age and leaves a widow and three children.

Brewery Strike in Toronto.

Toronto, May 6.—Toronto's first strike of the year begins to-day. The Brewery Workers' Union decided last night to go out in O'Keefe's and Reinhardt's breweries, for an advance of from 12 to 15 per cent. in their wages above a new minimum wage and a shortening of hours in one or two departments. About 100 men are on strike.

Rousseau Operated Upon.

Paris, May 6.—M. Waldeck-Rousseau, the former Premier of France, was successfully operated upon for a malady of the liver, yesterday.

Paper Makers Strike.

Merritton, May 6.—All the men of the Riordan Paper Mills went out on strike at noon Wednesday.

Last Sad Respects Paid to Late W. F. McCreary, M.P.

Wife Does Husband's Work and He Must Not "Butt In"—Sir William Mulock Explains the Change in the Postmastership of Athens, Ont.—Oppositionists Resume Criticism of Amended Grand Trunk Pacific Agreement.

Ottawa, May 6.—The obsequies of the late W. F. McCreary, M.P., which took place yesterday, were made the occasion of an affecting demonstration of respect by the whole House of Commons.

Noon was the hour fixed for the funeral service, which was conducted by Rev. G. F. Salton of the Dominion Methodist Church. It was attended by the Prime Minister and the other members of the Cabinet, the leader of the Opposition and members on both sides, regardless of politics. After the service the coffin, followed by a long procession of Parliamentarians, was conveyed to the Union Station for transportation to Winnipeg. The express from Montreal was 40 minutes late, and it was after 1 o'clock before the train with Mr. McCreary's remains on board pulled out on the journey to Winnipeg.

Mr. McCreary of Arnprior, a brother of deceased; Rev. Dr. Douglass, Mr. Puttee, M.P. for Winnipeg, and Mr. Stewart of Lisgar, accompanied the remains to Winnipeg. The Ministerialists meeting in caucus yesterday morning adopted a resolution of condolence with Mrs. McCreary. The gathering broke up to attend the funeral. The late member's seat in the House was yesterday draped in black, and on the desk reposes a magnificent bouquet of roses and maidenhair fern, lilies of the valley and white carnations.

A grim coincidence was the fact that Mr. McCreary had reserved lower five in the sleeper of the same train that carried him on his last journey. It was also remarked by friends of the deceased that Mr. McCreary was born on May 5, 1855. He would have been 49 years old yesterday.

ATHENS, ONT., POSTOFFICE.

Wife Does Husband's Work and He Must Not "Butt In."

Ottawa, May 6.—Geo. Taylor's curiosity as to the management of Athens village postoffice drew an interesting statement from the Postmaster-General in the House yesterday. Sir William Mulock said the postmaster who had been in charge for several years had been dismissed because his services were unsatisfactory. The administration at the postoffice has been handed over to the wife of the dismissed postmaster, on condition that the dismissed husband shall have nothing to do with the office.

Grand Trunk Pacific.

In committee on the Grand Trunk Pacific, Mr. Northrup made an effective argument against the elimination from the original contract of the provision requiring the Grand Trunk Railway Co. to pay cash for the $20,000,000 of common stock which it is to acquire. Last session this was held by the Government as the country's greatest security for the fulfillment of the company's obligations. There should be a clear explanation of the reasons for the change. He accused the Government of suggesting the modification in question.

The debate was continued by Messrs. Clancy, E. B. Osler and Kemp, and Mr. R. L. Borden criticized the clause which provides that after the expiration of 50 years the company shall have haulage rights over the eastern section. Why, he asked, was it not also provided that the Government railway should have haulage rights over the Grand Trunk's lines west of Winnipeg.

Mr. Fitzpatrick replied that under the Railway Act the Government could compel the Grand Trunk or any other company to grant running rights to other roads. He promised to look into the matter and give fuller information at a later date.

Remaining Clauses Passed.

Then the bill was taken up as a whole and several amendments were offered by the Opposition. Among the most important was one requiring the Grand Trunk Pacific to have an absolute and untrammeled title to the rolling stock upon which the Government is to have a mortgage under the contract. The Minister of Justice promised to take all suggested amendments into consideration.

The committee then rose and reported progress.

Under Commissioners.

Ottawa, May 6.—The Government intend to place the harbors of Port Arthur and Fort William under the control of harbor commissioners. The Minister of Marine has given notice of bills for that purpose.

Government Caucus.

Ottawa, May 6.—There was a Ministerial caucus yesterday morning, at which reference was made to the matter of claims for compensation in regard to the Chignecto Marine Transport Railway. It seems reasonable to conclude that nothing will be done in the matter for the present, at any rate. There was some slight allusion to the tariff by a few members, and in regard to agriculture there was a general desire expressed to see further developments in the interest of the farmer.

A later message says: Several members spoke vigorously against the proposal to compensate the losers in the Chignecto Ship Canal. It is understood that nothing will be done in the matter till after the elections, when substantial relief will be granted to the visionary speculators who risked their money on the Isthmus of Chignecto.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affection from a NEGLECTED COLD, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedella."

Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Few men realize what large dividends they can draw on kindness.

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

Always on Hand.—Mr. Thomas H. Porter, Lower Ireland, P.Q., writes: "My son, 18 months old, had croup so bad that nothing gave him relief until a neighbor brought me some of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which I gave him, and in six hours he was cured. It is the best medicine I ever used, and I would not be without a bottle of it in my house."

Messrs. Northrop & Lyman Co. are the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is now being sold in immense quantities throughout the Dominion. It is welcomed by the suffering invalid everywhere with emotions of delight, because it banishes pain and gives instant relief. This valuable specific for almost "every ill that flesh is heir to," is valued by the sufferer as more precious than gold. It is the elixir of life to many a wasted frame. To the farmer it is indispensable, and it should be in every house.

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

A Wonderful Cure. — Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore, but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle, and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very billious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the billousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Never is time more precious than when some member of the family is attacked by colic, dysentery or any bowel trouble. The doctor is distant.

A Promising Camp.

One of the most promising districts in British Columbia is that lying about the thriving city of Kamloops, B.C. The unlimited resources of the Pacific Province are shown here in all variety: Grazing lands, where thousands of cattle live and grow fat on the nutritious bunch grass; fruit lands in the valleys, farm lands on the benches, and mining lands on the mountains with good transportation facilities; an enterprising community and a glorious climate will make the Kamloops district.

A large amount of progress has been made in all lines, but the riches to be wrested from nature's treasure vaults in gold and silver and copper attract most attention. As a mining camp the district has not been boomed by the unscrupulous promoter but development has gone on quietly until to-day it is proved beyond a doubt that in all the rich sections of the great Dominion, Kamloops is second to none. The Cherry Creek Copper King mines, whose advertisement appears in another column, have secured one of the most promising properties in the camp, which was secured on very favorable terms. John Redman, M.E., in his annual report on the camp, says:—

"This group of claims, which is well known, possess some promising and extensive showings on the continuation of the Iron Mask lead. The following extract from the Company's prospectus fairly describes these, and I believe is a conservative description:

"The veins on the 'O.K.' which have been opened up by surface work and a shaft east and west at the 50-foot level is a true fissure, about 90 feet in width at the shaft. The strike of the lead is northeast and southwest, with a dip to the southeast of about 60 degrees. The ore bodies are lenticular, occurring throughout the vein filling. From these lenses a high-grade pyritic copper ore assaying from 10 per cent. to 10 per cent. copper and from $4 to $8 in gold is taken. A sampling of the fissure where exposed in the shaft gave an average of 12.60 per cent. copper and $6.75 in gold.

"A parallel vein on the Prince Charles has been opened up by a small shaft and a good body of medium grade pyritic ore uncovered. The extent of this body is apparently large but must be proved by further development. Average assays of this body give 70 per cent. copper and $6.75 in gold.

The company embraces some of the most responsible and successful business men of the Interior, and is setting forth its plans with a care and foresight not always devoted to the most prominent mining enterprises."

A perusal of their advertisement will show the plan for securing the shareholders.

RUSH TO CANADA.

15,693 People Have Come In During First Four Months of 1904.

London, May 7.—The following is the classification of emigrants who left British ports for Canada during April: English, 7,690; Irish, 487; Scotch, 2,280; foreigners, 2,260. Total, 12,726. These returns include first-class passengers. The rush to Canada continues. The steamship companies are now advertising that many of the steamers to sail are full up.

Ottawa, May 7.—For the first four months of the present year the immigrant arrivals from Great Britain numbered 15,693, as against 14,738 for the same period of last year. The immigrant arrivals from Europe numbered 10,268, as compared with 11,382. This is an increase of 910 in British arrivals from the continent of Europe. The net decrease is only 204.

To Punish the Kissis.

London, May 7.—Advices from West Africa state that an expedition is expected to be sent to punish a tribe called the Kissis, living to the east of Sierra Leone, who have lately been raiding and devastating the country belonging to the Konot tribe, who live on the Sierra Leone-Liberian boundary. When the Konot chief first applied to the British for help it was refused on the ground that the Kissis are under the control of the Republic of Liberia. But as the marauders have since continued their activity, burning villages and driving away the inhabitants, it is feared that armed forces will have to be resorted to.

PORT ARTHUR HAS CASE OF SPLENDID ISOLATION.

Russia's Gibraltar "Sealed" to Its Internal Resources.

Japanese Landed 30,000 Men on the Liaotung Peninsula at Two Points—Vice-Admiral Skrydloff Cannot Now Reach His Destination and Will Probably Go to Vladivostock—News of Battle Is Hourly Expected.

St. Petersburg, May 7.—A despatch received last night says that Port Arthur is cut off from all communication by land, the Japanese having disembarked in its rear, occupied the railroad and cut the telegraph. Vice-Admiral Skrydloff, who is on route to Port Arthur to take over comand of the naval forces in the Far East will be unable to reach his destination.

Landed at Two Places.

According to official information the landing of troops from 60 transports began simultaneously at Pitsewo and Cape Terminal, on the morning of May 5. It is also reported that troops are being landed at Kinchow, but this is not credited, as the Russians are known to have fortifications there, and it is not believed that the Japanese had the daring to land immediately under an entrenched position from which the Russians could inflict severe injury on them.

30,000 Japs on Land.

Complete details of the landing are lacking, owing to the interruption of communication. No resistance was made, the few Cossacks, however, observing the movement, retiring when the warships shelled the shore preparatory to disembarkation. Ten thousand men were put ashore Thursday and the disembarkation was proceeding yesterday at the time that communication ceased. It is believed that there are over 30,000 on land preparing for a forward movement. Two Japanese regiments were hurried westward yesterday morning to cut the railroad and telegraph communication. One of these fired on a train conveying the wounded from Port Arthur.

Enemy Made Demonstration.

While the landing was proceeding Thursday the enemy's ships, consisting of the battleships Mikasa, Hatsuse, Shikishima, Yashima and Fujia and the cruisers Iwate, Idsuma, Adsuma and Asama made a demonstration off Port Arthur to prevent the possible egress of Russian torpedo boats. A number of Japanese torpedo boats were also observed off Miado Island, in Pigeon Bay.

Admits Port Arthur Is "Bottled"

It was because he was convinced that Port Arthur was about to be cut off that Viceroy Alexieff, accompanied by his staff and Grand Duke Boris, left hastily. On Thursday several train loads of sick and wounded and other ineffectives were despatched northward.

It is reported here that the Japanese ships bombarded Port Arthur early on the morning of May 6 and succeeded at last in closing the entrance, but no official confirmation of the latter statement can be obtained.

The exact hour at which communication with the Russian stronghold ceased has not been established.

Strength Not Revealed.

The strength of the garrison at Port Arthur is not revealed by the authorities, who will only say that it is adequate for defensive purposes. It is not believed that the force there exceeds 10,000 soldiers.

Vice-Admiral Skrydloff and Vice-Admiral Bezobrazoff cannot now reach Port Arthur and will probably go to Vladivostock to join the cruiser squadron there.

Stoessel in Command.

Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel will have supreme command at Port Arthur. He is described as a high-class commander. His recent proclamations show that he is imbued with a determination to hold Port Arthur until the last man is killed.

Officers of the general staff say that the landing of the Japanese army on the peninsula and the investment of Port Arthur clarify the military situation.

Viceroy Alexieff has arrived at Mukden.

More Battle Rumors.

Gen. Kuropatkin has sent reinforcements to Fengwangcheng. The receipt of news at any time of a decisive battle near Fengwangcheng will not cause surprise here, and already rumors are circulating in the city, which, however, lack confirmation, and are believed to be untrue, that a battle has been fought, that the Japanese have been defeated with heavy loss and that General Kuropatkin was wounded. Another rumor is in circulation that Port Arthur has been captured, but this is also scouted in responsible quarters.

Russian Detail of Landing.

The Ministry of War has received the following telegram from Major-General Pflug, chief of the military staff:

"According to information I have received, seven of the enemy's transports, and afterwards about forty, appeared opposite Pitsewo on the evening of May 4.

"On the morning of May 5, the Japanese began to land at Pitsewo and on the coast near Cape Terminal (about fifteen miles southwest of Pitsewo), under cover of an artillery fire.

"At this moment about 60 transports were observed bearing down upon the whole front, and our posts retired from the shore.

"All papers in the postoffice at Pitsewo were removed and the Russian inhabitants abandoned the town.

"According to Chinese reports, by the evening of May 5 about ten thousand of the enemy's troops had landed and taken up quarters in the Chinese villages near the points of debarkation.

"The enemy sent two columns of about one regiment each, one in a westerly direction and one to the southward.

"On May 5 a passenger train from Port Arthur was fired upon, a mile and a quarter outside Polandien (about forty miles of Port Arthur) by a hundred Japanese infantrymen occupying the heights east of the railway. The train carried many passengers, 200 sick occupying an ambulance carriage flying the Red Cross flag. Two of the sick were wounded. The train succeeded in reaching Polandien.

"Tranquility prevails in the maritime province and in Yinkow."

Reduced to 4,000 Men.

Rome, May 7.—According to a telegram received here from Che Foo, the garrison at Port Arthur has been reduced to 4,000 men, and all the important documents, money and field guns have been removed to Mukden.

THE JAPS WADED ASHORE.

Official Report of the Landing Says Not a a Shot Was Fired.

Tokio, May 7.—The report of Admiral Hosoya received yesterday gives details of the landing of Japanese troops on the Liaotung Peninsula, suppressing the location of the landing place. He says:

"Our seventh division with torpedo boats and the Hong Kong Maru and Nippon Maru arrived from the advance base of the Liaotung Peninsula at 5.30 May 5. Discovering a number of the enemy's patrols, we bombarded them for a short time, and then a landing party of sailors, Captain Nomoto leading, was ordered ashore. It being low tide, it was impossible to use the boats, and the sailors plunged into the water and waded breast deep for about a thousand yards and reached the beach at 7.20 p.m.

Not a Shot Fired.

"Immediately advancing, they took possession of a range of hills without firing a shot, and planted our flag on the hills. The gunboats Amagi Oshima and Chiokai were employed to distract the enemy's attention. They discovered a hundred of the enemy and shelled them, killing several.

"The first fleet of transports, on seeing our flag displayed on an eminence, began landing troops at 8 p.m. The troops, who were forced to wade ashore, were in high spirits.

"In order to facilitate the further landing of troops piers are being erected. Our division is assisting in the work."

The Kaga Maru Grounded.

The report of Admiral Kataoka, commander of the third squadron, gives additional details of the landing. The admiral reports that his squadron conveyed the first batch of the second army to the Liaotung base, and adds that the Kaga Maru grounded near the base at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon. She was assisted by the protected cruiser Akitsushima, which succeeded in floating the transport, which reached her destination safely at 5 o'clock the same evening.

Ragging Condemned.

London, May 7.—The Army Council have issued a memorandum to officers condemning the system of "ragging" as discreditable to the service and subversive of good discipline by transferring military authority to a number of irresponsible officers. The council admit that gentlemen are occasionally appointed to the army who are not suited to the profession, and desire to draw attention to the regulations existing for the removal of such officers. The commanding officer is to be held directly responsible when he fails to effectively exercise the powers vested in him, and if there is at any time a repetition of similar incidents the names of officers primarily implicated are to be submitted to the King, with a view to their removal from the army.

Well Known Toronto Figure Gone.

Toronto, May 7.—Dr. Isaiah Ryder, who died of an apoplectic stroke on Thursday, was well-known about town his tall spare figure resembling the Don Quixote of Gustave Dore, and he had much of the courtesy and gentle spirit of cervantes' knight under an exterior which mislead many. Dr. Ryder cultivated several hobbies, and he spoke within the last few weeks at the Forestry Association, the Dominion Alliance Convention, the Women's Canadian Historical Society and several others. Real generosity and love of his fellows underlay a personality unique and picturesque as an element in the life of the city.

Lost a Hand.

Kingston, May 7.—Edward Snider and another were working on a farm near Mountain Grove, building fences. Snider's companion was using an ax and Snider was close by adjusting the rails. He accidentally slipped, and in his attempt to save himself his right hand touched the log which was being cut. The ax came down upon his hand with disastrous consequences. Snider was brought to the hospital for treatment.

Nine Cottages Burned.

Thousand Island Parks, St. Lawrence River, May 7.—Fire caught in a cottage owned by O. T. Green of Thousand Island Park, where some rubbish was being burned. Mr. Green's cottage, with eight others, were completely destroyed. In addition to these six other cottages are partially destroyed. Loss $30,000.

800 Thibetans Fled.

London, May 7.—The Daily Mail's Simla correspondent says that 800 Thibetans, coming from the direction of Shigatse, attacked the British mission at Gyantse at dawn on April 5. The Thibetans were repulsed with heavy loss and fled. The British had only two Sepoys wounded.

UP TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Committee Asks to Be Relieved From Deciding Wilkie Case.

Toronto, May 7.—In an official statement issued by the Presbyterian Foreign Missions committee concerning their deliberation of the Wilkie case, after briefly relating the earlier circumstances of the case, says:

"In the judgment of the committee a new mission established by our church in India, having no connection with our present mission, not on account of distance, but because of alienation, would be wrong in principle, and would not be in the interest of the cause of Christ in India or in Canada, and the committee cannot therefore recommend to the assembly the opening of such a mission.

"In view, however, of the fact that final action in the opening of new fields does not lie with the committee, but is, by the regulations, reserved to itself by the general assembly, and in view of the whole history of the case, the committee asks the assembly to give an explicit and authoritative pronouncement in the matter."

MINERS ENTOMBED.

Three in Burning Mine and Two Imprisoned By Falling Roof.

Shamokin, Pa., May 7.—Fire, which broke out late Thursday night in the Locust Gap slope, operated by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Company, is still raging fiercely. John and Michael Bogland and Michael Shannon of Locust Gap, who were in the mine when the fire started, were unable to reach the surface, and a rescuing party is endeavoring to reach the entombed men.

Ashland, Pa., May 7.—George Yueb and Joseph Caunsky, miners of Gerradville, have been entombed by a fall of coal in the Continent colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company. All attempts at rescue of the men have failed, owing to frequent falls of the roof. The men could be heard tapping for several hours after the accident, but as this ceased it is believed the men have been suffocated.

India Rubber.

Few articles seem more strangely named than india rubber. It gets the "rubber" from the first use to which it was put—that of erasing pencil marks by rubbing. Nor should it be associated with India. The tree was first mentioned by an explorer among the Mexican Indians three centuries ago, and the first account of the substance occurs in connection with Columbus' visit to Haiti on his second voyage. Most of our present importation comes from Brazil. But Columbus and those explorers who followed him were searching for a short passage to India, and they supposed that the land they discovered was India. The name india rubber is therefore a permanent sign of their mistake.

The Indian and a Gas Furnace.

Just before gas began to be used in Pawhuska one of the Osage braves visited Bartlesville and got his first glimpse of a gas fire. All he could see in the stove was a pile of redhot bricks, through the crevices of which the blue flames were curling. He said nothing, but before starting home he went to the yard and bought a lot of brick and hauled them home. He burned up six boxes of matches and all the dry wood his wife had cut trying to get the bricks to burn and finally hauled them back to Bartlesville and told the yard man they were no good.

[illegible]

The Tibetans are not beautiful. How could they be when, by their own confession, the national ancestry runs back to the king of the monkeys and a hobgoblin? Bonvalot says of them, "The very bears are better looking." The type is midway between the Eskimo and the Chinese. Broad, flat noses, without visible bridge; no eyebrows, wide mouths, full lips, oily skins, hair as coarse and straight as horsehair, and short, square, ungainly figures—these are the elements of the unpleasing picture.

A Perfect Nose.

Nothing is more rare than a really perfect nose—that is, one which unites harmony of form, correctness of proportion and proper affinity with the other features.

The following are, according to the rules of art, the conditions requisite to the beauty of this organ:

The nose should have the same length as the forehead and have a slight depression at its root. From its root to its extremity it should follow a perfectly straight line, and come exactly over the center of the upper lip. The bridge of the nose, parallel on both sides, should be a little wider in the center. The tip should be neither too thin nor too fleshy, and its lower outline neither narrow nor too wide. The lobes must be gracefully defined by a slight depression. Seen sideways, the lowest part of the nose will have but a third of its total length.

Be Young as You Can.

Let no old woman be afraid some one will say, "Why, she goes about like a young girl!" If you feel light and easy in motion, even if you are old, why be staid, moping, artificial, because you are supposed to be so, being no longer young?

A Berlin woman's club, of which Frau Cauer is the leader, has a membership of 5,000, all working women. The organization publishes a paper and finds situations for the unemployed.

Whenever a woman's house shall be her palace, her pride, her delight, she will not be the victim of ennui or vanity or discontent.

Delicate crockery such as tea services should never be washed with soda, as this tends to make the ware brittle.

Milk will keep sweet longer in a shallow bowl than in a deep jug.

Daily Intelligencer.

MR. WHITNEY AND HIS FOLLOWERS.

The following graceful tribute to Mr. Whitney, leader of the Opposition in Ontario, is from the pen of Mr. Joseph Downey, M.P.P., editor of the Guelph Herald, and furnishes an effective answer to Grit journals which have been insinuating that Mr. Whitney has lost caste as leader of his party. It is worthy of an attentive perusal:

"Commenting on the recent complimentary references in these columns to Mr. Whitney's work during the session, the Toronto Globe suggests that "The Herald and the member for South Wellington do not agree in their opinions on the question." This conclusion is founded, according to the organ's own statement, on the belief that "Mr. Downey was one of the obviously dissatisfied group who were during the session promoting Mr. Hanna's aspirations for Mr. Whitney's place."

"The Globe's assertion is, with three or four exceptions, perfectly in harmony with the truth. The exceptions may be enumerated as follows:

"1. There was no dissatisfied group in the Conservative Opposition.

"2. Mr. Downey, consequently, could not have been a member of any such group.

"3. Mr. Hanna's aspirations for the leadership of the Conservative party were as much in evidence as his aspirations for the Lieutenant-Governorship of Ontario. Even the Globe does not need to be informed that Mr. Hanna is a loyal supporter of Mr. Whitney, anxious only to help him in the great work in which he is engaged, and proud of the splendid service his leader has rendered the province.

"The Globe might concern itself with more worthy undertakings than the manufacturing of imaginary disruptions in the ranks of the Ontario Opposition. Perfectly congenial that kind of work no doubt is to the hired slanderers of the Government like Maybee. A respectable newspaper should be above retailing in its editorial columns the silly fabrications which, for lack of something more serious, his unscrupulous opponents direct against Mr. Whitney. That gentleman may well treat with indifference the Maybee-Globe methods of political warfare. He is "armed so strong in honesty" and his place is so secure in the confidence and affection of his followers that the shafts of ridicule and malice pass by him as the idle wind which he respects not.

"Were occupancy of office the only measure of leadership there are some qualifications which we must admit Mr. Whitney does not possess. He endeavors at all times to square his performances with his professions. He does not pray for righteousness with his lips while his hands are filled with the fruits of political crime. He is faithful to his friends, candid to his foes and honest before all men. No one ever accused J. P. Whitney of saying an untruthful word or doing a dishonorable deed. He has never betrayed the public trust. His actions in the Legislature faithfully crystalize his utterances to the people. The empty sophistry and the honeyed word intended to satisfy and intended to deceive, have no place among his political accomplishments.

"As a leader Mr. Whitney has grown with the growing strength of his party. He commands the respect and esteem of his followers by his frank, manly attitude towards them. Politics he recognizes as a serious business. Appreciating the weight of his own responsibility he expects each of his followers to approach in no frivious humor the duty that his constituents have set before him. And yet with his frankness and his seriousness there is always a kindly consideration for the feelings and the interests of his colleagues.

"The leader of the Opposition is easily the first Parliamentarian in the Legislature. His tact and resourcefulness have won the admiration of the Opposition. More than once during the session just closed it was left to him to point the way for the Government out of some unfortunate tangle. In debate he is ready, quick-witted and masterful. Some of his finest deliverances are purely extemporaneous. He has a high regard for constitutional usage, the dignity of Parliament and the amenities of debate. Such a man, able, earnest and honest, laboring as he has labored, with much self-sacrifice, and through many years for the better government of the province —enjoying as he enjoys, the confidence and approval of a majority of the people, and the loyal devotion of his followers—such a man may well treat with indifference the sneers and the slanders of Maybee and the Globe."

Special Council Meeting.

A special meeting of the City Council was held yesterday afternoon, which was attended by nearly all the members. The object was to make some changes in the granolithic walk by-law, in reference to the width of some of the walks. This was the only business transacted.

THE MODEST LANDLORD.

(Hamilton Times.)

"I hope you won't tell the assessors that your rent has been raised; they might raise my assessment," was the modest remark made by a landlord to a tenant the other day after squeezing an extra $2 a month out of him for the shack he occupies. Of course the tenant is likely to take to the cellar to avoid letting the assessor know about it.

The Peterboro Review hands Port Hope the following jolt in connection with the Trent Canal: "For 65 years Port Hope did not lift a finger to aid the project. Five years ago it learned that tenders had been invited and sent in and that a contract was on the point of being awarded to complete the eastern end of the canal, and having been corrupted by the practice of the new Liberals of making all public works and public expenditure the occasion for a graft, it clamored for the projected canal to be discontinued and some of the money spent in Port Hope, in order that some might stick there. By keeping up this howl for government pap they have put back the work for five years."

The Hamilton Spectator has liberated the cat from the bag. It is afraid that, if Trenton is made the terminus of the Trent Canal, there will be a possibility to generate a lot of electric power and thus give other places a chance to compete with Hamilton in that respect. The Spec., in its fierce loyalty to its own constituency, forgets that there is a national side to the question. Too bad, to see a usually sensible newspaper afflicted with the narrow spirit.

Mr. W. A. Ritchie, commercial editor of the Montreal Gazette, was in the city to-day, and called at this office for a friendly chat. Discussing the cheese situation, Mr. Ritchie said that the present low prices were, he thought, caused by various conditions. There was the heavy make of last year, which amounted to 500,000 boxes more than the average; the depression in the English industrial situation, and, worst of all, the fact that the industrial depression in the Southern States had caused New York exporters to ship an enormous quantity of cheese, usually sent "down south," to England, thus creating undue competition to Canadian cheese. The latter fact, more than anything else, Mr. Ritchie thinks, caused the awful slump in prices. Matters will right themselves by-and-by, Mr. Ritchie thought, when the new season's make is placed on the market, though the high prices of last year can hardly be looked for.

Cheese at present is the lowest it has been since 1879. Yesterday it sold at 6 1-2c; in 1879 it was 4 1-2c, when Mr. Warrington, well known in this city, cornered the market and made half a million dollars. The late slump in the price of cheese caused much depression in business, and cheese men in Montreal lost heavily—one firm as high as $75,000. Some cheese factory companies, too, were hit hard as they had been holding cheese for purposes of speculation, something they should never do, in Mr. Ritchie's opinion. "When a farmer makes cheese," says that gentleman, "he should sell if the market is at all fair. As a cheese maker he is all right, but when he enters the game of speculation he goes against men who can skin him with their eyes shut." And that remark seems to be freighted with many and various kinds of common sense, which our country friends in this section would do well to heed.

A GENUINE CURIOSITY.

PLUG FOUND IN THE HEART OF AN ELM TREE SUPPOSED TO BE OVER 100 YEARS OLD.

Dr. Coleman shows us a curiosity found on his place on the Front of Sidney. It seems that the other day some men in his employ had occasion to cut down an old elm tree. The tree, where the cut was made, was more than four and a half feet in diameter. At the heart of the tree the choppers found a round plug about one inch in diameter, which had evidently been driven into the tree long, long ago, when it was about 9 inches in diameter, the tree afterwards growing around it. Wrapped round the inside end of the plug was a lot of coarse black hair, evidently that of an Indian. Here is a chance for imaginative people to give their fancy free rein. Did the noble red men of a century ago punish one of their number by "staking" him to the tree by his hair? Who can tell? On one side of the plug is what looks to be a blood stain.

TRYING TO HOLD SEATS.

RAWDON TOWNSHIP COUNCILLORS ARE APPEALING AGAINST CONVICTION WHICH UNSEATS THEM.

Toronto, May 7.—Before Mr. Justice Idington, in Chambers yesterday, E. A. DuVernet, K.C., moved for a writ of certiorari to remove the papers in the convictions of Messrs. Tanner, Rogers, Wellman, Bird, Bayley, Welch, McConnell and Burdett, all convicted of buying liquor from an unlicensed person in the Township of Rawdon, in Hastings County, where local option is in force. Four of these gentlemen are township councillors, and under the Municipal Act, a conviction under the Liquor License Act renders their seats in the council forfeited. Mr. Du Vernet claims that local option does away with the effect of the License Act, and therefore the councillors should not vacate their seats. The grounds upon which counsel sought the writ was that under local option buying liquor is not an offence, though the selling is. The writ was granted.

A Vision of Long Ago.

(The Hamilton Herald.)

Publicity is given to a poem by the Hon. George W. Ross—a poem in which the Premier's passionate yearning for the destruction of the liquor traffic finds adequate expression. Here is a specimen stanza:

Watchman, what of the night?
Rum and ruin, hand in hand,
Sweep like fiends across the land,
  Shall their power ever cease?
  When shall shine the sun of peace?

And the response comes:

I see a light like the light of day,
It is streaming fast through the fading gray;
And its sheen of gold overspreads the sky,
Oh, let us rejoice, for the morn is nigh.

In another stanza the poet bids the weary rise and the faint be strong, "for a night so drear cannot be so long." But, alas! this prophetic poem was written twenty-five years ago. Standing on the Mount of Vision, what was the light that the poet-prophet saw — the light which was overspreading the sky with sheen of gold and chasing away the darkness of "the night so drear?" If he saw such a light it was a light that failed. Perhaps it was "the light that never was on sea or land; the inspiration and the poet's dream"—nothing more.

And the pathos and tragedy of it all is that when the time has come for the premier to make the vision of the poet-prophet come to pass, the weary yet hopeful watchers are still kept looking in vain for sun-up. Is it that the bard and seer of twenty-five years ago has come to love darkness rather than light —that his eyes have become so accustomed to the murky atmosphere of politics that he yearns no longer for the sheen of gold overspreading the sky?

It is said that men are often unable to realize the bright dreams of youth; it is still sadder when men might realize them but have lost the will to.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"OLD LAVENDER."

The fact that Ned Harrigan, once the idol of New Yorkers, is to appear here next Monday, May 9, in his famous play, "Old Lavender," should cause the Carman to be crowded. "Old Lavender," "Rip Van Winkle" and "The Old Homestead" will live as long as the players live who have made the plays famous. They are the essence of the pathos of comedy and rich in heart interest. The engagement of Ned Harrigan and his company marks an unique epoch in local theatricals.

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

A great actor is coming to this city on Thursday next, May 12, in the person of Mr. Reeves-Smith, of "Brace of Partridges" fame, who will appear in that much-talked-of play, "The Tyranny of Tears." Mr. Reeves-Smith is noted as one of the most brilliant comedians on the stage to-day, and some critics go so far as to say that he promises to have the most successful stage career of any actor living. The "Tyranny of Tears" should attract a large audience to the Carman on Thursday evening next.

Teacher's Pet.

(Milwaukee Sentinel.)

Eight years old and goin' on nine,
Teacher says I'm doin' fine,
Git my lessons every day,
Hardly ever had to stay
After school fer bein' slow—
Ain't so very happy though,
'Cause the fellers laugh at me,
All but Johnny Baker; he Takes my side. He knows, all right
I ain't strong enough to fight,
'Cause I hurt myself one day
Fallin' off a farmer's sleigh,
And the doctor cut my side
Awful deep, and ma she cried,
And since then I'm awful thin
And, gee whiz! it hurts like sin
When I try to jump and run;
So you see it ain't no fun
When the fellers laugh and say:
"Fraidy-cat, you dassant play!"
And my eyes get kinder wet
When they call me "Teacher's Pet!"

Gee! They never talked that way
Till I tumbled off the sleigh;
Wunst I licked three kids so quick
That it made 'em good and sick,
And I uster dodge and run
Jes' as fast as anyone.
Now when recess comes along
I jes' wait to hear the gong
Call us back to work a lot,
'Cause that's all the fun I've got.
When the kids play "one-old-cat,"
I jes' sit and hold the bat
Wishin' I could cork the ball
Like I uster do last fall.
Yesterday when Reddy Lee
Seen me settin' there, says he:
"Fellers, look at 'Teacher's Pet!'
He's afraid to play you bet,
'Cause he knows I'd smash his face
All around this whole darn place!"
Johnny Baker seen me cry
And he blacked old Reddy's eye
And he made his nose bleed, too.
Gosh, I wishdt that I could do
Somethin' good for Johnny; he
Allers does does so much fer me.
Maybe 'twon't be very long
Till my side gits good and strong.
If it ever does, I bet
They won't call me "Teacher's Pet!"

Tens of thousands of women take Ferrozone because it's a splendid blood builder, keeps the system in perfect order and helps the complexion wonderfully. "I consider Ferrozone the best remedy to give you a clear, ruddy complexion I know of," writes Miss Ada E. Brandon, of Pembroke." For good health and beauty use only Ferrozone. Price 50c, at druggists.

To Make Red Ink.

Red ink is easily made by amateurs who follow this recipe: Get a one ounce bottle and see that it is perfectly clean and dry. Place in it one teaspoonful of aqua ammonia, gum arabic the size of two peas, and add six grains of carmine. Fill up the bottle with clear soft water, and after standing a little while it will be fit for use.

A Writing Paper Suggestion.

If you have your address stamped on your note paper, remember when ordering a supply to buy also a few quires of the same paper to use unstamped. When writing a friendly letter you will often need more than one sheet, and the address on the second is not merely unnecessary, but is quite a blemish, and your unstamped paper will save the repetition and effect a slight economy.

The Writing Desk.

A much used writing desk sometimes becomes ink stained. An application of niter is said to do wonders in removing these stains. Mix six or eight drops of niter to a teaspoonful of water, drop on the stains and rub quickly with a damp cloth. Unless the niter is removed at once it leaves a white spot.

For Blackheads.

A beauty doctor recommends the use of the following lotion for blackheads: One ounce of spirits of rosemary and half a dram of boracic acid added to three ounces of water. She says that this should be rubbed into the skin thoroughly. There is nothing in it to injure or inflame the skin.

When you get a new cookbook cover it neatly with plain white oilcloth sewed at the corners inside the lids. It can then be cleaned after a chance drop into the batter.

You may not be able to remove a wrinkle, but you may remove a frown and so change your wrinkles into rivulets of laughter.

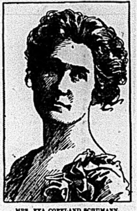
To wet the skin all over once a day and set the blood in action by rubbing is essential if you would have a perfect skin.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. EVA SCHUMANN.

A Chicago Woman Who Makes a Business of Raising Mice.

Between women and mice, as is commonly supposed, exists a natural antipathy; between women and mice, according to Mrs. Eva Copeland Schumann of Chicago, who knows more about the tiny creatures than any woman on this side of the Atlantic ocean, exists rather a natural affinity. Mrs. Schumann loves all kinds and varieties of mice, from the despised rodents of the barnyard, pantry and cupboard to the pedigreed aristocrats that win prizes, sell for large sums and are accounted among the valuable and highly valued possessions of their owners.



MRS. EVA COPELAND SCHUMANN.

The blue mice—softest, loveliest cadet blue in tinting—are the hardest to obtain, but the highest prices are paid for the cream and orange specimens. The coats of all these dainty little creatures are marvelously fine and glossy, and they spend fully half their time, so says their devoted owner, in keeping themselves in the pink and prime of well groomed condition. No smallest speck of dust or dirt is allowed to remain in their spotless home and cages, and they must be fed, if the best results are expected, on dainty fare.

"The ordinary white mice," said Mrs. Schumann, who keeps her varied pets in and about her home at 1603 Kenmore avenue, "will thrive and flourish anywhere—in a box of sand if nothing better offers—provided only that they are allowed sufficient nutriment of almost any character. But their more dainty Himalayan relatives must be supplied with warm, clean and comfortable quarters, fed on bread and milk daily, given plenty of light, fresh air and sunshine and barred from indulgence in meat or water when the best and finest specimens are desired. No animal could possibly show the sad results of neglect or unintelligent treatment more quickly than do these tiny creatures. But, given the few and simple requisites mentioned, they are less trouble than any other kind of pets I have ever seen or heard of. They are almost human in point of intelligence and affection, they require little room and less attention, and the business of rearing them for sale I can recommend as easy and profitable for any woman who has animal sympathies or loves pets."

Room Colors and Nerves.

It is a great mistake to live in rooms papered with dark wall paper or tinted in somber hues. True, the dark colors hide the dirt, but they depress the spirits and are most disastrous to the health. Few people seem to realize the effect that color surroundings have upon the temperament. A warm yellow or a good rose pink looks cheerful and reminds one of sunny days, while a pretty green, not too vivid in tint, suggests the delicate hues of spring. A paper covered with a large pattern in dark colorings somehow seems to lend a gloomy effect to even the largest room, while there are certain schemes of coloring that hurt the eyes and tire one to look at. Green papers have the reputation of fading sooner than any others, while blue becomes a dirty sort of green if exposed to the sun, pink a terra cotta and yellow a sort of whitey brown—none of them very attractive, perhaps, in this stage, but on the whole a faded pink is the least depressing shade.—American Queen.

Difficulties In the Home.

It is not essential, of course, that a woman should be a culinary chef or a distinguished expert in any department of the care of a house, but that she should know, and take pride and pleasure in knowing, how to do every kind of domestic work well enough to lend a hand whenever necessary it is only right to expect, says the Indianapolis Journal. Then she should reflect that as she looks to her husband to bear the brunt of the battle with the outside world and bring her only the fruits thereof, so she should be ready to bear the brunt of the difficulties in the home and try to keep it during the few hours of his active occupancy a place of peace and rest, which all day long he will have in mind, as the storm tossed sailor thinks of the smiling harbor toward which his ship is headed. Let the husband continue as devoted as ever, say we, but let the wife return measure for measure, and we shall hear less of marital troubles among the young.

The Mirror Pincushion.

The convenience of a pincushion which can be hung at the side of a mirror or in some similar position is self evident. A novel and useful one can be made from a large size doll's parasol. To get the best results one of some bright colored silk should be used. It must be closed and the cover tacked to the stick at each rib; then each of the sections becomes separated from every other and can be fitted at the top and stuffed either with bran or wool wadding picked into bits. When the cushions are slipped into place they can be tacked firmly into position and the parasol further ornamented with bows of ribbon tied on wherever fancy indicates. To make the best foundation the parasol should have a hooked handle by which it can be hung, but should such not be obtainable a ribbon loop can be attached to a handle of any sort.

The Hat and the Face.

Unless a woman knows the relation between her hat and her face all the milliners in Paris can do nothing for her. A seventy-five dollar imported creation may be an utter failure if it is not suited to her particular style. She may be outdone by her own chambermaid in a dollar and twenty-nine cent factory made hat that is the proper shape for her. The hat question is a vital question where beauty is concerned. No part of the costume affects the face as much. The lines of the gown mean everything to the figure, but face and hair depend for their offsetting upon the headpiece. Choose it carefully. Study yourself carefully before you buy.—Chicago News.

Baby's Feet.

The feet of small children should be attended to most solicitously. Remember that the cuticle is most sensitive and provide your little ones with fine hosiery, which they should not wear badly mended, for the roughness and unevenness of the darns will cause corns and blisters. Every mother should personally supervise the cutting of her children's toe nails in order to avoid ingrowing nails and see that the feet are wiped dry between each toe so as to prevent that terribly painful affliction known as soft corn. A little powder should be dusted between the toes to insure absolute dryness after the bath.

Process For China Painting.

There is a process of china painting which is within the reach of every one. It is called mineral decalcomanie, and by this method pictures are transferred to china, porcelain and terra cotta. When burnt in they are durable as if hand painted on the object instead of transferred.

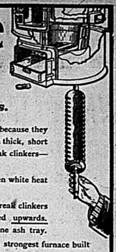
Sheets are sold which contain from 10 to 200 designs which are prepared for this work. These embrace flowers, figures, scenery, landscapes, fruits, buds, classical statuary and even monograms.—New York Press.

The Knee Chest Position.

If the small of the back persists in aching and there is a feeling of heaviness about the hips devote five minutes at least once a day to what a physician calls the "knee chest position." It is ridiculous, but miraculously soothing. Get right down on the floor on your knees. See that the line from knee to hip is perpendicular; then force your chest to touch the floor. This is no easy matter, but practice will accomplish it. Kneel in this position as long as you can do so without discomfort.

Dishwashing Hints.

It is a saying of time to wash egg, milk, potato and flour dishes in cold water, as hot water only hardens and bakes on these materials, while cold water tends to loosen and dissolve them. A tiny scrubbing or vegetable brush is almost indispensable for potatoes, turnips, carrots, etc., as the dirt can be removed much more quickly and effectively with a brush than simply by washing in water.



Sunshine Furnace

Strong Grates.

Sunshine grates never break because they are made of extra heavy bars with thick, short bull-dog teeth—the kind that break clinkers—but never break themselves.

Bars are so thick that not even white heat can twist or warp them.

Teeth are set to squeeze and break clinkers but coal is squeezed and forced upwards. There is no waste coal in a Sunshine ash tray.

The Sunshine Furnace is the strongest furnace built—it weighs less than any other furnace of equal heating capacity.

Naturally organized food is a memory of the time before dyspepsia began

Strength, courage and endurance are the characteristics of the pioneers of any country. The reason for this is that naturally organized food was their regular diet. It was all they could get until advancing civilization arrived with all its unnatural foods and methods of eating, and introduced dyspepsia, weak muscles, defective teeth, mental debility, and inflammatory diseases.

Your brain, bone, muscle and flesh are built of the food you eat, and your health depends on whether the food you eat contains the nourishment for each of these elements in the proper proportions.

In

SHREDDED WHOLE WHEAT BISCUIT AND TRISCUIT

The Natural Foods

you get every element of which the body is composed. Its light, porous nature aids digestion by permitting the saliva and digestive juices to penetrate at once to every morsel; while in white flour bread each morsel forms a doughy mass and only the outer surface gets the effect of the digestive juices, the balance remaining in a fermented condition in the stomach.

Triscuit makes ideal toast—it is light, wholesome and crisp.

SHOE HOUSES at Belleville, Napanee and Trenton

On Fourteen Trestle

By...
Clinton Dangerfield

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

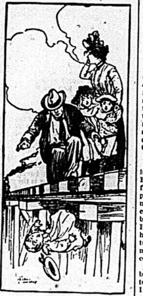
Across the wide river the trestle, No. 14, stretched unendingly, for the broken ground on both sides necessitated its covering not only the treacherous yellow tide, but much of the dubious shore beyond. Hinton's eyes rested dully on the one point of interest the shore under the trestle offered—namely, the small landing where steamers stopped for cotton. The landing boasted a gin, where the product in its raw shape, brought there in wagon loads by the small farmers, was reduced to proper commercial bulk. Although Hinton and Miss Wade were still a hundred yards from the spot where they would pass the landing below and twice that distance from the trestle's end, they could see all its details very plainly, especially the huge open bin, where a quantity of unseeded cotton had been thrown, to be transferred to the snorting, laboring machinery later.

"Jolie n'est ce pas?" observed Miss Wade lightly, with a wave of her hand which covered the surrounding scenery.

"That's French for 'pretty,'" interposed one of the children trotting at Miss Wade's heels. "I have learned that one word anyway," pursued the speaker proudly, and I mean to know more, 'cause you and Mr. Hinton talk in it and nobody can understand what you say. Hennie, Lou and me are all goin' to learn it, so's we can tell secrets in the openest company."

This ambitious scholar was one of three youngsters who had joined the couple in their walk and to whose intrusion neither Miss Wade nor her escort objected. Now that he had been finally and completely rejected, Hinton was glad to have their embarrassed silence broken by the chatter of the children. Miss Wade also was glad of their presence. As the 4 o'clock train had passed only a few moments ago, she had been quite sure it was safe to cross the trestle.

Then, just as she was encouraging the rather laggard footsteps of the youngest infant, her blood froze at the sound of a shrill, ominous screech behind them, echoing over the hills. Hinton heard it at the same instant. Evidently some special or perhaps a wildcat engine was bearing down upon them. And there was still so much trestle before them—so much of that slender network which offered no places of safety.



THEY SAW HIM LEAN OVER AND DROP THE SIX-YEAR-OLD.

Looking back, he saw the thin line of smoke that marked the speeding death—they could never reach the other side in time!

The children, in their happy babble, heard nothing, and Hinton, forming an instant plan, said rapidly in French: "Don't let them know. They will turn stupid with fright, and we could not do anything with them. Obey me, and I can save you all."

To the mastery in his eye Miss Wade yielded in a sort of blind confidence. He would save them all, she repeated, and the sick terror at her heart lessened its strain a little. She heard him laughingly urge the children to hurry, heard him offering prizes to the one who should pass the gin first and then saw him snatch up the fat legged six-year-old.

Wrapped in their wretchedly slow race, for they had to move with some caution, the children as they stood at last above the gin did not yet hear the thunderous monster, now setting its iron feet on the trestle itself. They only heard Hinton's sharp command "Stop!" and then their baby faces went white as they saw him lean over and drop the six-year-old into what seemed destruction. But Hinton's steady, athletic arms had not failed him. Before the astounded child knew what had happened she was lying on her back in the unseeded cotton.

With cool and desperate precision Hinton threw the would be French scholar down next, though he had to tear her frantic hands loose from his neck. The third youngster unceremoniously followed, landing on its head, but with no worse harm than falling between two loose piles of springy dirtyish white, which saved its spinal column from any hurt.

"You next," said Hinton calmly. "It's the one chance. The train is almost upon us."

As he spoke he lifted the girl, and she found herself trusting to his cool self possession in spite of the horror before her. What she might strike, where fall, she did not know. She only knew that in his steady eyes flamed a hero she had not dreamed of in their conventional acquaintance.

She thought of this as she thought of many other things in her descent to the cotton below. The drop was a fearful one, and it seemed to her that she passed an eternity before she touched anything. Then, like the first of the children, she lay on her back, staring up at the black mass thundering past above. As it reached the spot from whence she had been thrown she saw Hinton, his hands pointed above his head, leap far out toward the center of the stream, heading as far as possible from the saving cotton.

Ignoring the howls of the indignant children, who altogether failed to comprehend the reason for their brusque and unwilling flight downward, she scrambled out of the bin and ran to the edge of the shore. Had Hinton struck one of the numerous crags abounding in the river? Would he never rise again?

Her screams for aid brought the few men at work to her immediately. One of them unlocked a little flatboat moored to the shore, but as they prepared to push her off a brown head lifted itself from the muddy current, and Hinton, blowing the water from his mouth, clambered up on the little pier, his face growing radiant as he saw the girl unhurt.

"Oh, you!" she cried. "You are"—

She choked.

"How are the kids?" asked Hinton a little thickly.

"Safe as if they had merely been tossed into bed. Oh, Mr. Hinton—Robert—I"—

"Don't feel obliged to say anything pretty," interrupted Hinton a little ironically, misconstruing her embarrassment. "I've often dived from as great heights."

"You'd never dive twice into that river an' come out alive," interpolated the gin fireman abruptly.

"What did you think of as you winged your way down?" inquired Hinton lightly as they turned toward the wailing chorus of angry infants, who found the sides of the bin too high to scramble out.

Miss Wade went scarlet. "I thought of a lot of things!" she murmured.

"Yes," said Hinton politely, but with the wound she had given him before they had set foot on the trestle now reopening. He had saved her—for some other man!

"I thought especially," stammered Miss Wade, "of a—a proverb"—

"Yes? May I ask the saw?"

"It's a—that it's a woman's privilege to change her mind," murmured Miss Wade.

Sam Weller's Valentine.

Lovely creetur, I feel myself ashamed and completely circumscribed in a dressin' of you, for you are a nice gal and nothin' but it. Afore I see you I thought all women was alike, but now I find what a reg'lar soft headed inkred-lous turnip I must ha' been, for there ain't nobody like you, though I like you better than nothin' at all. So I take the privilege of the day, Mary my dear—as the gentleman in difficulties did ven he walked out of a Sunday—to tell you the first and only time I see you your likeness was took on my hart in much quicker time and brighter colors than ever a likeness was took by the profeel macheen (which perhaps you may have heard on Mary my dear), although it does finish a portrait and put the frame and glass on complete with a hook at the end to hang it up by and all in two minutes and a quarter. Except of me Mary my dear as your walentine and think over what I've said. My dear Mary I will now conclude.—Charles Dickens.

Creating a Vacancy.

When the republic had been set up in France in 1848, wrote the Baroness Bonde, the first attempts of the enfranchised people to use their new powers resulted in the election of the most miscellaneous assembly that had ever tried to govern a country. A member nominated from Rouen went to Paris and selected his seat. He had hardly taken it when his next neighbor turned and stared at him. The Rouen man, embarrassed, turned up his coat collar, but too late.

"Sir," said his lynx eyed colleague, "I believe I had the honor of sending you to the galleys for murder in 18—, when I was judge. You had strangled the servant of the cure who had brought you up, and robbed the worthy man. Oblige me by resigning immediately."

The next day the Moniteur announced that there was a vacancy for Rouen, but did not tell why.

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

even to India's coral strand, if this little beast of a baron makes up his mind that he's bound to possess Molly. Right now and here I make a vow that such a thing shall never be. Molly belongs to him— The deuce! I'll see him hanged first. And yet I don't underrate the fellow. He's dangerous as a dynamite bomb, and must be handled with extreme care."

This is Joe's way to a dot. He is known as a brave but a careful man, one not called a Hotspur in any sense of the word, and yet ready to lead a forlorn hope or attempt a most perilous mission. In battle his strong right arm has been worth half a dozen ordinary men, and those under whom he fought have been accustomed to depend on him when difficulties arose.

He smokes and ponders.

Somehow the business makes him a trifle drowsy, and he thinks he might as well lie down for a spell. It will be several hours before day comes, and there can be no telling what may occur to exhaust him ere another opportunity occurs to get any sleep.

Rising, he tosses the butt of his cigar out of the window. At the same time he stands there and glances around.

The poor apology for an Egyptian moon has reached a respectable point up in the heavens, and as Joe looks out, he can see the grand plaza before him. Beyond are white-walled houses, the gleaming domes of mosques and needle-like minarets, from which perchance at sunrise the muezzin will be calling all the faithful Musselmans to prayer.

Giving a yawn, he looks down and notes that the ground is not so far below but what an agile man could jump to it safely.

Then Mynheer Joe throws himself upon the clean bed. It feels very comfortable, and he gives a grunt of satisfaction. It is not very often a man of his calling finds a chance to rest upon such a couch. More generally he lies upon a bed of leaves or the hard side of a plank on board some exploding boat. Certainly, Joe has been given no cot of roses while with Gordon in Khartoom. This fact does not prevent a traveller used to roughing it from enjoying a soft thing when chance throws it in his way.

He finds his senses fading, and then all becomes blank as sleep overpowers him. The hour passes on. All is silence around the famous hostelry save for the discordant barking of mangy curs upon the streets—a sound every sojourner in the land of Egypt becomes accustomed to, as it is unmercifully dinned into his ears in every city of size.

Mynheer Joe has moved restlessly several times as though his dreams take him back to the exciting scenes at the beleagured city on the Nile.

Suddenly his eyes fly open. Could that be the effect of a vivid dream or did he really hear a sibilant whisper:

"Mynheer Joe, awake! Danger!"

Never in his life has this man of iron nerve been more completely aroused. He lies there as still as a rock, and yet with his senses and nerves on the qui vive.

Ha! Is that a sound that reaches him from the direction of the window? Gently he raises his head to look. What he sees in that one glance is quite enough to take away an ordinary man's breath.

CHAPTER X.

The head of a man is outlined in the window—features are invisible, for it is only a silhouette against the background formed by the moon light without. Evidently the unknown has some of the climbing qualities of an ape, since he has clambered up the face of a wall ten feet in height, aided by only a few running vines.

Mynheer Joe shuts his teeth together with a click, and then, turning partly over, coolly watches the window, not forgetting to breathe regularly, as a sleeping person might.

The head remains stationary for perhaps a minute, and it is evident that the man is bending his ear to listen eagerly. Then the head vanishes once more.

Joe takes advantage of the respite to change his position still more, assuming one where he can concentrate all his muscles into giving a tremendous leap. Then he calmly awaits the turn of events.

Before long the head reappears again, this time seeming to have more confidence than on the previous occasion. Nor does the man stop there—his shoulders appear and gradually he pushes his way up over the sill of the window. Ah, he is coming in, this uninvited guest!

Now he has passed the Rubicon and crouches upon the floor—Joe can just see him in the moonlight and at the same time notes another fact that fills him with wonder: A second head has bobbed up beyond the level line of the sill. Again he has the dark silhouette against the light background.

"Confusion!" thinks the traveller. "Are my apartments about to be invaded by an army? Has El Mahdi sent his advance guard against Cairo, or are they just common, every-day robbers bent on plunder?"

He is not the man to lose time in useless speculation. Precious seconds are passing, and something must be done at once ere more of his unknown enemies gain the room.

Fortunately, this man is accustomed to meeting emergencies, and thinks very little of it under ordinary circumstances. His plan of action is very simple and characteristic of his nature.

The recumbent form upon the couch becomes imbued with sudden life. It is as if steel springs have been given to it. A stone could not be shot from a catapult with greater rapidity than he passes through space.

There is hardly a sound heard to indicate his coming, and the crouching wretch upon the floor cannot have sufficient warning to get out of the way. He hears a rushing noise, and then something falls upon him, just as the eagle swoops on its prey.

A brief struggle ensues, during which the unknown emits several cries of rage. The man at the window hardly knows what to do, as he cannot tell the exact status of things inside, but believing his assistance may be needed, he starts to crawl over the sill.

At this moment something comes against him with crushing force. It is the body of his companion, whom Mynheer Joe has bodily raised, with all the strength of his powerful arms, and tossed toward the opening.

This concussion proves too much for the fellow who is in the act of clambering in. He loses his hold, clutches at the body of his companion, and, locked in each other's arms, they go plunging down to the flags below. Joe hears the thud of their fall, and immediately looks out of the window. He sees a writhing mass below. Then a man scrambles to his feet and scuttles across the open, looking more like a skulking jackal than aught else.

A groan from below. The second fellow is picking himself up now. He, too, moves off with a painful limp, as though his fall had given him cause for suffering. Mynheer Joe laughs aloud in a mocking way.

"Come again, my friends! The latch-string is always out!" he calls, softly.

There is no answer. And the second skulking form hides itself, as did the first, among the shadows on the other side of the plaza.

The traveller still leans from his window and ponders. There is something about this business that puzzles him, and causes his brow to assume a serious, thoughtful expression. What did these men seek—his money or his life? The first thought is of course that they were ordinary robbers. Cairo swarms with them in spite of military precaution; and there is no more cunning thief in all the world than he of Egypt—he can give his fellows all over the globe points and beat them.

A second idea that has flashed into Joe's mind is connected with the False Prophet. El Mahdi has emissaries in Cairo. Can it be that already the word has been passed among them to do him to death, him, the sole foreign survivor of the Khartoom massacre?

Even this, though singular, seems to be near the truth, and yet Mynheer Joe has a third idea. He gropes after it in darkness, not being able to grasp the details and make a connected theory of it.

"Well?" comes in a calm voice not more than five feet away from his ears, causing Joe to turn his head immediately.

He sees a human head in the moonlight, thrust from an adjoining window. It is Mr. Grimes who has spoken. Then Joe remembers the peculiar circumstances of his awakening. Could it be possible after all that he heard a voice whisper:

"Mynheer Joe, awake—danger!"

"They have gone, but are not forgotten," murmurs Mr. Grimes, humorously.

"You saw them, then?" asks Joe, quickly.

"Well, rather," replies the other, chuckling; "and if that last fellow don't feel sore to-morrow, I'm mistaken in my guess."

"I hope he will, it may lead me to identify the rascal. Mr. Grimes?"

"Yes."

"Was it you who warned me?"

"I whispered through a crack in the wall in about the spot I believed your bed to be."

"A thousand thanks, my dear sir. When I awoke I hardly knew whether I had dreamed it or not. Then my eye caught the fellow's head at the window. I waited until he crawled in and then doubled both up together."

"Very neatly done, sir, I must say. These rascally thieves are very daring just at present."

"I have been thinking it over, and had about come to the conclusion that these fellows were bent upon something else."

"Eh! You mean murder? That they are some of the Mahdi's followers or spies, determined to have revenge on you for the part you took at Khartoom?" says Mr. Grimes.

"Perhaps so. Are you dressed, sir?"

"Partially so. I couldn't sleep and was looking out of the window from an easy chair when I heard a noise and caught sight of the sly rascals climbing up the wall like a couple of monkeys. I was puzzled at first how to warn you, and only hit upon that little scheme as a happy thought. Glad to know it worked so well."

"Would you mind coming into my room?"

"Not at all," responds the pseudo silver king, cheerfully. "I'm always at the service of my friends, and particularly Mynheer Joe."

"I want to investigate something—think I've got a clew to a still darker piece of business."

"Good for you, my boy!"

Mr. Grimes's head vanishes from the window. When, a few minutes later, he opens the door of Joe's room, which the latter has unfastened, he finds that worthy has lighted a lamp, with which the room it fortunately provided in place of the ordinary candle.

Mynheer Joe seems to be bending low, as if examining something on the floor. Has the man upon whom he pounced been wounded, and does Joe think he can learn anything from the stains left behind.

As Mr. Grimes bends over his shoulder, he makes a discovery that forces an exclamation from his lips. Upon the floor can be seen the fragments of a small vial that has evidently been shattered by some violent concussion. This, in itself, is not what wrenches that cry from the detective. He sees the matting covering the floor discolored and eaten into by some powerful agent.

"What do you say?" asks Joe, solemnly.

Mr. Grimes rubs one finger over the ruined matting and feels the result almost immediately.

"There can be no question about the nature of that acid," he replies, and his whole manner is sober, as though he realizes the extreme gravity of the situation.

Mynheer Joe nods his head.

"It is the proof I was looking for. My suspicions now have a double foundation. I no longer grope in the dark—I see."

"One thing is as evident to me as the nose on your face. You have a foe who would hesitate at nothing in order to gain revenge. A fiend in mortal shape for whom the tortures of the Inquisition would be too good."

"Exactly! You understand, this party does not yet seek my death, but would make me a hideous object for life, from whom women, and one woman in particular, must turn with shuddering horror."

"Good Heavens, Joe, can you mean it?"

"Does not the evidence point that way! The one woman to whom I have reference—let me be plain in this—is Molly Tanner. Who is it hates me because she smiles on me. You, yourself, told me this baron was a human fiend who had fought numerous duels and who looked upon the lives of his fellows as mere stepping-stones by means of which he could climb upward!"

"Perhaps you are right, sir," says Grimes, reflectively.

He cannot quite come to the conviction that a white man could be guilty of such a dastardly piece of business.

"And I grow more positive of it with every breath that I draw. I have not yet told you of the first cause for such a suspicion that came to me," pursues Joe, in the earnest way that marks his advance always."

"Suppose you do."

"When I jumped on the fellow who was crouching here, I must have sent this vial flying from his hand—see where it struck the wall and was smashed. My idea, of course, was to clutch him and toss the rascal through the open window, but he squirmed like an eel, and hence I was compelled to deal him several good blows about the ribs to quiet him. It was during the progress of this little campaign that the fellow gave utterance to several cries. It was not a Moor nor an Arab not yet a fellah who called out, but a Hindoo beseeching Brahma to save him from the foreign devil."

Mr. Grimes gives vent to an expression that marks his surprise, and yet, being a very conservative man, he is not wholly ready to agree with his friend.

"You are sure there could be no mistake?" he asks, realizing what this discovery on the part of Mynheer Joe really means.

"I can stake my life on it. Having travelled over India and spent much time among the natives, I am competent to judge. The man I tossed out of the window as though he were a bundle of sticks was beyond all question a Hindoo, and the only one I have met in all Cairo has been the man whom you pointed out as a follower of the baron, who was to prove so valuable to him when he reached the land of the Ganges."

"Then I must believe it—that baron is a fiend in his way. He has a long head, too, for already has he seen that you are the man destined to give him the most trouble in connection with Molly, and he would in the start knock you out of the race."

Mynheer Joe shrugs his shoulders.

"I see very plainly that I shall have to be the death of this baron yet, or else he must take my life. Think of it, man! Ten hours ago I did not know he existed; now the world is too small for both of us to live."

"Astonishing! Never heard of such a rapid advance in my life!" declares the other.

"And yet it is perfectly legitimate. You understand that there is a difference here. I have known Molly, in one sense, much longer than this man has; yes, and have had a claim upon her gratitude, something to keep her mind fixed upon me, so that she recognized me at sight. Something tells me this baron and myself will yet meet face to face, as foes."

"If you do, I trust your good angel will be hovering near to guard and protect. The baron is an exceedingly dangerous man. I have been watching him at my leisure here, and learned enough to tell me that he is unscrupulous and crafty; besides, his government has surrounded him with a bulwark of defense. You must not underrate this man, my friend, whatever else you do. He is in the habit of having his own way with men. I have seen numbers of those whom I believed to be at least ordinarily brave men bow and smile before him, as though they actually feared his power."

"Bah! That is not in Mynheer Joe's line at all. I am an American, and I bend my head to no man in obeisance, with all respect to the crowned heads of Europe. Let the fight come off. We shall see who wins."

The baron will, at least, have an adversary in Mynheer Joe who knows no fear—one who has met danger in all its guises and wrested victory from many a threatened defeat. When two such men meet in deadly array, the result is sure to be interesting—to those who may look on as spectators.

Mr. Grimes cautions his friend to sleep with one eye open after this.

"Do you know what I've a notion to do?" says Joe, deliberately. "Gather up the remains of this broken vial, wrap

BABY'S HOLD ON LIFE

The little ones are frail—their hold upon life is slight. The slightest symptom of trouble should be met by a reliable corrective medicine. Baby's Own Tablets have proved by their record of success to be an ideal medicine for the ills of infants and young children. The tablets cure all stomach and bowel troubles, allay the irritation of teething, break up colds, prevent croup and destroy worms. The mother has a guarantee that this medicine contains no opiate or harmful drug. Mrs. T. E. Greaves, Maritana, Que., says:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets with great success. They never fail, in my experience to cure the little ills of children." You can get these tablets from any medicine dealer, or they will be sent by mail at 25c a box by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PUSHING AHEAD....

Everyday finds us steadily advancing and requiring more and more men to do our work.

And we get the workmen—workmen of the best type, too. Just the kind you want to do your work, that's the style of men we are looking for.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

Own Pay Envelopes at The Intelligencer Job Office. Cheapest and best in the city.

A Woman's Enterprise.

I obtained the use of one window in a grocery store, where I displayed for sale each Saturday afternoon such home cooked delicacies as would serve nicely for Sunday dinner or luncheon. Bread, cakes, salads, desserts, cold meats, etc., were prepared on Friday afternoon or Saturday morning. I planned a different variety each week. In addition to this I filled small orders during the week and have made on an average about $5 a week for two years, or nearly $500 in all.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Baby's Gums.

Inflamed gums caused by teething are quickly relieved if a little lemon juice is rubbed on. Dip your finger in the lemon and then rub it on baby's gums. There will probably be an increase of crying at first, but relief will soon follow. If the skin is stretched tightly over the tooth and the gum hard and swollen it probably needs lancing. The first sign of coming teeth is an increased flow of saliva—dribbling, as it is usually called.

Warming Dishes.

The practice of putting dishes in the oven to warm them for the table is a bad one. The dry heat causes the enamel to crack in time, and then the grease soon penetrates them to their utter ruination. Put the dishes to be heated in a dishpan and pour boiling water over them. Let them stand and steam until ready to serve the meal, then wipe with a clean, dry towel.

The Dominant Sex.

No matter what may be the cause of the prominence now given to the fads and fallibilities of womankind, there can be no gainsaying that at the present moment woman is the dominant sex, and we begin to wonder how she ever came to be called the "weaker."—London Court Journal.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affliction from a NEGLECTED COLD, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedelia."

Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Few men realize what large dividends they can draw on kindness.

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

Always on Hand.—Mr. Thomas H. Porter, Lower Ireland, P.Q., writes: "My son, 18 months old, had croup so bad that nothing gave him relief until a neighbor brought me some of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which I gave him, and in six hours he was cured. It is the best medicine I ever used, and I would not be without a bottle of it in my house."

Messrs. Northrop & Lyman Co. are the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is now being sold in immense quantities throughout the Dominion. It is welcomed by the suffering invalid everywhere with emotions of delight, because it banishes pain and gives instant relief. This valuable specific for almost "every ill that flesh is heir to," is valued by the sufferer as more precious than gold. It is the elixir of life to many a wasted frame. To the farmer it is indispensable, and it should be in every house.

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

A Wonderful Cure. — Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore, but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle, and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

MR. JOHNSON WRITES FROM JERUSALEM.

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF MANY SCENES IN THE HOLY LAND.

Writing from Jerusalem to the editor of The Intelligencer Mr. William Johnson has many interesting things to say. After recounting the fact that he had received no less than twelve "Intelligencers" in one bunch, and found them very interesting, Mr. Johnson says that he and Rev. Dr. Potts were highly interested and diverted by the wireless messages which appeared in this great journal of the home. Continuing, Mr. Johnson says: I have taken side trips so as to visit the following places: Joppa, Nazareth, Sea of Galilee Cana (of Galilee), Nain, Tiberias. To do this we drove in carriages along the plain of Jezreel, quite close to Mount Tabor, Mount of Beatitudes, and as the background to all these mountains that of Hermon, always snow clad, rising 6000 feet in the heavens. The reputed sites of Capernaum and Bethsaida.

From Jerusalem to Jericho, but did not meet any of the thieves the good Samaritan had the misfortune to fall in with. This was owing to the presence of four Bedouin Sheiks—pronounced here Shakes, who protected us from the members of their tribes, who are as fond of plunder as the residents of these desolate — most desolate—regions of 2000 years since.

We did not see any of the "Walls of Jericho," nor is it any longer "the City of Palm Trees." Near it was Elisha's fountain, and there we went the next morning at 4. We are leading a strenuous life, to the River Jordan, to the place—well authenticated—where the Israelites crossed on their way to the Promised Land.

And then to the Dead Sea. I did not bathe in the Jordan, had too much respect for my skin to go into a place so muddy. Don't now blame Naaman, the Syrian Captain of the Hosts, for declining to wash in it, when he had so much cleaner water nearer his home.

Also strayed for an hour by the shores of the Dead Sea.

Have now been in Jerusalem a week, and from it have visited Bethany, Bethlehem, and all the places of interest in and outside the walls. By the way, the modern Jerusalem is a revelation to us all, a hustling, bustling place, with as keen merchants as we have met, an air of "biz" about the whole place, which rather takes away the sentimental from us all.

We leave to morrow, Wednesday, for Joppa and sail to-morrow evening for Egypt.

Providence is giving us the finest of weather—the days, some of them, are as hot as the middle of July at home, but the evenings and nights are quite cool.

The convention, which has been in session since Sunday morning, closes to-night, and has been a very instructive one.

With very kind regards again to yourself, the staff at the office and all enquiring friends,

Yours truly,
WM. JOHNSON.

HOTELMEN GET EVEN.

CLOSE HOSTELRIES AND YARD PUMPS TO PUBLIC.

Blenheim, Ont., May 5.—The temperance people of Blenheim carried a local option by-law, and now the hotel men are getting even. The latters' licenses expired on Sunday and they at once closed their hotels and refused to give either board or lodging to the travelling public. The hotel men have gone to the limit in their idea of squaring matters, for they have even boarded up the pumps in front of their hotels, and farmers coming to town are forced to go to private houses to secure water for themselves and horses. The temper-people say they will open houses of entertainment in the town.

A SAD DEATH

WORTHY LADY OF SIDNEY CUT HER FINGER AND DIED OF BLOOD POISONING.

Mrs. Edward Stickle, who resided at Johnstown, Sidney township, died on Thursday after a short illness. A few days ago the deceased cut her finger, which resulted in blood poisoning. Mrs. Stickle was about 60 years of age and was well and favorably known. She had been for many years an active member of the Methodist Church. A husband and a family of four sons and two daughters survive. Deceased was a cousin of Mr. J. W. Vandervoort, of this city.

A LOST OPPORTUNITY.

WHY NOT ENDORSE MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S ACCEPTANCE OF OUR PREFERENTIAL POLICY.

How is it that the Ontario Legislature did not pass a resolution endorsing the Chamberlain policy. Mr. Ross has publicly announced his adherence to it and Mr. Whitney is at one with his leader, R. L. Borden, in supporting it, yet neither man made a step towards aiding Mr. Chamberlain in his campaign by formally endorsing his policy of Inter-Imperial preferential trade.

Manitoba and New Brunswick have endorsed the Chamberlain policy in their legislatures, yet for some incomprehensible reason the Ontario Legislature ignores the matter. Had it been endorsed it would have been at least one redeeming feature, one bright spot in an otherwise discreditable session.

It is a pity that the Conservative Opposition did not introduce the matter. The Ross party could hardly have opposed it and win or lose, the credit would have been with the Conservatives. We think that the Conservative party in the Ontario Legislature missed a golden opportunity in not introducing a motion endorsing the policy of Mr. Chamberlain.—Brockville Times.

TROTTING.

Victory for Belleville Driving Association.

Judge Fraleck has just handed out his judgment in the case of Albert Gerow vs. The Belleville Driving and Athletic Association. The case was tried in the First Division Court of the County of Hastings, and we gather from a perusal of the judgment that the plaintiff was the holder of a ticket entitling him to free admission to the Association's track, and the privilege of driving on the same when in condition, for which $5 by Harford Ashley was paid. On the right hand side of the ticket was printed, in red ink, "The right reserved to annul this ticket." Races were held on the track on or about the 13th of August, 1903, in one of which the plaintiff, Gerow, drove a mare belonging to Mr. Harford Ashley, "Lady Hamburg," and the said plaintiff was convicted by the judges in the race of "pulling" the mare mentioned, for which he was suspended from driving on Association tracks for 30 days. Mr. Ashley, the owner of "Lady Hamburg," then preferred some charges against the defendants to the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association, and thereupon the defendants took occasion to keep Ashley's horses off their grounds and annulled the complimentary ticket held by him and the other ticket held by his driver, Gerow, tendering to Ashley $5, the subscription price of the ticket which he had purchased for the plaintiff, Gerow, which he (Ashley) refused, in the presence of a witness, to accept. The plaintiff, Gerow, then brought an action to recover the $5 subscription and $60 damages for deprivation of the use of the driving track during the balance of the season. The case was argued by the lawyers, Mr. John Williams for the plaintiff and Messrs. Porter & Carnew for the defendants, and the learned judge issued an exhaustive judgment, quoting authorities and holding that, as the defendants had tendered Ashley $5, the price of Gerow's ticket, and had printed on their tickets "The right reserved to annul this ticket" he must find for the defendants, with costs, which he accordingly did.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT.

JOHN PYE, BRIDGEWATER, NEARLY ENDED HIS LIFE.

A serious shooting accident occurred in Bridgewater on Saturday last, as a result of which John Pye, came near losing his life. His explanation of the accident is that he had been annoyed for several mornings by birds outside his bedroom, and on Saturday he reached under his bed for his rifle to fire it in order to frighten them away. In drawing the weapon from under the bed it was accidentally discharged and the ball entered his left breast and passed just below his heart and out through the left side under the arm pit. Mr. Pye, 35 years of age and unmarried, resides with his mother, Mrs. McNaughton, and his sister. The wound is quite a serious one.

THE CEMENT WORKS AT POINT ANN.

WERE VISITED BY A LARGE PARTY YESTERDAY—FINE PROGRESS BEING MADE — WORKS WILL OPERATE IN AUGUST.

Yesterday a party from the city, consisting of Ald. Sinclair, Ald. Ketcheson, ex-Ald. Clarke, Messrs. F. Quick, F. W. Burrows, Wm. Chisholm, W. S. Clarke, S. A. Hyman, R. P. Hamilton, H. Lewis, H. B. Hunt, O. N. Brown, of this city; Dr. Herald, J. R. McCann, of Kingston; C. L. Dickenson, ex-M.P., of Manotick; G. Mitchell, of Toronto; James Clendenning, ex-M.P.P., of Sunderland; John Moffatt, of Berlin; A. B. Wessells, of Wooler; F. Roddon, of Montreal; L. G. Morgan, of Ottawa; Miss Duncan, of Burk's Falls, and Mrs. and Miss Hunt visited the Belleville Cement Company's works at Point Ann by the staunch little steamer Annie Lake, and were surprised at the progress being made in getting the buildings in shape for reception of the elaborate plant now nearly ready to be installed.

Mr. English, the engineer, and Mr. D. Ewen, of the company, courteously showed the party around and carefully explained the several properties and process of manufacture to be pursued; the machine shop and storage buildings are completed. The foundations for engine rooms, boiler rooms, drying rotaries and conveyors are about complete and ready to receive the superstructures; the trestle work and piers are well under way for the dockage of coal, with a depth of seventeen feet of water, affording shipping facilities for the largest lake going vessels, and altogether the process of construction is going on at as rapid a rate as is consistent with solidity and permanancy.

Mr. English informed the party that it was confidently expected to have the works in full operation in August next, and with an almost unlimited supply of material and the economical facilities of manufacture the company would be able to place the manufactured article on the market at less cost than any other cement works on the continent. This, together with direct shipping facilities by both rail and water, means that the company's success is assured from the start.

6 Sound Reasons

Why Bu-Ju has been so successful

1 Because Bu-Ju has merit and will do what is claimed for it—cure kidney troubles—and it is the only remedy that will do it.

2 Because Bu-Ju cures the disease and not the symptoms. They disappear when the cause is removed.

3 Because Bu-Ju is a tried and approved remedy, with thousands of testimonials back of it.

4 Because Bu-Ju is made by a thoroughly reliable, long-established house.

5 Because Bu-Ju does not claim to be a cure-all, but it does cure disordered kidneys and all troubles arising from them.

6 Because Bu-Ju's best friends are those who have used it and are constantly saying good words for it.

Steel By Electricity.

Ottawa, May 7.—The triumphs of the electric method in the manufacture of pig iron and steel were demonstrated yesterday morning, when Dr. Haanel, superintendent of mines, received a consignment of pig iron and castings from Livet, France, and steel tools from Gysinge, Sweden. The castings had sharp edges, and were polished on one side. The inscription on the cast iron plate was in French, of which the following is the translation: "Congratulations to Dr. Haanel and his mission. Cast iron obtained by direct electric reduction of the iron ore process. Keller, Foundry at Livet, March, 1904."

Lion Signs In England.

In the middle ages the country houses of the nobility in England when the owners were absent were used as hostels for travelers. The family arms always hung in front of the house, and gave it a popular name among travelers, who called a lion "gules" or azure simply "red" or "blue." As these were intimations of good cheer and entertainment, innkeepers adopted the idea.

Lions have always been, and are now, very favorite signs in England; lions white, black, red, brown, golden, yellow—red being the most common. Probably the Red Lion originated with the badge of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, who married the daughter of Don Pedro, king of Leon and Castile, and who adopted the lion rampant gules of Leon to represent his claim to the throne. Under Richard and John lions became the settled arms of England, and were generally used by those who could find any claim.

MORE MOUNTED POLICE

Dr. Sproule Points Out the Liberal Face About Since 1896.

Hon. Mr. Sifton Defends Increase, But Mr. E. F. Clarke Points Out That the Strictures of the Opposition Were Directed to Aspersions Cast By Government Members Upon Character of Immigrants—Marine Legislation.

Ottawa, May 7.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier stated yesterday in the House that the National Transcontinental Railway bill would not be taken up again till next Wednesday.

More Mounted Police.

The House took up the Mounted Police estimates. Sir Wilfrid Laurier explained that the increase of $100,000 is to provide for an increase of 100 men in the force bringing its total strength up to 600 men. In reply to other questions by members, Sir Wilfrid Laurier explained that $20,000 of the vote was required for re-arming the force, $10,000 for new buildings and $70,000 for pay for the increased force. It was the intention to increase the force in the Northwest to 600 men, and in the Yukon to 300 men.

Increase Necessary For Security.

In the course of the further discussion, Mr. Oliver defended the increase of the police as a necessity to the maintenance of security in the territories.

Dr. Sproule pointed out that previous to 1896 the Liberals contended that if the Territories were well governed from Ottawa there would be no danger of insurrection or other troubles, and consequently the police force might be abolished. Since then, however, according to the Liberals, we have had the very best Government, yet the police must be increased.

Condition Too Bad.

Mr. Sifton said if it were made a condition of the granting of autonomy that the mounted police should be abolished, not 500 of the 500,000 people in the Northwest would vote for provincial autonomy. He justified the increase in the police on the grounds of the increased demands of the Yukon, the draft occasioned by service in South Africa, the administration of criminal law in the Territories by the Dominion Government, and the absence of any depot of permanent militia in the Northwest.

E. F. Clarke cordially supported the policy of an increase in the force and favored an increase of its pay, but reminded the Minister of the Interior that the strictures of the Opposition had been directed to aspersions cast by members on the Government side upon the character of the immigrants coming into the Northwest.

With the Ross Rifle.

On the item of $170,000 for pay of the mounted police in the Yukon, the Prime Minister stated that the question of increasing the pay of the police was under consideration, and Parliament might be called upon this session to vote the necessary amount. He added that the intention was to arm the force with the Ross rifle.

Marine Legislation.

Mr. Prefontaine introduced two bills respecting the harbors of Port Arthur and Fort William. Both harbors are to be placed under the control of harbor commissions.

Another bill introduced by Mr. Prefontaine amends the Pilotage Act, by giving the Governor-General-in-Council power to constitute the Minister of Marine and Fisheries the pilotage authority over any harbor in Canada. The Governor-General-in-Council will exercise his discretion in this respect.

To Inspect All Launches.

Mr. Prefontaine moved the first reading of a bill to amend the Steamboat Inspection Act. The bill provides for the inspection of the machinery and equipment of launches and boats propelled by gasoline and electricity. Under the existing law craft of this kind cannot be legally inspected. The new law will apply to all launches used for the conveyance of the public and to launches hired to private parties.

Mr. Taylor reminded the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that there are thousands of launches in the St. Lawrence River, and it would require an army of officials to examine them.

Mr. Prefontaine replied that public safety justified the somewhat sweeping character of the bill.

Shipping Casualties.

Still another bill introduced by Mr. Prefontaine amends the Shipping Casualties Act. The bill provides that officials who investigate steamship accidents may enquire into the conduct of the pilot, as well as into the responsibility of the master and mate. Under the existing law, if the conduct of the pilot is open to question an investigation must be first held into the conduct of the master and mate and a second investigation into the conduct of the pilot.

After recess the following private bills were read a third time and passed:

Respecting certain patents of Lewis E. Curtis, Mr. Ross (Ontario).

The Herbert J. McD. Roger divorce bill, Mr. Grant.

The James E. Taylor divorce bill, Mr. Grant.

The House then went again into committee of supply and the Agriculture Department estimates were taken up.

On the vote for the archives branch, referring to the appointment of Mr. Doughty as archivist, Mr. Fowler (Kings, N.B.,) expressed his regret that Mr. Fisher had not seen fit to appoint a native Canadian in the person of Dr. Hannah of St. John, to whom he referred as a gentleman of literary ability and author of the history of the war of 1812.

The item of $10,000 for the Winnipeg Exhibition was passed.

7 Sutherland Sisters Hair Grower

GREW THIS HAIR
Testimonial No. 422.

MISS NORA GASTAGER
2106 Centre Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

When the scalp throws off either dandruff or a gummy substance, it is an evidence of scalp disease, and no time should be lost in correcting it. You certainly would not hesitate to take treatment were you to look at this matter through a magnifying glass. When highly magnified it resembles a working mass of insects. These creatures absorb the nutriment or life-sap of the scalp causing the scalp to become dry and feverish, resulting in the loss of hair and finally baldness. Seven Sutherland Sisters' Hair Grower and Scalp Cleaner works wonders in all such cases. It thoroughly eradicates all trace of scalp bacteria and makes the hair grow unusually long, strong and beautiful. One 50 cent bottle is enough to show you that it will do all this and even more. Meet Me at the Inside Inn.

Never Before Did a Great World's Fair Have a Big Hotel Inside the Grounds.

RATES WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

"Meet me at the Inside Inn." That will be the expression most frequently heard at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. This hotel is an immense structure, 400 feet wide and 800 feet long, with 2,257 sleeping rooms and a dining room seating 2,500 persons. The hotel is inside the Exposition grounds, and operated under the supervision of the Exposition management. It is well appointed and furnished in modern up-to-date style, and will be the center of social affairs in the way of dinners and family reunions inside the grounds.

This hotel is in the southeast portion of the grounds, not far from the Plateau of States, and to the north a short distance are the famous Cascade Gardens, Festival Hall and Connade of States, which form a part of the main picture of the Exposition. Street Railways running by the door go direct to the Union Railway station downtown, and the Intramural Road, inside the grounds, carried guests from the hotel entrance to all points of interest. Here is a cool retreat, where persons can find rest, enjoyment and quietude away from the noise and crush of the crowds along the avenues of the Exposition grounds. Sightseeing at a large Exposition is the most tiresome pleasure, because the mind is busily engaged and finds diversion by constantly changing scenes, while the body is becoming weary and the visitor does not realize how tired he is until he stops to rest. The place to rest is the Inside Inn. The hotel rates cover the daily admission fee to the grounds, and the registered guest at this hotel is free from the annoyance of pushing through the crowds at the gates. There are 500 rooms at $1.50 per person, 500 at $2.00, 500 at $2.50.

The Inside Inn will long be remembered as a distinctive feature of the largest Universal Fair ever held in the world—a fair representing a total cost of $50,000,000 and as large in size as the Columbian, the Pan-American and the Paris fairs combined.

Elaborate Demonstration of the Primrose League.

Premier Balfour Speaks, But His Address Was Not of Much International Interest—Nothing But the Unity of the Unionists Will Lay Spectre of Home Rule or Protect Great Imperial Interests.

London, May 7.—The annual demonstration of the Primrose League attracted an enormous gathering at Albert Hall yesterday afternoon, being the centenary year of the birth of the late Lord Beaconsfield (Disraeli). The decorations were more elaborate than usual.

Premier Balfour's address was not of much international interest. The foreign affairs of this country, were, he declared, in a happy and prosperous condition. Mr. Balfour attached enormous value to the Anglo-French agreement, because he believed it was going to prove a permanent arrangement. Foreign Secretary Lansdowne and Foreign Minister Delcasse had done work which was not only beneficial to their respective countries, but to the whole world.

Mr. Balfour referred to the near east as "The despair of European statesmen," and pointed out that the Government did not propose to play into the hands of revolutionists, "who would rather see genuine reform fail than succeed if it did not cover all their demands."

The Premier concluded with lecturing the Opposition on their attitude towards the colonies, especially in regard to Chinese labor, and declaring that nothing but the unity of the Unionist party would finally lay the spectre of home rule or protect great Imperial interests from the injury which they were threatened.

Killed By Live Wire.

Bracebridge, May 7.—At about 7.30 last night William McDonald, an employe of the Muskoka Leather Co. of this town, was killed by coming in contact with a live electric wire. Mr. McDonald was about 40 years of age, and leaves a wife and eight children, the oldest being but 16 years of age. Dr. Wales, coroner, will hold an inquest to-day. W. W. Beardmore of Toronto and George Perry also received heavy shocks from the wire which they touched just before McDonald.

Telegraphers to Strike.

Ottawa, May 7.—Sir William Mulock, Minister of Labor, has been advised by Mr. Campbell, vice-president of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, that unless the Railway Labor Disputes Act is applied, and a means provided for settling the trouble between the Grand Trunk Railway and their telegraphers, that a strike will be called, and that as a result of this all traffic will be practically at a standstill. Two hundred and fifty telegraphers, it is claimed, have less than $50 a month.

An Important Ruling.

Montreal, May 7.—The value of goods ordered and delivered in Ontario cannot be recovered before the courts in Montreal. This was the gist of a decision of Justice Davidson yesterday in the case of Mrs. Carlo Spagnoli, who does business on St. James street, this city, under the name of C. T. Timossi, in her action against James Palangio of North Bay. She claimed $187.06 as the balance of value of goods sold by her to the defendant. The court decided it had no jurisdiction.

Toronto Brewery Strike.

Toronto, May 7.—"The strike is over already as far as we are concerned." This was the statement made by representatives of Reinhardt's and O'Keefe's breweries last night. "We have turned out more beer to-day than on any other day this spring," was an assertion from the O'Keefe firm. It has also been stated by both breweries that they are done for all time with the striking employes. The union men in their turn are equally sanguine of winning out.

Canadian Hanged at Walla Walla.

Walla Walla, Wash., May 7.—James Champeux was hanged here yesterday for the murder of Lettie Brace, a variety theatre performer at a theatre at Seattle in November, 1902. He had met the woman in Alaska and became infatuated with her. After he had spent most of his money on her she threw him aside. Champeux's wealthy relatives in Eastern Canada made a hard fight to save him from the scaffold.

Lost Both Eyes.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., May 7.—In preparing to fish by exploding unslacked lime in a glass bottle in the St. Lawrence River, H. A. Wilson, of Brockville, Ont., yesterday lost the sight of both eyes. After putting water in the bottle he placed lime in it, and while he was fitting the cork it exploded in his hands.

Death of James Creighton.

Toronto, May 7.—James Creighton, brother of the Assistant Receiver-General, is dead, after a lingering illness, in his 75th year. He was born in Ireland and settled in Toronto seventeen years ago. He was an Orangeman for over fifty years.

Soothing Syrup Kills.

Montreal, May 7.—Little Pallette Charpentier died Thursday from the effects of a soothing syrup which she drank. Ignorant of its injuriousness, she picked a bottle from a barrel and unwittingly drank a large portion of the syrup.

Indicted For Murder.

Ballston, N.Y., May 7.—Victor E. Millward of Saratoga Springs was indicted by the grand jury yesterday for the murder of his wife and infant son on March 27.

Mrs. Sternaman Wins Again.

Buffalo, May 7.—Another victory for Mrs. Olive A. It has often turned the scale of health the right way. Because Scott's Emulsion contains the pure cod liver oil it furnishes heat and fat. Working to Find Five Men.

Shamokin, Pa., May 9.—Rescuing parties are still at work in the Locust Gap Colliery, where five men are entombed, as a result of the fire in one of the slopes. The miners have been in the mine since Thursday, and all hope of seeing them alive have been abandoned. The fire is burning as fiercely as ever, making it impossible to penetrate the workings.

The Thompson Liner Jacona and the Allan Liner Bavarian will reach port to-day.

RUSSIANS RETIRING ON THE RUN BEFORE THE JAPANESE.

Forts Dismantled and Artillery Packed at Newchwang.

Kuropatkin to Make a Stand at Harbin—Brigands Infest Liaotung Peninsula—Civilians Getting Out of Newchwang in a Hurry—Japs at Fengwangcheng, and a Report That They Have Captured Talienwan (Dalny)—Japs Sweep Onward.

Newchwang, May 9.—There is every indication that the Russians have decided to evacuate Newchwang. Troops were leaving here all day yesterday. Forts have been dismantled, and all artillery have been placed on board trains. All the local transportation has been commandeered by the Russian authorities.

There is current here a native rumor that Japanese troops are in Foochau Bay (on the west coast of the Liaotung Peninsula and about 60 miles north of Port Arthur, but this report lacks confirmation.

Will Fight the Brigands.

The fear is held here that if the Russians leave and the Japanese do not at once take possession of Newchwang the brigands, who are now across the river, near Yinkow, will pillage the place. The foreign residents are prepared to resist the brigands should they come over. The British consul has requested that a gunboat be sent to Newchwang.

The Russians probably will destroy the gunboat Sivoutch before leaving. The vessel is at Newchwang. The Japanese troops fired on what probably was the last train out of Port Arthur as it passed near Port Adams. They used artillery and small arms and killed or wounded several Chinese.

Alexieff Reported Wounded.

It is reported here that Viceroy Alexieff was slightly wounded prior to his departure from Port Arthur. He barely escaped from there before the Japanese closed the lines of communication. The Russian general staff have moved from Liaoyang to Mukden. Russians here will not talk of the situation for fear that they may impart some information. They do not consider that their forces here are sufficient to hold this section of the country. It is probable that the Russian troops will withdraw to Harbin.

The Russian civilians at Newchwang are leaving hurriedly, and many natives are fleeing the city in fear that they will be subjected to maltreatment at the hands of the brigands.

Japs in Fengwangcheng.

Tokio, May 9.—The Japanese captured Fengwangcheng the day before yesterday, Friday. It was the second line of the Russian defence and a stiff fight was anticipated.

Gen. Kuroki pressed forward and attacked before the Russian had recovered from the demoralization and confusion into which they had been thrown by their previous defeat on the Yalu River.

The Russians before retiring exploded the magazine, but left large quantities of hospital stores, which are being used by the Japanese hospitals. Refugees from the woods and small villages are surrendering constantly.

The Russians buried many of their dead. Natives in the vicinity of Fengwangcheng say that last Monday the Russians carried about 800 wounded through that place, and that their casualties were probably above 3,000.

Destroyed Railways and Telegraph.

A detachment of the Japanese army operating on the Liaotung Peninsula, dispersed small bands of Russian troops on Friday and captured Pulientien, a railroad station. The Japanese destroyed the railway and telegraph, thus severing the Russian communication with Port Arthur.

Every supplemental report received from Gen. Kuroki, commanding the first Japanese army, increases the Russian casualties in last Sunday's battle at Chiutiencheng, on the Yalu River.

The Japanese have buried about 1,400 Russians and have 503 of the enemy's wounded in the field hospitals. It is estimated that the total Russian casualties exceed 2,500.

Over 300 Russian prisoners are en route to Matsuyama, where they are expected to arrive on Wednesday.

Russians Admit It.

St. Petersburg, May 9.—Gen. Kuropatkin has sent the following telegram, under date of May 7:

Lieut.-Gen. Zassalitch to-day reports that the enemy's cavalry and units of their advance guard occupied Fengwangcheng to-day.

"Two companies and two squadrons of their force proceeded towards Daliandiaputse. Our cavalry and units withdrew towards Schlendijane.

"Scouts from Fengwangcheng report that two Japanese divisions advanced May 6 towards Fengwangcheng by the main road from Pianmin. A third division advancing by the valley of the Ai River occupied a position near Khuandiputse and posted batteries to fire upon Fengwangcheng, counting upon finding our troops there.

"The Japanese advanced slowly and very cautiously upon Fengwangcheng."

Japs Capture Talienwan.

Shanghai, May 9.—It is reported that the Japanese captured Talienwan Saturday. Talienwan, which the Russians call Dalny, is on the eastern shore of the Liaotung Peninsula, just above Port Arthur. The ambition of the Russians has been to make it a great commercial centre. To that end they spent over $20,000,000 in building docks and warehouses there. The bay is deep and well protected from storms.

Russia Full of Internal Troubles.

Vienna, May 9.—Alarming rumors regarding the internal condition of Russia are current here. A conspiracy is said to have been discovered in Russian Poland, with the result that eighteen of the ringleaders were shot. Sanguinary collisions between the people and the police have taken place in Finland, and an infernal machine is said to have been found in the Winter Palace in one of the Czar's living rooms.

Troubles Never Come Singly.

St. Petersburg, May 9.—The Viedomosti says that the garrison of Cronstadt was recently summoned to extinguish a fire of wood and shavings in the fortress, which was blazing near where pryoxiline and shells were stored. It was afterwards discovered that the shavings had been soaked with petroleum.

Took Many Russ Prisoners.

Shanhaikwan, May 9.—It is reported here that there has been severe fighting at Fengchangwang, in which the Japanese were victorious. They took many prisoners. The Russians are retreating toward Haicheng (32 miles east by north of Chengchwang) and are evacuating the western side of the Liaotung Peninsula.

On Thursday and Saturday of last week the Japanese landed 10,000 men at Kinchau Bay, 10,000 at Foochau Bay and 7,000 at Pitsewo. They occupied the towns of Wafungtien and Pulantien and destroyed several miles of the railroad. Heavy fighting has been heard in the direction of Kaichau, where Japanese troops have been seen recently.

Port Arthur's Isolation Completed.

The isolation of Port Arthur is complete. Sixteen Japanese warships protected the landing of troops at Kinchau Bay, directing a sweeping fire over the narrow isthmus before the soldiers disembarked. Seventy-five Russians who were wounded in this fighting were brought in on the last train to arrive there.

Food is scarce at Mukden. The troops there are eating bean cakes.

Many Japs Missing.

Tokio, May 9.—The casualties in the last attempt of the Japanese fleet to block Port Arthur May 3 are one officer, Commander Takayangi, commanding the steamer Yedo, and six men killed; four men seriously and eleven men slightly wounded. Fourteen officers and 74 men are missing, and eight officers and 36 men were rescued uninjured. All the officers of the blocking ships, including Commander Takayangi, who were killed, have been decorated and granted annuities by the Emperor.

Greatest in Jap History.

Tokio, May 9.—A great popular demonstration was held here last night in honor of the victories achieved by the Japanese army and navy.

Tens of thousands of people carrying lanterns, flags and banners, marched past the Imperial palace and the offices of the Foreign, War and Navy Departments.

At the Navy Department they were reviewed by some of the Imperial Princes and Princesses and high officials of the Government and the Imperial household.

Many bands of music accompanied the marchers, and there were beautiful displays of fireworks.

THE GRITS AND THE TARIFF.

The average Liberal of to-day evidently looks upon the tariff as a measure to be treated in any way that may be to the advantage of the person discussing it. There is no fixed policy for the guidance of the followers of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It is a go-as-you-please all the way through and there is a distinct policy for every little section of the country. Out of this chaos arose a situation, the other day, which shows how absolutely divided on tariff matters the party in power is. In British Columbia there is a demand for tariff revision in favor of the lumber industries of that province. Messrs. Morrison and MacPherson are looking for votes in that quarter. They appealed to the Government to increase the duty on lumber and prevent undue competition from American mills. The Northwest members are also looking for votes, but on their preserves free lumber is supposed to be the strong vote catcher. Accordingly, the solid Territorial contingent, Messrs. Scott, Davis, Douglas and Oliver, implored Sir Wilfrid to disregard the foolish arguments of their B. C. colleagues. The Conservatives supported the claims of the Canadian industries, and every Opposition speaker was found to agree with his confreres. There were no dissensions among the party of "Canada for Canadians." One policy East and West characterized the utterances of the men behind Mr. Borden. The opportunism of the Liberals is rather amusing, and it is certainly far from straightforward. The country can gather from this family squabble, right under the noses of the Liberal leaders, how much reliance is to be placed in the Liberal policy or Liberal professions.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Pretty warm in Church yesterday.

Short sermon time is rapidly approaching.

• • •

It is gratifying to note that people who sprinkle the streets with their lawn hose are now reasonable enough to do so in moderation.

The footbridge, these days, "wobbles" as bad as the voice of a singer afflicted with the "vibrato" habit. It will soon be as trying to cross the bridge as it is to listen to the "wobble."

It is hinted that there will be no clerks' half-holiday this summer, but that we will, instead, have a civic holiday on August 1st. This, if true, is not a subject for congratulation. The Wednesday half-holiday was a godsend to many a tired saleslady and clerk, and it is doubtful if, under normal conditions, the employers lost anything by the short cessation of business. This summer, however, some of the merchants, we are told, intend to oppose the half-holiday scheme, claiming that the past severe winter and spring, which caused business to be very erratic, made it necessary for them to "pass up" the half-holiday this summer.

The merchants, of course, know their own business best, but, as before stated, it would be regrettable if the few brief breathing spells, which have been found nothing short of a godsend by many a tired clerk, should be abolished. July and August are trying months, and the opportunity to lay aside the cares of business for one afternoon each week, and lay in a supply of ozone by means of a trip on our beautiful bay, has been found of inestimable benefit by many Belleville people. And it would be regrettable if the exigencies of business made a change necessary.

Some pessimistic people (we all run across them occasionally) pull long faces these days and talk of the exodus which Belleville is going to see this spring and roll up the whites of their eyes as they unctuously call to mind "the good old times," when the city was full of industries and men could not be found to fill positions which were vacant. "Ah!" they will say, "we'll never see such times again!" Is it not just about time all such nonsensical talk was stopped? Standing on Front street last night one could not help being struck by the well-dressed, healthy, happy appearance of the crowd which was taking its evening stroll before retiring to its virtuous couch. We venture the assertion that in no small city in any country in the world would one see greater freedom from care or greater evidences of well-dressed prosperity. The girls dressed with neatness and good taste, the young men ditto, the elderly people having an air of placidity which spoke of no carking cares, surely such a scene as this is not to be witnessed in a city where the wolf is liable, at any moment, to come to the door.

Nay, nay! Belleville is just as well off as any other place. We all survived the winter in good shape, paid for our coal honorably, kept up our church subscriptions, got three square meals a day, and had sufficient bodily vigor this spring to come through the house-cleaning campaign with credit. And not a man fell by the wayside. What town or city can boast of a better record? The prospects are bright for a busy and prosperous summer. Now then, Oh! ye pessimists, lay aside your "mournful numbers" and sing a more cheerful melody. Belleville is all right, and if her well-to-do people will but realize it and invest a little of their surplus cash in a few more industries like the Lock Factory, things will be even better yet. Try the experiment for a year and see.

The Fifty-Seventh of Peterboro will get their new colors on Victoria day, when the ceremony of "trooping the colors" will be performed. Let's see, wasn't the gallant Fifteenth to do the same? Must be a hitch somewhere. But whatever is responsible for the delay we will venture the assertion that the fault does not lie at the door of the ladies who had the matter in hand.

The Kingston News and Times says: "Barges built to navigate Lake Ontario would be too large to pass through the Trent canal. Why, the large barges built for the St. Lawrence canals go no farther west than Kingston, because they are not considered safe on Lake Ontario."

Do you hear that, you Hamilton and Toronto fellows?

Trade unionism must certainly have run mad in Philadelphia, when the Central Labor Union, the other day, actually voted in the affirmative on the following question: "Does a union man violate the mandates of trade unionism when he allows his wife to mend a rent in his overcoat?"

And now the arm chair critics are finding out that Russia never licked anybody except a "few barbarian hordes." Poor Russia! A giant with feet of clay! Will somebody please lend us a brick to throw at her?

• • •

The Russian soldiers are brave, but they are of such a retiring disposition.

The gentle rain fell on the just Tories and unjust Grits alike today, and was blessed by them all.

Port Arthur will soon be in the position once occupied by our own dear Ladysmith, but we hardly think the Port will hold out so long.

• • •

A bomb has been found in the Czar's bedroom. Perhaps his faithful subjects thought the best way to cheer him up was to blow him up.

Perhaps the Russians could run faster if they cut off their whiskers. It must be a serious handicap in a windy country.

• • •

Mr. D. Jackson, of Maison Laffitte, France, is in the city. This gentleman is interested in the local rolling mills, and we hope that his visit may presage a speedy operation of the works.

• • •

Would it not be well for the Street Surveyor to visit the sidewalk in front of the opera house, where he will find a broken plank, and a hole some three feet deep? A splendid trap for a broken leg.

THE CENTRAL ONTARIO

JUDGMENT AT TORONTO REFUSING AN ORDER ASKED FOR BY THE COMPANY.

At Osgoode Hall on Saturday the following judgment was handed down by Mr. Justice McMahon in Single Court:

Ritchie v. Central Ontario R. W. Co.; Weddell v. Ritchie.—Judgment (H.) on motion by defendant railway company for an order authorizing and directing George Collins, the receiver and manager, to proceed with the construction of the extension of the railway from its present terminus, a short distance beyond the town of Bancroft, to effect a junction with the Canada Atlantic Railway at or near the station of Whitney, including the construction of an iron bridge over the York River, about a mile beyond the present northern terminus, to cost from $4,000 to $5000, the construction of such work of extension to be paid out of the accrued earnings of the railway in the hands of Collins, and the work to be proceeded with from time to time as in the judgment of Collins may be advisable, and as may be warranted by the amount of surplus earnings in his hands. The railway at present runs from Picton to Bancroft, a distance of 92 miles. The last extension north from Coe Hill to Bancroft was built during the years 1882-4. The proposed extension from Bancroft to Whitney would cover about 40 miles, and would cost $600,000. The receiver has on hand $75,000, being the earnings of the railway after meeting current expenses. The Ontario Legislature, in 1900, granted a subsidy of $120,000 for this extension, and in 1903 the Dominion Parliament granted a like subsidy. Held, that as none of the bond-holders are prepared to advance money towards the building of the proposed extension in the face of the opposition of the bondholders, whose interests are largely in excess of the bondholder (S. J. Ritchie) desiring the extension, the order should not be granted. Motion dismissed with costs.

The Roads and the Snow.

Half a dozen newspaper men who had come to town to attend the annual meeting of the Press Association were talking about the severity of the winter, the abundance of snow, and the disorganized train service.

"The train I traveled on," said Mr. Arch. McNee of the Windsor Record, "was delayed for nearly a day at Forest, and we made part of the journey with eight engines pulling the train."

"The train I came on," said Mr. Young of the Rodney Mercury, "was nine hours making fifteen miles between St. Thomas and London, and when I got to Toronto the two-day convention was over."

"In our town," said Mr. D. Williams of the Collingwood Bulletin, "careful measurements have been made of the snowfall this year, and the fall has amounted to 96 inches. If it had not melted and packed down, we would have had eight feet on the level."

"Up in our country," said Mr. W. Ireland of the Parry Sound North Star, "there's too much snow to carry on lumbering operations. Coal is scarce, and wood is hard to get because people can't get it from the bush. Why, if you chop down a tree up there the snow's so deep that the tree just falls down in the snow and is buried clear out of sight, and the chopper won't be able to find it until next spring."—Toronto Star.

WRECKED BY A GULL.

Peculiar Defence of Captain Baker, of the Wrecked H.M.S. Flora.

"As for the charge of default, it is self-evident that the lamentable occurrence was entirely caused by the mistaking of one beacon for another. This result was due to the distortion of the fog, and the gull being perched on the top of the beacon. The circumstances were so peculiar that my experienced eyes were deceived, as well as those of Lieut. Grant and two seamen."

This is part of the evidence given by Captain Caspar J. Baker, commander of His Britannic Majesty's ship Flora, before the court-martial held in Esquimault, B.C. In threading the intricate passage between Vancouver Island and the mainland, H.M.S. Flora was stranded and nearly wrecked. The vessel was pulled off after being completely stripped and dismantled.

After towing the hulk of the cruiser to safe anchorage, the helping war-vessels proceeded to Esquimault, and Captain Baker, commander of H.M.S. Flora, and Navigating Lieutenant Harold Grant, surrendered their swords to a court-martial and were placed on trial.

Captain Baker, speaking in his own defence, said: "I do not suppose that there is any position for an officer of any rank or standing in His Majesty's Navy which is so trying as being put upon trial, after an unbroken and honorable career, for neglect of duties and hazarding and stranding the ship which he has the honor to command. I would submit that in this case there were many unlucky circumstances. A safe course was shaped with a good departure; signalmen were on the lookout and leadsmen in the chains heaving the lead. The weather justified me in proceeding. I saw the black beacon about one point on the starboard bow, which I took to be the Base Flats beacon. It was looming up in the fog with a gull perched on it, giving the beacon all the appearance of having a white cage on top."

Lieut. Grant, the navigating officer, spoke similarly in his defence. He, too, attributed the disaster solely to the gull. When the "prisoners," after a long wait, were called back to hear the verdict of the court, the disposition of their swords upon the table silently told the tale before the official words were spoken. The points lay toward the prisoners, and with this grim warning the officers waited for the word "Guilty" was the verdict of the court. The gull had wrecked a million-dollar cruiser and two fair reputations.

THEY KNOW IT.

Thousands of people throughout the country know that the ordinary remedies for piles—ointments, suppositories and appliances—will not cure.

The best of them only bring passing relief.

REAL LIVE WAKE.

Latest Insurance Fraud Story Comes From Dublin, Ireland.

An amusing case was recently heard in the Dublin Police Court. A middle-aged woman, named Mary O'Neil, was charged with having obtained £8 by false pretences from the British Legal Life Assurance and Loan Company, (Limited). From the statement of Mr. Brady, prosecuting solicitor, it appeared that the accused induced a Mrs. Bridget Connell, who had an insurance policy with the company, to pretend she was dead. She was "laid out," with candles at the head and feet, and a "wake" was held. Mary O'Neil then went out, obtained a death certificate from a doctor, went to the Insurance Company, and was paid the £8 as next-of-kin of Bridget Connell. Subsequently, Bridget Connell, receiving none of the money, and hearing that Mary O'Neil was having "a high old time of it, driving about in a cab with a soldier and a coal-porter," got up, and went down to the Insurance Company, to ask them why they had paid her policy. She surprised the local manager of the company by saying, "I'm Bridget Connell, and not dead at all." On being put into the the witness-box, Mrs. Connell said she remembered being "laid out," but did not pretend to be dead.

Mr. Brady—There was a real live wake and a real live corpse, and there was plenty of porter?—Yes. They got in porter, and they got in another candle, and put it in a bottle. They were all dancing and "lepping" about the boards (laughter).

Did you get any of the porter?—Yes; I got a sup (laughter.)

Accused at this point exclaimed, "When we went to wash and lay her out she came to life again, and we all rushed out (laughter).

According to Detective Officer McCabe's statement, when he arrested Mrs. O'Neill she admitted that she got the money, and added, "My aunt was dead from seven o'clock in the morning (laughter). Mrs. Nolan then went to wash her, and she woke up (laughter), and we all got a great fright and ran out. 'Oh aunt,' I said, 'I received your Society money, and I am going back with it.' She called me and told me to give it to her, as she was in debt. I then gave her the money—£7 17s. During the day she gave me 20s. for two shawls. She said she would buy an ass and cart with the remainder" (laughter.)

Perfect Handcuffs.

Scotland Yard detectives have for years been trying to get a really secure handcuff that would baffle even themselves or experts like Houdini to open without a key. It is well known that the Government regulation handcuff can be opened by most policemen and all habitual criminals by means of a trick. Mr. Nathaniel Hart, a Birmingham blacksmith, has spent five years of night and day toil in making a pair of handcuffs that "no mortal man can escape from." In his early days Mr. Hart was employed in the manufacture of handcuffs. At the age of 30 he set up in business for himself as a blacksmith, but handcuffs, and how to manacle without a defect, have always had a fascination for him. Five years of his spare time has been devoted to the invention of a perfect handcuff. The great difficulty the maker of a handcuff has to contend with is that there is so little room in which a really powerful lock can be placed. Knowing this, Mr. Hart, after countless trials, has at length succeeded in constructing a lock which, when placed within the handcuff, even violent blows with a sledgehammer can only bend, but cannot break asunder. This particular cuff is in the shape of a figure 8, with what may be roughly described as part of a rifle barrel attached. The lock is made of the finest steel, and is "a lock within a lock." It cannot be picked. The inventor cannot do it himself, and the key took him over a week to make.

Comforting the Curate.

A very nervous young curate who as a rule always shaved himself once found himself compelled to patronize a barber, having while from home forgotten his shaving tackle.

"I hope you can shave me without cutting me. I am—er—I mean I have a very nervous—er—that is, sensitive skin," stammered the curate.

"Cut you, sir," repeated the juvenile looking operator reassuringly, flourishing his gleaming razor round the shrinking throat of the curate. "If I so much as nick you once I'll—I'll—I'll cut your 'ead off, sir, and my own arterwards. I can't say fairer'n that."—Liverpool Globe.

POISON-PAINS

Rheumatism is really a poison in the blood, and where there is poison there's disaster in a lesser or greater degree—but there's a cure.

South American Rheumatic Cure neutralizes the acid poison in the blood in a few hours, and hence relieves at once—the complete cure is effected a little more slowly, but surely. When the disease is of only a few years standing, not more than one to three days' time is required to effect a complete cure. When it has been present in the system for 10 or 15 years the acid poison has permeated the flesh and often the marrow of the bones. In such cases, relief is obtained at once, but a cure cannot be secured under two or three weeks. 9a

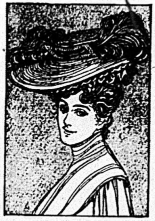
DRESS NOVELTIES.

Some New Dress Skirts—Black and White Effects.

Much black and white are seen in the new spring millinery, and this was exemplified in a three cornered hat seen recently. It was of fine straw in a dead white shade, the upturned brim being of heavier black satin straw. The sole trimming was on the left side—two tips, one black, the other white passed through a small Louis XV wreath of tiny white roses and held down by a knot of gold galloon.



BLACK TULLE HAT.

The triple skirt is one of the novelties in fashion. It is eased in slightly at the waist, so that it falls in graceful fullness.

Another up to date skirt is gathered at the waist and trimmed with five wide folds to simulate tucks.

A skirt not quite so new, but popular, is made with two clusters of bias folds high in the back and coming down into a point in the front. The lowest of these clusters heads a gathered flounce which is similarly graduated. The back is finished with a double box plait.

The cut shows a hat of black tulle having a band of black velvet and a steel buckle. It is trimmed on each side with a black ostrich tip.

The Dutch people were scraping together money to start schools of their own. Mr. Stead declared that despite Lord Milner's cancellation of the appointment with him, both were still on most cordial terms. Lord Milner was formerly Mr. Stead's sub-editor.

CANADA AND EUROPEAN UNREST

In this time of war statesmen of all the great countries of the world are uneasy, and the movements of the Japanese and Russian fleets are watched with the keenest interest by other nations. Will China remain quiescent, and will the Dardanelles straits be made available for war vessels—are questions which agitate the minds of those who direct the course of nations. It has been suggested that these great men might obtain solace if they followed the Canadian example of smoking Dardanelles Turkish cigarettes instead of worrying about the Dardanelles straits.

BY ST, GEORGE RATHBORNE

them up securely, and, by special messenger, send them to the baron in the morning, with some such line as this: 'First attempt a failure. Try again, dear baron.' Or perhaps I might say: 'If you could only have seen the chap who carried this plunge through the window, baron!' "

Mynheer Joe is inclined to be facetious, but his companion looks further and sees more clearly.

"That would be imprudent,my friend," he says.

"Tell me exactly how."

"Well, you unmask your batteries and let him know that you have discovered his advance. That is what we call bad policy in a game."

"Ah, yes, I begin to see already."

"Far better to keep him in ignorance, and then you have the advantage. He may never know that you supect him. Let it be set down that some rascally robbers attempted to get in your room and you fired 'em out."

"I had an idea, you understand, that by letting this man know I was on to his game I could hold him responsible for the future."

"Nonsense! The baron would be responsible for nothing. He's as slippery as an eel. Depend upon it, you can't meet him squarely. But if you ever get the better of him, it will be by using his own weapons."

There is sound advice in this, which Mynheer Joe may profit by. It must not be understood that he is ignorant of such characters. He has met all kinds and conditions of men during his years of travel, and even among the blacks of the African wilds been compelled to overcome strategy with the same tactics.

After a little more talk, Mr. Grimes retires to his room, and Mynheer Joe throws himself down upon his cot again. It is hardly probable that the same intruders will attempt anything more in that line, at least not on this night.

So the explorer takes cat-naps until morning comes. Then he finds the sky ablaze as the sun rises in a sea of red—a spectacle that is awe-inspiring in its grandeur. Being a lover of nature, Mynheer Joe gloats over the view and regrets to see the bright colors fade away.

Another day in Egypt has begun, a day of sight-seeing to the many travellers who come to feast their eyes on storied Nile, majestic pyramids, wonderful ruins, strange tombs hewn in the rocks of the Mokkatam Hills above Cairo, and above all,the massive Sphinx, that guards the remains of a temple under the sand—a day that may have much to do with the fortunes of Mynheer Joe and those he calls friends.

CHAPTER XI.

Shepherd's is astir.

Parties are sallying forth,equipped for sight-seeing. Some go by the river, while others mount donkeys, according to what they mean to gaze upon. The scene in front of the hotel is once more one of confusion. Finely dressed dragomans are bustling about, ordering the donkey boys this way and that, and assuming an air of most tremendous importance. Indeed, it could be easily imagined that some great Eastern potentate is about to set out on a most wonderful journey, to see the excitement that reigns in front of the hotel.

Every day, during the winter season, it is the same. These tourists, principally English and American, who make the rounds of Egypt, leave a large sum of money behind them, and if a year comes when some dread disease keeps the tide of travel away, there will be mourning in the land of the khedive among Turk, Arab, Moor and native fellahin.

Mynheer Joe, after breakfast,is seated where he may watch the panorama and enjoy its peculiar features as only one can who is a veteran traveller or has no business on hand.

While Joe sits upon the piazza he sees one approaching whose coming fires his heart. Of course, it is Molly—no one else could make his blood leap so madly. She reaches his side, and Mynheer Joe is on his feet instantly, offering her a chair. He makes a move to toss his weed away, but she calls out:

"Refrain! I know it would give you pain in the first place, and in the open air I really enjoy the odor of a good cigar," she laughs.

He looks at his weed doubtfully.

"This is Turkish tobacco and has a fine reputation, but I rather prefer the American when I can get it, or Havana, which is the same thing. However, since you are so kind, I will keep it, and take a seat to leeward," which he does with much pleasure.

She does not look as though bent upon a mission of reproach. Joe takes courage and boldly opens the game himself.

"You have learned the truth, Miss Molly. I was in the act of confessing myself, when the baron and his friend interrupted us."

"Yes, I know all about it," she replies, nodding.

"And you don't bear malice?" eagerly.

"How could I—against the one who saved my life—and under such extraordinary circumstances as this thing was done, too. No, since my father has forgiven you, I will not be backward about doing the same. Besides, he firmly believes that you saved his life, in some way that he would not explain."

It is evident that Molly does not know all, and is ignorant that the baron is the prime cause of this trouble. Some men would have taken solid satisfaction in informing her as to the truth, and with good reason, too; but Mynheer Joe seems to be above it."

"Let us drop the whole matter, Miss Molly," he says, quite willing it shall be forgotten.

She looks at him a little queerly, for it has already occurred to her woman's mind that there is something back of it all which she had not yet fathomed—something concerning an unknown quantity, the terrible danger at which her father has hinted without giving any details; and like others of the human family, Miss Molly is gifted with a certain amount of curiosity, that trait not wholly confined to her sex.

"Very well, it shall be just as you say, on one condition, Mynheer Joe," she replies.

"What is that?" he asks.

"Some time you will tell me what this danger is that hangs over the governor's head."

"Yes, I promise, but it is no longer there, I assure you," he makes answer.

They drift on to general topics, and then Demosthenes Tanner's voice is heard in the land, as he figuratively demolishes a clumsy waiter who has had the misfortune to step on his pet corn.

He joins them and greets them with a warmth, that proves his mind has undergone no change, since they parted on the previous night. Turning his head right and left, he shows that it is still in a serviceable condition.

"A little stiff in the neck, that's all, my boy. Wonderful stuff, hammamelis! Only for having a bottle along, I'd have been laid up for a week. Jove! Feel that muscle! Like steel! I say, this business of exploring the wilds is no child's play, after all. Is it?"

He rattles on, drawing two chairs up, placing his feet on one, and bringing into view an enormous cigar,which must have been made especially for a man of his size.

So Joe has to describe, how, on many an occasion, he and his men have been compelled to actually hew a way through a dense network of vines and fallen trees, that covered the stream they were navigating.

By degrees, they get him to Khartoom, and as he had promised Tanner the story of that doomed city's fall, he proceeds to give a graphic description of what took place, from the time of Gordon's arrival up to the ill-fated 26th of January,when the Christian hero fell, a martyr to political hesitation at home, betrayed by those in whom he trusted.

Mynheer Joe would speak as little as possible of his own share in these tragic events, but they draw him out, and he is thus compelled to tell what happened.

While Molly sits there, her lovely eyes glued on the face of the speaker, deep admiration and even growing love kindling her fine features, the baron glares at the group from the other end of the piazza.

He realizes that the fates have dealt him a terrible blow, and that his case is indeed hopeless, unless fortune throws in his way a means of overturning circumstances.

The baron chances to be one of these men who imagine that the battle is won by the party who fights for victory; therefore he will not be apt to sit around with his hands in his pockets.

Already he has proven to what end he can be driven by necessity. None but a desperate fiend would ever think of getting a dangerous rival out of the way by such a plan as ruining his looks with acid. This same man is fertile in resources and dangerous as a foe. Mynheer Joe may learn to his cost that he was really safer among the howling, maddened dervishes of the Mahdi than he is in Cairo to-day.

When the spectacle grows too bitter for him to longer gaze upon, the baron walks away, muttering to himself."

Mr. Grimes has from a place of concealment been watching this game, and chuckles when he notes the diplomat's discomfiture. Still keeping his eye upon him, he sees the baron signal a French ex-army officer, who has some connection with the khedive's palace, being in his employ.

These two talk long and earnestly, during which the baron glances a number of times toward the trio on the piazza, and even the Frenchman looks earnestly that way.

"Some deviltry afoot," mutters Mr. Grimes. I'd give a little to be able to hear what is said, but must find out the truth in another way."

Watching the couple, he finally sees them shake hands heartily; the French officer bows, places a hand on his heart, makes a gesture and walks away. Whatever has been the purport of their conversation, the matter has undoubtedly been arranged.

As the baron passes Mr. Grimes, the latter quietly follows him, making sure to attract no attention. In this way he sees the Russian diplomat finally enter a peculiar house, which has something of the appearance of a gymnasium.

Loitering around, Mr. Grimes discovers an English gentleman, whom he knows, about to enter. He stops him, to ask a question, and learns that the building is an athletic club-room. His friend asks him to enter, which he willingly does, for this is exactly what he wants.

A number of men are within. Some box; others leap and swing dumb-bells; while not a few use the foils. Mr. Grimes discovers the baron, dressed in a suit that is worn in the exercise, about to enter into an engagement with one of the professors. The sight somehow makes him jump at conclusions. Does the baron contemplate a duel? Since his villainous plan to destroy Joe's looks has failed, will he endeavor to put the dashing explorer out of the way by a recourse to arms and the code of honor?

Mr. Grimes knows that this man has been a principal in many duels—that he is an expert swordsman and a dead shot. His size, instead of being against him, really gives him an advantage.

Hence Mynheer Joe's friend watches the work of the baron closely. Mr. Grimes is no swordsman himself, but he can tell good wrist-play, lunge and parry when he sees it.

Before five minutes pass by he realizes that the baron is simply immense. He plays with the professor as a cat might with a mouse, and, whenever he feels in the humor, dazzles the man's eyes with a flashing wall of steel, plucks his foil out of his grasp by a wonderful wrench, and laughs in a cold-blooded, sardonic way that sets Grimes wild.

Heaven help poor Mayheer Joe, he thinks, if he stands before this little giant with a sword in his hand! There is just about one chance in a dozen for him. He may outwit the baron in diplomacy, but cold steel held in the grasp of a wizard is a hard thing to beat.

So Mr. Grimes watches and shudders, as, in imagination, he sees his friend occupying the place of the professor. Before now, under such circumstances, the baron's cruel blade has passed through his body.

Mr. Grimes studies his method, hoping to find a weak spot. As has already been said he has considerable knowledge of the science,and after a time jumps at a conclusion.

"Heavens! This man, wonderful as he is, would stand a poor show against a left-handed swordsman! I have seen Joe do a number of things with his left hand. If he handles a sword in that way—well, Mr. Baron, you may be astonished—that's all."

When the baron has enjoyed himself to the full with the professor, who is but a plaything in his hands,he saunters over to the shooting gallery to try his hand.

One would think his nerves might not be as steady as could be desired after his hot engagement with the foils, and Mr. Grimes feels an admiration for the man coupled with his aversion, when he

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

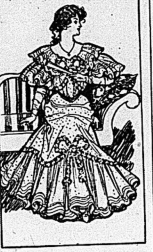
THE WORLD OF VANITY.

Trimmings Are Now Horizontal. Hood Effects Very Smart.

There seems to be a complete revolution in trimming. It is placed horizontally instead of vertically. This is especially true of the full gathered skirts, which are decorated with bands of velvet silk and lace in some instances four or five inches wide. Kilted skirts are similarly decorated with these bands, usually three or five in number.



MULL GOWN.

Tiny velvet balls are among the latest dress trimmings, and these are outlined on both sides of a straight lace band.

The hood effect, drooping off the shoulders, has come to be considered more smart than the bertha. It is faced with lace or velvet.

Little stoles of ermine and lace will be worn far into the spring with street costumes and gowns.

Veiling will continue to be one of the favorite spring materials, particularly in gray and black.

Separate white skirts of novelty veiling are very smart to wear with lace waists of the same color.

The number of blouses that are requisite to complete the wardrobe of the fashionable woman makes a very serious hole in her dress allowance. At the best of times there is very little wear in mousseline de soie or chiffon, and when it means, in addition, the constant drawing off and on of a fur coat or mantle the problem becomes quite a grave and important one. It is good hearing that some of the newest shantungs, both natural and dyed, are being fashioned in a chiffon weight, which offers a way out of the difficulty for reasons of economy as well as expediency. There is a certain suggestion of plainness about a shantung, but it can be trimmed and decorated to the pink of modistic perfection. It is a point in its favor, too, that the natural silks of this description have the added advantage of being none the worse for immersion in the washtub, which saves those alarming cleaner's bills which represent the heavy toll levied on extravagance.

Too Free With Knives.

Sir Frederick Treves, the eminent English surgeon, recently delivered an address in which he took the view that the knife is used too hastily in many cases of appendicitis. There are opposing schools of surgery all over the world in this generation. One is rarely willing to wait and often cuts in a hurry. The other holds to the view that nature ought to have a liberal chance to do her best. In the long run the conservative surgeons may possibly come out ahead.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affliction from a NEGLECTED COLD, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedella."

Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Few men realize what large dividends they can draw on kindness.

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

Always on Hand.—Mr. Thomas H. Porter, Lower Ireland, P.Q., writes: "My son, 18 months old, had croup so bad that nothing gave him relief until a neighbor brought me some of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which I gave him, and in six hours he was cured. It is the best medicine I ever used, and I would not be without a bottle of it in my house."

Messrs. Northrop & Lyman Co. are the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is now being sold in immense quantities throughout the Dominion. It is welcomed by the suffering invalid everywhere with emotions of delight, because it banishes pain and gives instant relief. This valuable specific for almost "every ill that flesh is heir to," is valued by the sufferer as more precious than gold. It is the elixir of life to many a wasted frame. To the farmer it is indispensable, and it should be in every house.

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

A Wonderful Cure. — Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore, but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle, and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

BELLEVILLE CHEESE BOARD HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED—PROTEST AGAINST PROPOSED INCREASE IN FREIGHT RATES.

The attendance at the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade, held on Saturday afternoon, was large, and considerable business was transacted, including the election of officers for the ensuing year. Previous to the election Messrs. J. T. Holgate and J. S. Dench, auditors, presented the financial report for the past year, which showed a balance on hand of $1.98. The election of officers was then proceeded with, with the following result:

Mr. J. S. Dench moved, seconded by Mr. C. Giles, that Mr. Jas. Anderson, of Ameliasburg, be President for 1904. There being no other nomination, Mr. Anderson was declared unanimously elected.

Mr. Anderson, in accepting the position, thanked the members in a hearty manner for the honor they had conferred upon him. He had no great ambition to fill the position, but as it had been unanimously tendered to him he would accept it and do all in his power to conduct the business successfully and harmoniously. He referred to the recent annual convention of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's convention, held in this city, and which was in every respect a grand success. If it was deemed desirable, the convention could be secured here again two years hence. In speaking of the farmers generally and the positions of trust held by them, the President-elect said it would no doubt be better for the country if there were more of them at the head of affairs. It had been said, and he did not doubt the assertion, that the farmers had the best brains and best morals. In concluding he said he would do all in his power to make the Belleville Cheese Board the leading board in Ontario, and he desired the hearty co-operation of all the members towards this end.

Moved by Mr. Dench, seconded by Mr. Holgate, that a vote of thanks be tendered to Mr. W. C. Farley, the retiring President, for the efficient and faithful manner in which he discharged his duties during the year.

The resolution was unanimously adopted, and Mr. Farley replied briefly, but appropriately.

Mr. Holgate moved, seconded by Mr. Farley, that Mr. Tom Ketcheson of Sidney, be appointed First Vice-President.—Carried.

Mr. B. Mallory moved, seconded by Mr. J. Austin, that Mr. J. S. Dench, of Sidney, be Second Vice-President.—Carried.

Mr. Holgate moved, seconded by Mr. M. Clarke, that Mr. Wm. Clazie, of Thurlow, be Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. Tom Ketcheson moved, seconded by Mr. W. C. Farley, that Mr. D. J. Fairfield, of Belleville, be Secretary-Treasurer.

A ballot being requested, it was granted. The result was that Mr. Fairfield was elected, he receiving 23 votes and Mr. Clazie 20.

When the vote was announced Mr. Dench jocularly remarked that Mr. Fairfield had the same majority as Hon. Mr. Ross.

Mr. W. Crews moved, seconded by Mr. M. Leavitt, that Messrs. J. S. Dench and W. C. Farley be named as Auditors.—Carried.

This concluded the election of officers and all the gentlemen elected to positions returned their thanks for the honor conferred upon them.

Freight Rates.

A communication was read from Mr. Hodgson, of Montreal, in reference to the increase in freight rates over those of last year. This would mean considerable loss to the farmers if an effort was not made to have the old rates restored. In Montreal every effort was being made by the Merchants' Association to prevent the new tariff from going into effect.

Mr. Mallory moved, seconded by Mr. Dench, that the Belleville Cheese Board co-operate with the Montreal Merchants' Association with a view to having the old rates restored.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

This concluded the special business and the boarding of cheese was then proceeded with. There were 1590 boxes of white and 170 boxes of colored cheese boarded by the following factories:

	W.	C
Shannonville	35
Ketcheson		50
Silver Springs	50
Union	175

But two bids were made for the cheese boarded, namely 6 1-2c and 6 9-16c. A few factories sold at the latter figure.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

Christ Church.

"Bright side of present day Christianity" was the subject discussed last evening by the Rector, Rev. W. B. Heeney. A large congregation was in attendance. The text was from Romans, 1st chapter, 16th verse:

> "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first and also to the Greek."

Holloway Street.

The Pastor, Rev. J. R. Real, occupied the pulpit at both services yesterday. In the morning his subject was in reference to John the Baptist. The text was from St. Matthew, 11th chapter, 3rd verse:

> "And said unto him; art thou he that should come; or do we look for another?"

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

In the absence of the Rector yesterday the pulpit of the above church was filled in the morning by Rev. R. Wallace and in the evening by Mr. Raney, of Albert College. Both gentlemen gave thoughtful and interesting discourses. At the evening service Miss Pearl Fanning sang the favorite sacred song, "Face to Face," very sweetly, indeed.

Baptist Church.

At the evening service the Pastor, Rev. O. C. Elliott, preached an earnest and instructive discourse from the text found in 2nd Corinthians, 5th chapter and 7th verse:

> "We are confident; I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord."

Tabernacle.

At both services there were good congregations and the sermons by the Pastor, Rev. Geo. Brown, were much appreciated. In the evening his text was from the 32nd Psalm, 5th verse:

> "I acknowledge my sins unto Thee, and mine iniquities have I not hid. I said I will confess my transgressions unto the Lord, and thou forgivest the iniquity of my sin."

At the morning service Mr. Wm. Cunnington sang a solo entitled "Fear Ye Not, O Israel," and in the evening Miss M. Stork sang "The Lord is Risen."

John Street.

The Pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm, officiated and preached at both services yesterday which were well attended. In the evening his text was from St. Luke, 12th chapter and 16th verse:

> "And he spoke a parable unto them, saying, the ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully."

St. Andrew's.

Rev. Dr. McLeod, of Atwood, yesterday preached at both services, and the congregations were favorably impressed with his discourses. In the evening his text was from St. Matthew, [illegible]th chapter and a portion of the 18th verse:

> "And the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

During the service the anthem "Nearer My God to Thee," was sung, solos being taken by Miss Norah Lazier and Mr. John McIntosh.

Bridge Street.

"Sowing and Reaping" was the Rev Dr. Crothers subject last evening, and he preached an able sermon to a large congregation. His text was from Galatians, 6th chapter and 8th verse:

> "For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting."

During the offertory a quartette composed of Misses Vermilyea and Wilson, Messrs. C. H. Vermilyea and J. T. Burns, sang "Linger With Me."

Christian Science.

The subject of our lesson service yesterday was "Mortals and Immortals." The golden text makes it very plain that the thought which should be uppermost in our minds should be the spiritual. "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit......The Spirit itself beareth witness with our Spirit, that we are the children of God."—Romans, 8, 5.16. Com.

Alleged Injury to Property.

Frank Wilson was for some time a tenant in one of Mr. A. T. Petrie's houses, and it is alleged that he did some damage to the house. Mr. Petrie to-day had Wilson before the Magistrate, charged with malicious injury to property. After some evidence had been taken, the case was enlarged until Friday. Mr. McMahon appeared for the defendant.

Young Trenton Lad Was Horribly Burned.

SMOKING IN BED, SET FIRE TO BEDCLOTHES, AND HIS LIFE IS NOW DESPAIRED OF.

A fire took place yesterday morning in the neighboring town of Trenton, and as a result there is every likelihood that a young life will be cut off.

It seems that, at 2 o'clock on Sunday morning, fire was discovered in the lodging house kept by Alex. Stevenson and family, on Front St., and the flames made such rapid headway that it was all the people in the house could do to escape with their lives, most of them in their night clothes. One lad, John Campeau, 16 years of age, was not able to make his escape and was carried out in a terribly burned condition. Medical attention was given him without delay, but the cruel flames had left him in such a condition that all hope of saving his life has been abandoned, and our informant tells us that it is only a question of time when death will end the poor lad's agony.

The house and all its contents were consumed.

The fire is believed to have been caused by young Campeau himself, who had been smoking in bed and set fire to the bedclothes.

Some other residents of the house had very narrow escapes.

CROSSED THE DARK RIVER.

CORNELIUS WILLIAMSON.

Mr. Cornelius Williamson died on Saturday night at the residence of his son, Mr. Wm. Williamson, Church street. The deceased had been ailing for some time, but the end came rather suddenly from an attack of heart disease. Mr. Williamson was born in the County of Cork, Ireland, 79 years ago. When a young man he came to this country and took up his residence in Belleville, where he resided for over half a century. Deceased was favorably known throughout the city. He was a faithful member of St. Michael's Church. Some eight years ago Mrs. Williamson died and the only remaining member of the family is one son, Mr. Wm. Williamson, who is connected with the Customs department in this city.

MYRTLE PHILLIPS.

Myrtle Phillips, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Phillips, Ameliasburg, died on Saturday, after a few days' illness. The remains were interred in the Belleville cemetery on Sunday afternoon.

DANIEL F. GEROW.

Mr. Daniel F. Gerow, a well-known yeoman residing in the 5th concession of Thurlow township, died last evening in his 72nd year. He had lived in the township many years. Deceased was a member of the Presbyterian church. A widow and a family of three sons and one daughter survive.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"OLD LAVENDER" TO-NIGHT.

Local theatre-goers are promised a rare treat this evening, when the above great play holds the boards. Pretty Alice Braham, who is playing Laura Cogswell in "Old Lavender," is well off for relatives in the company. Mart Hanley, the manager, is her uncle; Dave Braham, the composer of the Harrigan music, is her father; Mrs. Harrigan is her sister and of course Edward Harrigan is her brother-in-law. The young lady is receiving considerable mention this season for her excellent work. The supporting company is a most capable one, and a fine presentation of the play can be confidently looked for.

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

It may safely be said that no actor who has appeared in Canada has got so thoroughly into the hearts of the theatre-going public as Mr. Reeves-Smith, who made so great an impression in a "Brace of Partridges." He has according to the press and public where he appeared in "The Tyranny of Tears" by Haddon Chambers, gone "one better" and his latest venture is one of the best acted and most exquisite comedies seen in Canada in many years. It is to be hoped that the great treat in store for the theatre-going public will not be missed and that "The Tyranny of Tears" will draw the best house of the season at the opera house, Thursday, May 12.

DEATHS

WILLIAMSON—In Belleville, on Saturday, May 7, 1904, Cornelius Williamson, aged 79 years.

The funeral will take place from the residence of his son, William Williamson, Church street, on Tuesday, May 10, at 9 a.m. to St. Michael's Church, thence to the R. C. cemetery.

A GIRL'S BETRAYAL AND WHAT FOLLOWED IT.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST A MAN AND WIFE OF ST. OLA.

A middle-aged couple named Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Conley, residents of St. Ola, were on Saturday evening brought to the county jail here. They have been committed for trial by Justices P. P. Clarke and J. Golden on the charge of illegally disposing of the body of an infant. It appears that some time ago an unfortunate girl gave birth to a baby boy at the residence of the Conleys and it died within twenty-four hours. The body was buried in a field near by, it is alleged, by Conley, which has caused the trouble. The couple on Friday had a preliminary examination at St. Ola, with the result above named. They will be brought up for election in a few days.

A FINE OLD ACTOR.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. EDWARD HARRIGAN, FOR MANY YEARS THE IDOL OF NEW YORK.

Twenty years ago "Ned" Harrigan's name was on the tongue of every man, woman and child who attended the theatres of New York. Who, among old-time theatre-goers, does not remember the days when "The Mulligan Guards," "Squatter Sovereignty" and other dramas of that description were eagerly patronized? "Ned" Harrigan wrote them, and the rollicking, homely songs which they contained, and which everybody liked to sing and whistle. Nowadays they are not heard so often, but the humor and pathos of the words and the charm of the music is still there. The writer this morning had the pleasure of a "shake hands" with Mr. Harrigan, and a short chat over old times, of which the old actor-author has so many interesting reminiscences. "The old times are gone," he says, "and the old boys and girls with them. Things have changed sadly, and I often sigh for the days of old New York, before the foreign element made it the cosmopolitan dumping ground it is to-day. God preserve you, in Canada, from the Ghetto and such like places that we have in New York."

Amen to that.

Mr. Harrigan and his company have been on tour since Christmas, and will close their season in a day or two. He is, he told us, now at work on a new play, the chief character in which is a cross-roads showman, full of stage tricks and wiles.

Good luck to laughter-loving, big-hearted "Ned" Harrigan, whose characters were always full of kindly human nature, and whose plays, though, perhaps, a trifle unrefined, were calculated to appeal to the best in a man or woman.

TWEED MAN ROBBED.

ROBERT SPENCER GETS THREE YEARS IN PENITENTIARY.

Toronto, May 9.—Patrick Flynn, of Tweed, was robbed of about $70 by a picked-up acquaintance, Robert Spencer, on Friday night, while both were in an intoxicated condition.

Flynn's new-found friend was an old offender, having served various terms in prison since 1876, among others, ten years for house-breaking. Flynn was found by P. C. Robinson wandering on the street about midnight, and complaining that he had been robbed. As the policeman had earlier in the evening seen him in Spencer's company, he at once suspected the latter of the theft, and, going to 120 Richmond street, where he knew the prisoner lived, he found him there and arrested him. The money was found in Spencer's possession. Magistrate Denison sentenced Spencer to three years in penitentiary Saturday morning.

SPORTING NOTES.

The B.B.C.'s have retired from the City Football League, defaulting the match they were to have played with Albert College on Saturday afternoon. A rearrangement of the schedule may be necessary.

The Montreal team of the Eastern Baseball League has lost 8 games and won 0. There's a warm welcome awaiting the "Ciphers" when they reach home.

The New Yorks look like good things in the National League this year. The Pittsburgs, last year's champions, are lost in the ruck.

The lady got up, appeared frightened and excited, but was unhurt, going down town to look up her husband to tell him of the unfortunate occurrence. The escape of Mrs. Cross from death is nothing short of a miracle.

200 THIBETANS KILLED

British Fought Them Six Hours During a Big Snowstorm.

15,000 Thibetans Held Their Positions With Great Tenacity—British Lost One Officer, Capt. Bethune, and Three Men Killed—They Had Also Twenty-One Wounded—Dalai Lama's Resistance Will Cost Many Lives.

British Camp, Karo Pass, Thibet, Friday, May 6.—A stiff fight to-day to drive the Thibetans from their positions two miles below the pass lasted for six hours.

The Thibetans, numbering 15,000, held the positions with great tenacity, and lost nearly 200 before they were expelled.

The British losses were Captain Bethune and three men killed and 21 men wounded.

A big snowstorm prevailed throughout the fight.

Will Cost Many Lives.

London, May 9.—The Thibetans' attack on the British mission at Gyangste on Thursday, in which 250 natives were killed and wounded, seems to show that the Dalai Lama is determined to persevere in his opposition to British aims. Exactly what these aims are the Government has not yet indicated, recognition of certain British trading rights being nothing more than an excuse for the present "diplomatic" mission with its strong accompanying column for "purposes of defence."

The papers which the Government issued this week show that the Chinese influence at Lhasa is pratically nil, the Dalai Lama having disregarded even a personal missive from the Emperor directing his representative, or Amban, to proceed to meet the British Commission. A change of Amban effected nothing, and the Dalai absolutely refuses to send his own representatives or allow the Chinese the necessary means of going.

The result will probably be further butchery of the practically unarmed Thibetans till Col. Younghusband meets and discusses matters with the Dalai himself in Lhasa. The settlement then arrived at will be a practical, if unavowed, substitution of British for Chinese suzerainty.

Russia's present predicament is, of course, Great Britain's opportunity to establish her influence over a near neighbor of India where previously Russian influence has been supreme. Apparently the news of Russia's reverses has not reached Lhasa, for the Lamas rely on Russian support, which has long been promised, rather than their own unfortunate soldiery in resisting British aims.

A Tunnel For Winnipeg.

Montreal, May 9.—The long-talked-of tunnel under Main street, Winnipeg, which is to be constructed by the C.P.R., under an agreement with the city Government, will be an accomplished fact be September. Wm. Whyte announced yesterday that the contract had been given to Messrs. Deeks & Deeks of Winnipeg, who will begin May 15 and complete the work in less than four months. There will be five concrete arches, reinforced by steel work, and eight tracks, the cost being about $115,000.

Meet Me at the Inside Inn.

Never Before Did a Great World's Fair Have a Big Hotel Inside the Grounds.

RATES WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

"Meet me at the Inside Inn." That will be the expression most frequently heard at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. This hotel is an immense structure, 400 feet wide and 800 feet long, with 2,257 sleeping rooms and a dining room seating 2,500 persons. The hotel is inside the Exposition grounds, and operated under the supervision of the Exposition management. It is well appointed and furnished in modern up-to-date style, and will be the center of social affairs in the way of dinners and family reunions inside the grounds.

This hotel is in the southeast portion of the grounds, not far from the Plateau of States, and to the north a short distance are the famous Cascade Gardens, Festival Hall and Connade of States, which form a part of the main picture of the Exposition. Street Railways running by the door go direct to the Union Railway station downtown, and the Intramural Road, inside the grounds, carried guests from the hotel entrance to all points of interest. Here is a cool retreat, where persons can find rest, enjoyment and quietude away from the noise and crush of the crowds along the avenues of the Exposition grounds. Sightseeing at a large Exposition is the most tiresome pleasure, because the mind is busily engaged and finds diversion by constantly changing scenes, while the body is becoming weary and the visitor does not realize how tired he is until he stops to rest. The place to rest is the Inside Inn. The hotel rates cover the daily admission fee to the grounds, and the registered guest at this hotel is free from the annoyance of pushing through the crowds at the gates. There are 500 rooms at $1.50 per person, 500 at $2.00, 500 at $2.50.

The Inside Inn will long be remembered as a distinctive feature of the largest Universal Fair ever held in the world—a fair representing a total cost of $50,000,000 and as large in size as the Columbian, the Pan-American and the Paris fairs combined.

DUMB ANIMALS' RIGHTS

MOSES FIRST GREAT STATESMAN WHO RECOGNIZED THEM.

LAWGIVER AFTER MEAN MEN

"Thou Shalt Not Muzzle the Ox When He Treadeth Out the Corn," Was His Law Designed to Teach Them in a Practical Way That They Should Be Merciful to Their Beasts.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 8.—Kindness and consideration for all of God's creatures is the preacher's theme, and he pleads that man should value the affection of the dumb creation no less than he should respect its rights, since divine wisdom has placed it in his care. The text is Deuteronomy xxv, 4, "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn."

This is the age of machinery. This is the time when man is not limited in his operations to the work of his two hands, but with his little finger can lift a lever which has the strength of a thousand hands; when, instead of his being content with seeing only such things as his eyes perceive, he calls to his aid the telescope and the microscope that multiply his power of vision a thousandfold. The old fashioned spinning wheel has been developed into the mighty Belfast linen mills. The old fashioned scythe has evolved into the swift mowing machine, which goes singing through the harvest fields. The old fashioned prairie schooner has long since given place to the tireless velocity of the lightning express, which never stops by day or by night except, like a thirsty monster, to take a drink.

The patent offices in Washington are crowded with innumerable inventions for the saving of labor and time. In none of them, however, is the contrast between modern and ancient methods so marked as we see it when the mammoth flour mills of Minneapolis are compared with the custom referred to in the text. In that great city of the Northwest not only is the grain almost instantly changed into flour by the best of modern machinery, but practically not one grain is lost. Upon the old fashioned thrashing floor everything was different. There a team of oxen would be harnessed to a collection of boards nailed together. Then these boards would be dragged over the grain and the chaff would be broken from the kernels of wheat. Then the winds would blow over the thrashing floor and separate the chaff from the wheat.

Such were the thrashing floors of the ancients. Now, as Moses went in and out of the country he saw a great many of these thrashing floors. Furthermore, he saw that among their owners there were a great many mean men in those days, as there are in our own days. He saw that these mean men nearly always first showed their meanness to their beasts. They not only overworked their oxen but they underfed them. Their meanness was most emphatically demonstrated when thrashing. Fearing lest their hard worked oxen might reach down and pick up from the thrashing floors a stray mouthful of grain to eat, these mean farmers would muzzle their beasts so that the hungry animals could see the food and yet not eat any. Now, Moses says in a practical way: "These men must be taught to be merciful to their beasts. I have made a law requiring them to obey God and be just in their dealings with their neighbors. Now I will make another law requiring them to be liberal in their provision for the animals which work for them." Then the great law-giver of the Hebrews sits down and writes these words of my text: "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn."

Moses was the first great statesman that I know of who recognized the rights of dumb animals. It is a significant fact that in this early code of laws he should have given legal rights to animals as well as to men and women. It was a sound and righteous course, and I am glad to remember that we, too, have not only laws to prevent the ill usage of animals, but also in the Humane Society an organization to see that those laws are enforced. I want to show you this morning why every Christian should be in touch with that society and that its principles should be applied to all classes and all ages. There is no reason why the admonition should be limited to the farmer. The boy should be taught to be good to his pet dogs and squirrels; the drayman should be compelled to lighten the load if his horse is too weak to draw it; the hackman should be required to blanket his steed shivering in the chill blasts of winter; the sportsman should be prohibited shooting the mother bird in nesting time. I would try to show that the Christ who was born amid the lowing of the cattle and the bleating of the sheep and the neighing of the horses, whinnying for their oats, is to-day the friend and protector of the dumb brutes as well as of our fellow men.

The Humane Society of America should be accounted one of the best of societies. Its work has a deeper and a wider significance than some of us may have heretofore supposed. The evil of cruelty to animals does not end with the inflicting of pain and injustice on the dumb brutes. But as the small fibrous tumor, nestling under the fair skin, if let alone, may reach out its fatal roots toward the heart, so the evils of cruelty against dumb animals may at last reach out for the heart of man itself. Injustice against the dumb brute inevitably paves the way for injustice against the dumb brute's master. If a boy delights to torture a dog or a cat or a mouse, there will surely come a time when that boy, grown into a man, will delight in torturing his fellow beings.

A man's nature is degraded by indulging in cruelty to animals. He losses his manliness and acquires the nature of brutes. He undergoes in his lifetime the metamorphosis that the orientals believe he suffers after death. In the Far East there is a popular belief held by multitudes; it is a belief in the transmigration of souls. This means, in popular interpretation, that after a man dies his soul passes into the body of a dog or a cat or a horse or a lion and so lives on through the coming ages. If he is a mean man then he becomes a mean beast like a jackal or a hyena, if a good man then his soul takes upon itself the form of a noble beast; but though in Christianized America we do not believe in the transmigration of souls we may see around us an analogous phenomenon. When a man abuses a dumb brute he is not punished by having his soul at death pass into the body of a jackal, but he takes on the character of those cruel, bestial, four legged scavengers of the desert, and he becomes one of them in his nature.

What is to-day one of the chief causes of the moral and spiritual as well as the temporal degeneracy of Spain? It is without doubt due to the bestial and brutalizing tendencies of the merciless bullfight. These Spanish bullfights always take place on Sunday because they are held to be the sacred national game. A famous American traveler tells us that at each bullfight between six and eight of the fiercest kind of bulls and from twenty to forty horses are killed. The waving of the red mantles, the shooting of the darts, the arena soaked with blood, the screams of the dying horses dragging themselves around, sometimes with their entrails in full view of the excited populace; the mad charges of the enraged bulls, combine to make a scene of horror indescribable and one which it is impossible for the civilized American to fully grasp. When the famous Francisco Romero de Runda taught the Spanish people how to scientifically abuse and madden and torture to death a four legged brute he made it possible for the people themselves, by looking upon such scenes of horror, to become worse than brutes. No human being can be unmerciful to a beast without himself after awhile growing merciless in his dealings with his fellow men.

The Humane Society of America, in teaching man to be kind to the dumb brute, has a second practical mission! It teaches that harshness and bitterness and cruelty do absolutely no good in the training and the true subjugation of an animal. A cruel master never was able to get the best results out of a horse. Blows and kicks and cuffs only make a stubborn horse the more stubborn and the balky animal the more set in his traces. I never learned this lesson in a more impressive way than when I passed two summers almost within a stone's throw of one of the best stock farms in this country. What magnificent animals those were! Racing horses were not raised there, but the best blood for carriage horses and roadsters of all sorts. Their clean limbs, their flashing eyes, their high strung, nervous organization, made those animals the pride of almost every stable they entered. Yet the whip was never used upon them. They were trained almost entirely by kindness. After the colts had been allowed to run in the fields for about three years, always, however, being petted by their owners, they were ready for the harness. The first day on which the bridle was put upon them a strap was fastened on the fore hoof to teach them that they must mind. That was all. After the first two or three days the horse learned that if he plunged the strap would be applied to raise his forefoot and keep him on three legs. Having learned the lesson he ceased to plunge, and the use of the strap was discontinued. Then these colts were quietly hitched by the sides of the older horses and driven out to plow. The drivers never jerked them, but always talked kindly to them and coaxed them. And though those horses seemed to have within them all the pentup ambition of Job's war charger, "smelling the battle from afar," yet in the hands of their kind masters they became gentle, lovable and docile.

An old, grumpy, dyspeptic philosopher once said, "The more I see of men the better I like dogs." That is not my idea. But the more I see of dogs and horses and cattle the more I think they are like men. Supposing you were a horse hitched to a carriage. Supposing every time you made a misstep there was a whip like a knife ready to cut into your skin, would not your nerves be continually unstrung? Would you not always be ready to jump, to shy and to rear? Supposing you were in a stall with your head tied to a halter and the hostler wanted you to move over to the other side of the stall, and instead of placing his hand gently upon you and saying quietly, "Now move over," he gives you a savage kick in the stomach or a cuff upon the side of the head that made your ear ring and your brain dizzy with pain. What would you do? Would you bite and kick him if you got the chance? I doubt whether human nature would be as long suffering as equine nature under such provocation. But if every time that hostler came around you got a caress or a piece of apple every time he applies the currycomb and a kind, reassuring word every time a shrieking engine came past I think that hostler or driver would be loved and trusted and obeyed just as my little child has, through my kindness, learned to love and trust and obey me.

The Humane Society of America demands justice for the dumb brute because the equine laborer is always worthy of his hire. The horse has just as much right to his oats as the farm hand has to his noonday lunch, the ox to his mouthful of grain as the owner of the thrashing floor has to his loaf of bread after it is baked. The robin that sings in our cherry tree has a right to his living as well as the little child that eats at our dining table. In the great economy of nature every creature was created for a purpose, and if that creature fulfills a good purpose then you and I should try to make its life happy, as that creature is trying to make ours.

Did you ever stop to think how much you and I are indebted to all those "four footed beasts of the earth and wild beasts and creeping things and fowls of the air" which Peter saw in vision let down from the heavens in a great sheet when he lodged with Simon the tanner? The horse! How many of our burdens he has carried! How many happy times we have had when being drawn by him over the country roads! In how many scenes of merrymaking has he been an essential part! And often in times of sadness he has come to our help. The birds! Yes, they, too, are worthy of their hire. They are our woodland prima donnas, our songsters and songstresses, that make the day, as well as the night, vocal with music.

"I saw a hideous snake this afternoon," I said last summer to a Michigan farmer. "It seemed to be all colors and I caught it in the middle of the road." "Did you kill it?" "Of course I killed it. What are snakes for but to kill." "No, my friend," he answered. "All snakes are not to kill. The poisonous snakes are to kill, but not those that are not poisonous. The snakes we have around here, for the most part, are a great blessing to the farmers. They kill the bugs and insects which destroy the crops. Snakes are not always the enemy, but often the friend, of man." Yes, my brother, we should not only leave the ox unmuzzled upon the thrashing floor, because the laborer is always worthy of his hire, but the sheep and oxen and cattle and horses and birds and fishes, and sometimes even the snakes are among the best and the most faithful laborers we have.

Again, I assert that we should honor the Humane Society of America because I sometimes think that the birds of the air, as well as the beasts of the earth, may have an ardor of affection even greater than that of man if that loving power of the heart is ever allowed to develop. I believe that a dog can love as a man can love. I believe a horse can love as a man can love, and a bird also. We should be very careful lest we trample upon the hearts of the dumb brutes, as some of us too often trample upon the hearts of men.

But, lastly, we should be kind and gentle and loving toward the dumb brutes because God loves them, and what God loves we should not despise. I used to think that God created this world for man. I used to think that all other worlds were merely empty, burned out worlds like the moon. I used to think that the other worlds were not worth the decorating and upholstering because man was not there. But now I believe all worlds are created as our own world was created because God loves the beautiful and has declared that everything he created in the universe was good. Yes, God "hath made everything beautiful in his time." In his eyes the trout springing out of the brook and sporting in the eddy is good; therefore we should not catch it for mere wanton sport to let it rot upon the bank. God turned the throat of the nightingale and the lark to sing after the twilight, and in God's sight their music is sweet. As our Father loves the birds we should not think it silly to throw a few crumbs into the snow bank for the snowbirds which have been caught in the blizzard, nor to leave for our feathered friends a cup of water upon the window sill in times of drought.

God loves the lambs. He made the sheep's gentleness the symbol of a divine gentleness. Christ was led as a sheep dumb before his shearers, and as a lamb at the slaughter he opened not his mouth. God made the horse and saw that he was good. On that great day of the triumph of righteousness over sin Jesus, the eternal conqueror, shall come riding down the heavenly heights upon the white charger of victory. Oh, my friends, if God created the beasts of the fields and the birds of the air and the fish of the seas and saw they were good we should be kind and gentle and loving toward them all! From the dumb creatures as well as from the sweet voices of the woods we may learn some of the best lessons of Christian love.

God bless the Humane Society of America! God bless all those men and women who are taking off the cruel collars galling the necks of the horses suffering with sores and unhitching horses that are hobbling along on decayed feet! God bless the Christlike movement which makes men treat their dogs at least as kindly as they would treat their human enemies! God bless all movements that would respect the inalienable rights of the sheep and the horses and cattle which stood about the manger on the night that Jesus was born! God bless all those who would rationally and with Christian feeling translate to the human heart the commandment of my text which says, "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn!"

Farming in Japan.

Rice, the chief food of the Japanese, is the most important crop, and in 1900, 205,667,080 bushels were produced. Rice land is worth nearly three times other arable land, and in 1900 nearly 7,000,000 acres were cultivated as rice fields. A great quantity of rice is used in the manufacture of sake, and in 1900, 173,051,000 gallons were produced from 27,789 establishments. Barley was raised in 1900 on 1,579,096 acres, yielding 42,591,056 bushels; rye on 1,697,850 acres, yielding 37,176,867 bushels; wheat on 1,147,747 acres, yielding 21,006,776 bushels. In 1900 736,933 acres were devoted to the silk culture, and 120,702 acres to tea, which produced 63,210,100 pounds. Japan raises more cereals and other food products than she needs herself, so even should she be cut off by Russia from the rest of the world she could support her armies as well as her own inhabitants.

VILLAGE HALF BURNED DOWN.

Forty-Nine Buildings in Heart of Utica, Mich., Wiped Out.

Utica, Mich., May 10.—A disastrous fire occurred here Sunday, the village being half wiped out. Several business places and ten dwellings were burned before a fire engine arrived from Detroit by special train. The entire heart of Utica is gone. The fire burned seven hours before it was checked. Forty-nine buildings, including the only bank, one church and some of the leading stores, lie in ruins. The loss is estimated at $150,000, with only $20,000 insurance. One hundred and fifty people are homeless.

Carriage Works Burned.

Peterboro, May 10.—Shortly after 4.30 o'clock yesterday morning, fire was discovered in the wood room of the George Fitzgerald Carriage Works. The ground floor was completely gutted, while much damage was done on the two upper storeys through smoke and water. The loss in tools, carriage wheels, shafts and buggy tops is in the neighborhood of $2,000; partially covered by insurance.

Fourteen Buildings Burned.

Woodstock, N. B., May 10.—Fourteen buildings, including houses and stores, were burned at Richmond Corners Sunday night.

Firemen Injured.

Hamilton, May 10.—The loss by the fire that broke out in Semmens & Evel's casket factory yesterday morning will amount to several thousand dollars. By the breaking of a ladder Robt Aitchison, W. Voelker and Tom Wadsworth were severely bruised.

Dysentery, Smallpox and Typhus Menace Russian Troops.

New York, May 10.—An urgent telegram has been received from Mukden, asking for the immediate despatch of 100 doctors, says a despatch from St. Petersburg. Typhus fever, dysentery and smallpox have assumed an epidemic character among the Russian troops.

Food For Three Months Only.

Shanhaikwan, May 10.—A merchant here, who is in a position to have trustworthy information, has informed a correspondent of the Associated Press that at Port Arthur there is only coal sufficient to last the warships for six weeks, and that the food supply there will feed 8,000 men for three months only.

Evacuating Newchwang.

Che Foo, May 10.—Passengers arriving here on the Patrarch from Newchwang say that when they left Newchwang the Russians had commenced to evacuate. Some guns had been taken from the forts and many troops had already gone. In other respects Newchwang was quiet. The passengers understood before their departure that the Japanese had cut the railway, but they learned no particulars.

A Sensation.

Kharkoff, Russia, Sunday, May 8.—The order for the mobilization of the reserves, which is to take place to-morrow, has caused a sensation here.

Advanced 100 Miles.

Seoul, May 10.—The Japanese Consul at Gensan telegraphs that a force of Russians, number unknown, accompanied by Manchurian Mounted Bandits, crossed the Yalu far above Wiju, advanced southeast and occupied Changjin, 100 miles west of Songjin, May 5.

Jap Refugees.

Washington, May 10.—The State Department has received a cablegram from United States Commercial Agent Greener at Vladivostock stating the British merchant ship Ettrickdale had sailed from Vladivostock Saturday for a Japanese port with 326 Japanese refuges, who had been picked up at Korsakoff, on the Island of Sakhalin.

At Harbin Now.

St. Petersburg, May 10.—Viceroy Alexieff has telegraphed to the Emperor announcing the transfer of his headquarters to Harbin.

The Admiralty reports that Rear-Admiral Jessen's squadron is at Vladivostock.

Kuropatkin Will Stay.

St. Petersburg, May 10.—It is officially announced that General Kuropatkin's headquarters will remain at Liaoyang. He has no intention, at least for the present, of retiring from his position there.

Unfounded.

St. Petersburg, May 10.—It is semi-officially stated that the report that Viceroy Alexieff will be recalled at the instance of General Kuropatkin and Vice-Admiral Skrydloff is absolutely unfounded.

15,000 Retiring.

London, May 10.—The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Chronicle says that 15,000 Russians are retiring from Newchwang to Liaoyang.

The correspondent also says that Chinese bandits have destroyed the road to Tashichia and to Huicheng. The Russians are making a new road.

The correspondent adds that bandits have attacked and cut other parts of the railroad, and points out that the capture of Dalny will enable the Japanese to cut off Port Arthur's electrical supply.

Evacuation of Newchwang.

Shanhaikwan, May 10.—The evacuation of Newchwang continues. The Russian authorities have promised to leave a sufficient rear guard to prevent pillaging by the Chinese bandits, who are in the vicinity and awaiting an opportunity to get into the city.

Nothing further has been heard of the Japanese transports which were seen recently near Kaichau.

The Russians are commandeering cattle on the west side of the Liao River, and the Chinese are indignant at this procedure. Eight hundred head of cattle have been taken at Yinkow.

The Official Losses.

Tokio, May 10.—The official report of the Japanese casualties at the battle of the Yalu, May 1, shows that the guards lost one officer and twenty men killed and had seven officers and one hundred and twenty-two men wounded.

The second division lost one officer and eighty-four men killed and thirteen officers and three hundred and five men wounded.

The twelfth division had three officers and seventy-six men killed and five officers and two hundred and sixty-three men wounded.

Score a Shut Out?

London, May 10.—The Daily Telegraph's Seoul correspondent says:

"It is believed here that a portion of the Russian Vladivostock fleet has been successfully shut out, and is now in the Sea of Japan trying to evade the Japanese."

Typhoon Retarded Landing.

London, May 10.—A despatch to a news agency from Liaoyang, dated May 10, says: "An accident to a train from Port Arthur to Harbin occurred May 8, near Tieling. Thirty passengers were killed and fifty injured, and the permanent way was greatly damaged.

"It is reported that a three days' typhoon greatly retarded the Japanese landing at Pitsewo."

WAS IT FOUL PLAY?

Body of William Bell, Long Missing, Found in the Bay.

Toronto, May 10.—William Bell, who lived at 12 Whitesides place, disappeared on a Saturday afternoon in November. His body was found in the bay yesterday.

Bell was employed as a carpenter at the cattle market, and left there with a couple of friends on pay-day to go to his home. As far as known, he never reached there. His brothers were under the impression that he had met with foul play.

There was no money found on the body, although Bell had drawn about $80 that day. It is known that he spent some money during the afternoon, but not a great deal.

Shamokin, Pa., May 10.—It is barely possible that the five miners who were imprisoned in the Locust Gap slope on Thursday may be alive. The smoke and black damp had sufficiently disappeared yesterday to enable the rescuing party to penetrate to the bottom of the slope, but no trace of the men could be found. It is believed that the miners have gone into an abandoned slope.

Daily Intelligencer.

STRIKE! STRIKE!! STRIKE!!!

Scarcely a newspaper is unfolded without the eye falling upon the word "strike!"

A short time ago, in Montreal, one class of workmen struck, not because they had any complaint to make against their employers, on account of wages, time or ill-usage, but simply because the employers had secured the services of policemen to protect other workmen in other branches of their business from being maltreated and ill-used in the performance of their daily labor.

In Toronto there is now a strike on the part of workers in the breweries of the city. No doubt our prohibition friends will exclaim, "It were well if all workers in liquor manufacturing concerns would strike and remain on strike." It is the reasons for the strike, not the work in which they were engaged that the business men of Canada have to consider.

It appears from the accounts given in the Toronto papers that the men employed in the O'Keefe and Reinhardt breweries were ordered to strike by the "General Executive of the International Union of the United States," on account of what the men considered "the obnoxious disposition shown by these breweries "towards the Union men." In other words the employers were not polite enough to the employed when demands were made, which could not be granted. "We were displeased with the treatment we received during the negotiations from the master brewers, who are affiliated with the Employers' Association," said an official of the Union. "The breweries affected had broken their agreement and imported foreigners, with whom the men strongly objected to associate."

And for this reason, the report says, "The General Executive of the International Union, now in session in Cincinnati, decided, after a ten hours' discussion, to advise the men to strike."

The strikers will get strike pay while they are idle from the International Union. Messrs. Fritz Renz, of Buffalo, and Edward F. Ward, of Buffalo, will arrive in Toronto on the 5th May, and take charge of the strikers, who will meet in Richmond Hall in the morning."

Here we have a couple of Yankee Union men sent from Buffalo to "take charge of the Canadian strikers." A pretty state of affairs, truly, that our industries in Canada are to be ruled by a combination of Yankees, some of whose "walking bosses" have lingered in the States prison until they died on account of their villainies. These men should be deported as soon as they arrive. If the law is not sufficiently strong to warrant deportation it should be made so at the earliest moment.

The employers' side of the question is this: "Last year the brewery workers received increases in wages and a reduction of hours from 60 to 55. The increase in wages was 12 1-2 per cent., but the minimum wage was raised from $6 to $8 per week before the increased percentage was added, which thus made the minimum wage $9 per week. Including the reduction of hours and the added wages, the brewers' statement shows that the lowest increase made was 23 per cent., and in some cases it was over 63 per cent. The wages paid in other departments in Toronto are very much higher than is paid by any other Canadian brewers."

The men's demands are: "That none but Union men shall be employed, no workman to be employed upon the recommendation of a customer, no man shall be dismissed without giving reasons to a grievance committee, who may insist on arbitration; forty-five hours per week shall constitute the working hours during January, February, and March; time and a half to be paid for overtime, and increase in wages of about 12 1-2 per cent., the minimum wage in most of the classes being first raised by $1.

Well may those who have capital to invest in industries pause before taking the step, if they are to be hampered by the men necessary to carry on the enterprise, as to who they shall employ, who they shall dismiss and what wages they shall pay.

It simply resolves itself into this: That the employer must furnish the capital and the workmen dictate how it shall be spent and who shall receive it.

Talk of monopolies and tyranny, Trade Unionists governed and ruled by Yankees double discount them all.

Here we are in Canada, ruled and governed by Yankee bosses, while they will not permit a Canadian to cross the line to seek employment, and politicians dare not raise their voices against these wrongs for fear of the labor vote.

Mr. William Johnson sends us a card from Egypt. It is a picture card, showing the pyramid of Cheops and the Sphinx. The pyramid looks natural, but one gazes in vain for the figure of Mr. Johnson at its summit, giving the Chautauqua salute. Perhaps he didn't feel equal to climbing so high. The card says "Egypt is progressing wonderfully Temperature to-day (April 27) at Cairo, 99 in the shade; at the pyramid, 131—no shade." It is quite probably that Mr. Johnson would have traded the pyramid, Sphinx and all, for one of those nice, big shade trees on Bridge St.

The man on the next block was passing through the footbridge gangway on Sunday, going to church, and he says the air was full of dust, stirred up by ladies who were dragging long trains on their dresses. The man on the next block is getting to be a regular crank, I'm afraid.

Mr. Goldwin Smith, a man of letters, has written to Mr. Andrew Carnegie, giving him what is popularly called, "a piece of his mind." He advises the multi-millionaire to use up some of his superfluous cash in helping to relieve the misery in the homes of the world's poor, instead of spending it all on libraries. Libraries will grow themselves with the development of civilization; but pressing poverty demands prompt treatment. The bid for lasting fame made by the ugly little iron man evidently finds little favor with Dr. Smith, who knows enough about both literature and socialism to be able to appreciate the fact that a well-stored mind is not to be compared with a well-stored larder, so far as comfort is concerned.

Sunshine Furnace

DOUBLE FEED-DOORS

Just about the meanest thing a furnace can have is a dinky little door. Ever have one? Hit the edge as often as the hole? One has to be an expert stoker to shovel coal into some furnaces. If you're not an expert you'll get as much on the floor as in the furnace.

The Sunshine furnace is equipped with a good, big door. You can put your shovel in and drop the coal just where it is wanted—no trouble, no taking aim, no missing, no scattering, or annoyance.

Everything about the Sunshine furnace is on the same scale of thoughtfulness.

New Trades Unionists Chased English Hebes Out of Hamilton.

A Hamilton correspondent of The Toronto News says: The movement for the abolition of the historic barmaid in England has caused the Industrial Committee of the National Union of Women Workers to urge the magistrates of the licensing sessions in London to consider the advisability of discontinuing the employment of women in public bars after five years, and that meanwhile no new employes should be engaged. The committee believe that the conditions of the work are not suitable for women and girls, and are incapable of any radical reform. It is quite customary for the hours to run from 15½ to 18½ hours a day, and Sunday, with the exception perhaps of once a month, usually entails a day of from seven to nine hours work. In England the only legal regulation affecting employment in public houses limits the hours of both sexes under eighteen years of age to seventy-four hours per week. Under the London County Council inspectors have practically stopped the employment of young persons in such places, a proof that the hours of work are beyond the limit. The number of women employed in serving intoxicating liquors in the United Kingdom runs into the thousands. In London alone, according to the 1901 census, there are 7,832 barmaids, while the County of Lancaster has 2,747. The committee consider it essential that any action taken should be gradual, as those engaged in the work find difficulty in settling into other occupations, and it would obviously be a hardship to turn those in any given locality out of work without long notice.

The ruddy-faced barmaid with a dainty display of dimpled arms as she hands a goblet of foaming ale across the shining counter, is not unknown to Hamilton. Some three or four years ago the Crystal Hotel imported two from the Old Country. They were buxom-looking girls, and their black and white costums suited the pink and white complexions to a nicety. Their appearance behind the bar "caught on" like a comic opera, and the hotel did a rushing business. One of the girls after a time left for other work, and the proprietor, to keep up the attraction, imported two more. He had now three behind the bar, and they made the corner business livelier than before. The first exclamation of many visitors to the town was, "Let's go up and see the barmaids." The proprietor, not to be outdone, married one of them himself. After a time the barmaid novelty began to slacken, but the hotel still did a big business, and the women ale-servers would doubtless be here yet but for the action of the city unions. The girls were not only working for $2.50 or $3.00 a week, but were keeping out the male bartender. The union, moreover, held that a barmaid was against the sentiment of the country, and they started a boycott. Placards were posted up on the street and elsewhere denouncing the employment of the barmaids, and notices were served on all the wholesale houses of the city. It ended in the hotel letting the women go to save the house from ruin. The girls went finally to Windsor to work in some hotel, partly in the capacity of barmaids and partly that of servants.

How "Abide With Me" Was Written.

At the age of fifty-four Lyte found himself doomed to die of consumption, and in sorrow at having to leave his task unfinished he prayed that at the least it might be granted to him to write something which would live to the glory of God when he was dead. Then on the last evening he ever spent at Brixham, after preaching his farewell sermon, he took pen and as the sun was setting over the ships that lay in the harbor "Abide With Me" was written. Next morning he started for the Riviera and there died a month later.—London Telegraph.

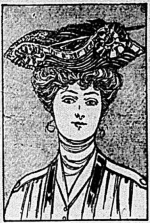
DETAILS OF DRESS.

Shirred Bands as Trimming—Undersleeves Made of Rufflings.

A thick shirring between two corded effects is one of the season's favorite trimmings. It is of necessity rather bulky, but very becoming to some figures, just which it is hard to tell, for the rule of the thin figure does not apply here at all. It demands a certain chic about the wearer, a certain distinction and erectness in carriage. Whole skirts and waists are fussed up in this manner, but, on the other hand, a simple band of shirring frequently outlines a bolero or a wide cape collar, a similar line appearing on the lower edge of the wide sleeve. Taffeta, oriental satin, chiffon velvet and even chiffon and net—these are all used with good effect. Sometimes the piping is of velvet and the shirring of a contrasting material, preferably dull.



THREE CORNERED HAT.

Undersleeves composed of a multitude of fine rufflings of lace and net are very smart, and the effect is heightened if the bolero separates in front to show a blouse front composed of similar ruffles.

The long shoulder is to be with us more than ever during the coming season, but the wise dressmaker will stick to the effect rather than to the real length in the seam itself, for this is very uncomfortable and rarely becoming.

The cut shows a new three cornered hat of brown tulle and brown straw. It is trimmed with rosettes of velvet and brilliant buckles set in gilt.

WHAT IS WORN.

Bright Shades Not Worn In Street. Black and White Dressy Gowns.

Smartly dressed women are following the example of their sisters in Paris in discarding entirely bright colors for street wear. For outdoor wear the woman who has her carriage can afford to wear an infinity of beautifully delicate shades impossible for her poorer sister, who has to wade across dusty crossings and be jostled along busy sidewalks.

Nothing can take the place of a dark tailor made in some becoming color, either black, brown or gun metal. Parisians are wearing a great deal of black and touches of black on everything.

Accordion plaited gowns will be again revived this spring, so if you can afford it why not buy a sufficient number of yards of supple, inexpensive black or gray material and have it accordion plaited, ready to be given to the dressmaker? Such gowns may be made ever so simply with a wide, swathed belt, finished with fringed or knotted ends, and the whole is so comparatively inexpensive that it is worthy of consideration.

White gowns relieved with black satin, oriental preferred, are to be seen at present on the Riviera.

Irish embroidery and renaissance lace will again be very popular. Lace or embroidery medallions surrounded by rows of handmade fancy stitches will also hold a prominent position for trimmings. A charming blouse in pale blue crepe de chine seen recently had a yoke of Irish embroidery held together with several kinds of fancy stitches worked in embroidery silk.

The illustration shows a black and white effect. The dress is of white chiffon, relieved by insertions of black lace and sequin trimming.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Talking English.

Here is a story that comes from London and illustrates the peculiarities of the American boy: The youngster was at the Hotel Cecil, and he listened intently to a group of English folks. Suddenly he looked up at his mother. "Say, ma, do these people talk English?" "Certainly they do, my child. What a question!" "Then we don't," said the cub.

The Young Fool.

There may be no fool like the old fool, but he is given a close rub by the young man who tries to keep step with companions who have three or four times as much spending money as he.

CUTICURA

Soap, Ointment and Pills the World's Greatest Skin Cures.

Complete Treatment for Every Humour, from Pimples to Scrofula

WHEN ALL ELSE FAILS

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurement, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants and the anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum, all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy, have made them the standard skin cures and humour remedies of the civilized world.

The grandest testimonial that can be offered the Cuticura remedies is their world-wide sale, due to the personal recommendations of those who have used them. From a small beginning in the simplest form, against prejudice and opposition, against monied hosts, countless rivals, and trade indifference, Cuticura remedies have become the greatest curatives of their time, and, in fact, of all time, for nowhere in the history of medicine is to be found another approaching them in popularity and sale. In every clime and with every people they have met with the same reception. The confines of the earth are the only limits to their growth. They have conquered the world.

Cuticura Resolvent, liquid and in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM sees him send shot after shot with astonishing accuracy, the various swinging targets being struck almost with every discharge of the revolver.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

"A dangerous combination of a man to be at large, capable of doing a tremendous amount of mischief in the world, and the sooner he turns up his toes under the sod the better for humanity," is the mental comment of Mr. Grimes.

He meets the baron at the bar of the gallery, in a friendly spirit, and wishing to see more of his pistol practice soon banters him into a little wager. Mr. Grimes has always prided himself on his marksmanship, but he has a poor show beside this man of the quick eye and steady hand.

His main object is to discover whether the baron has any weak point about his marksmanship, so that he can turn it to good account. Even in this a fair measure of success falls to his share, enough to pay him for his trouble. At fifteen and twenty-fixe paces the Russian duelist is almost a dead shot, but strange to say, the American beats him at twenty paces. It would be hard to understand just why this is so, and to make sure of it Mr. Grimes is not content with the one trial but goes through it all again.

The result is the same.

That settles it. If there is to be an exchange of shots between the rivals, it must be at twenty paces. He feels that he is doing only what is right in learning these facts. Doubtless this man without a conscience has in times past spitted more than one boor at the duello, and against whom he had a grudge. He deserves neither sympathy nor pity, and such a man asks nothing of the world.

Perhaps the baron has already sized up the other and remembers that he saw him with the man he plots to destroy. That does not appear to disturb him very much; indeed, he may even take a savage satisfaction in showing the American how he will make crow's meat of his friend when the time comes.

Mr. Grimes has seen enough.

At his first opportunity he must warn Joe, so that the other may not stumble into the pit which the baron would dig for him, at least without a knowledge of the consequences.

After leaving the gymnasium where the stalwart British officers spend an hour or so every day, he looks around for the explorer, but can see nothing of him. Molly and her distinguished father are also among the missing. Presently he runs across some one he knows.

"Ah! there, Sandy, my boy, where away?" he calls out, whereat the bustling little correspondent brought in a heap consents to halt briefly.

"Off to wire for a passage on the bimonthly steamer for India. Touches at Alexandria, you know, and then direct to Port Said for the Canal."

"When is it due?"

"The Alhambra arrives on Saturday."

"Secure passage for me, but hold on; perhaps you'd better wait and see. I understand Tanner and his daughter, together with Mynheer Joe, are heading in that direction. If we all go on one steamer, it will make a jolly party."

Sandy strikes an attitude.

"Bless you, that's a fact. I'll wait until we have a little consultation, and abide by the result. By the way, the baron goes on her."

"I supposed as much. How did you find that out, Sandy, my boy?" queries the other.

I heard him give orders this morning. Several parties accompany him."

"Who took the order?"

"The fellow looking like a Hindoo."

Mr. Grimes smiled.

"I wish you had noticed that fellow closely, Sandy," he remarks, quietly.

"Well, now, that's just what I did. You see he had a lordly air yesterday, as though he owned the whole of Egypt, while this morning he limped painfully, had a bruise on his forehead, and his left arm was tied up in a great ball of cotton, while his face had a look as though intense pain and devilish fury were fighting for the mastery."

At this Mr. Grimes no longer smiles. He chuckles.

"Something has evidently befallen the rascally Brahmin since night closed in. What did you conclude was the matter?" he asks.

"Well, I thought the fellow had evidently been barking up the wrong tree," says Sandy, solemnly.

This time Mr. Grimes laughs aloud.

"Good guess, my boy. He owes the goose-egg on his forehead, the halt in his gait and the bandaged arm to someone we know."

"Ten to one it was that Mynheer Joe!" exclaimed the correspondent, quickly.

"Go up, young man. You are an ornament to the guessing class. Sure enough, it was our Joseph who handled the Thug without gloves. The beast was on a mission for his master, and was thrown through the window by the messenger from Khartoom."

Of course Sandy pricks his ears up at this chance for a sensation, and plies the other with questions, which Mr. Grimes answers to the best of his ability. The story is soon told, and followed by what he has, this morning, seen the baron do—exercise his skill with sword and revolver, as though there is work ahead.

"As sure as you live, it's going to be nip and tuck between those two yet. I'm ready to bet on Joe; but I admit the case is awfully doubtful, with that human devil against him. Still Joe's star of luck has never yet deserted him. He's the only foreigner to come out of Khartoom alive. Let us hope and pray he will finally outwit that baron and carry off the prize."

Sandy has never been more earnest in all his life, and if something would only come up whereby he could show his friendship, he stands ready to chip in, no matter what the cost.

Thus Joe's friends talk over matters and endeavor to discover some way whereby the explorer can be benefited. They feel sure the baron has made up his mind to push matters to the wall, and that he will not hesitate about the means he employs.

If Joe is challenged, of course, he may have the choice of weapons, time and place. He can, therefore, make the best of the bargain. The one thing they fear is that the baron may arrange it so that the insult comes from him. Well, if so, Joe will probably avenge it on the spot and not dream of sending in a challenge.

Thus they draw consolation from the situation and hope for the best.

Where can Joe have taken himself to? They fail to find anything of him, nor do they seen Tanner and his daughter. This delay is not to Sandy's liking, as he is anxious to send a telegram to the city on the Mediterranean, engaging his passage for India, and frets under the lapse of time.

The morning has gone and the afternoon with it.

It is evening when the two friends run across Tanner in the hotel—Tanner, who greets them in his usual boisterous manner, as he does all his friends.

Sandy sees his opportunity and makes the best possible use of it. He asks the orator his intentions about travel, and hints at how nice it would be if all of them could go on the same steamer to India, which proposition quite takes the other by storm.

Making inquiries as to date of sailing and a few other things, Tanner figures on his own plans, and then announces that Sandy may include himself and daughter in the party.

"How about Mynheer Joe?"

"You have to see him personally," returns the orator, with a sly twinkle in his eyes, as though he can make a pretty good guess that the party mentioned will not be far away when they leave Alexandria.

"Where may he be found?" asks Sandy.

"Think I know. You see a party of English officers and leading men were bound to fete the brave boy who came from Khartoom with the last news of poor Gordon. They took him over to the barracks, where a spread had been ordered. I was pressed to go, but Molly would be waiting for me at the hotel here, and as I am a dutiful parent and never disappoint her, I gave up the idea."

Sandy has a cloud on his brow.

"How long ago since the party went in?"

"More than half an hour, I reckon," replies Tanner, consulting his time-piece.

"They must have reached the wine and cigars."

"Very probably."

Mr. Tanner, was the baron present?"

"Certainly. That man is everywhere!" It is evident that he does not bear malice against the baron, or at least fails to show it.

Sandy and Mr. Grimes exchange glances.

"It will be done there?" says the latter.

"No doubt of it, sir," replies the correspondent.

"What's all this about?" asks Tanner, noticing their peculiar nods and glances.

"We're off to see if Joe goes with us or stays in Cairo."

And with these words the two friends leave Tanner, heading for the barracks.

As they reached the door of this institution, loud voices are heard, excitement seems to reign, and the colonel can be heard exclaiming:

"Gentlemen, remember you are under a military roof! Reserve all demonstrations until we separate!"

CHAPTER XII.

The words are deeply significant and Sandy clutches his companion's arm; the look exchanged between the two denotes that they understand the true inwardness of this affair; it hardly needs the glance they take into the mess-room to corroborate their suspicions.

It is a scene they will never forget as long as they live. A dozen or more officers and gentlemen have been at the table; the cloth is removed and cigars with wine served. At one side of the colonel stands Mynheer Joe, the hero of Khartoom; he holds an empty wine glass in his hand, while upon his face can be seen a contemptuous look. His eyes are bent across the table.

Nearly opposite to him is the baron. With a snowy handkerchief he wipes the wine from his face; it has also discolored his shirt front where blazes a wonderful diamond, worth a small fortune.

Sandy observes his face and discovers hardly a trace of anger there; indeed, from the sardonic smile, one would imagine that this incident is just what the Russian duelist has played for.

Returning the soiled kerchief to his pocket, he coolly tosses his card across the table in the direction of Mynheer Joe.

"You will speedily hear from me, sir," he says, with cutting emphasis.

"The sooner the better, baron! Remember, I leave on Saturday's steamer," returns the American, while the officers look astounded; for, brave men though they are, there is not one among them who would care to be in Joe's shoes.

The Russian bows and leaves the room; he can no longer remain at the table with the man who has thus publicly insulted him, and as Mynheer Joe is the guest of the occasion, it becomes his duty to depart from the mess table.

Sandy is joined by one of the officers, a fine young fellow, who has taken quite a fancy to the war correspondent. The latter declares it will be his pleasant duty to see Lieutenant Hans Fletcher become a general some day. He has the greatest faith in his dashing qualities.

"Tell us, how did this ugly affair come about?" he asks, eagerly, for those at the mess table appear to have forgotten it in listening to Joe's glowing story of Gordon's death.

"Willingly—what little I know," replies the British officer. "I was at the other end of the table and failed to distinctly catch the full meaning of the baron's insult."

"Then he brought it on purposely, as I supposed."

"We suspect as much, though his reason is not plain. Perhaps you gentlemen know it."

"The same old story—rivals in love."

"Ah! That's the truth of it, eh?"

"Was the baron's remark about Miss Tanner?"

"I am glad to say it was not. From the little I heard, I belive it concerned Mynheer Joe's country—some insulting allusion to the flag that covers our cousins across the water."

"Good! And Joe resented it, as any true American would, no matter if his death was a foregone conclusion," says Sandy, hotly.

"But, you see, it's a serious thing to bring on a row at the colonel's mess table."

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

GOOD SHOW—POOR HOUSE.

A very slim audience, indeed, greeted Mr. Edward Harrigan and his famous play, "Old Lavender," last night, which was to be regretted, for the performance given was highly enjoyable. Mr. Harrigan, as "George Coggswell," afterwards known as "Old Lavender," was fine, while the cast was excellent. Pretty Alice Braham, as "Laura Coggswell" was charming. The various songs throughout the performance were well rendered and received.

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

The brilliant comedian, Mr. Reeves Smith, who will appear here on Thursday in "The Tyranny of Tears" by Haddon Chambers, has had probably the most successful stage career of any actor living. In London, England, where Mr. Reeves-Smith has played for the last eighteen years, he has a reputation second to none, and New York has given him one of the foremost positions. The remarkable success which always seems to follow Mr. Reeves-Smith secured for him the soubriquet of "The Mascot" and whenever a new play was to be introduced the manager always endeavored to secure his services, thoroughly believing that if he were in the cast the success of the venture was assured.

THE POPE AND CHURCH MUSIC

HIS HOLINESS IS SURE THAT HE WILL SECURE OBEDIENCE TO HIS DESIRES.

(Woodstock Express)

The present Pope has pronounced views with reference to church music, and it is evident that he is not to be lightly turned from his intention by a consideration of the difficulties in the way of bringing about his proposed reform. He admits the difficulties but thinks they can be overcome.

A short time ago he issued a decree which means not only the banishment of much of the music in general use, but the reorganization of church choirs. Sacred music, he holds, should possess in the highest degree the qualities proper to the liturgy. These qualities are to be found in the highest degree in the Gregorian chant, which is consequently the chant proper to the Roman Catholic Church. Modern music is not wholly barred, but as modern music has risen mainly to serve profane uses, greater care must be taken with regard to it, in order that the musical compositions admitted in the church may contain nothing profane, and be free from reminiscences of motifs adopted in the theatre.

With regard to the choir of singers, their performances must consist chiefly of choral music; solos, though permitted, must never predominate, but should be intimately bound up with the rest of the choral composition. The employment of women is forbidden, and soprano and contralto parts must be sung by boys' voices. The members of the choir must be men of known piety and probity of life, and singers are to wear ecclesiastical habits and surplices, and to be hidden from the eyes of the public behind gratings. As to musical instruments, organ accompaniments are allowed, and in some special cases, by leave of the ordinary, other instruments, but in every case only to accompany the singing, never to drown it. Long preludes and instrumental interludes are forbidden and organ music must conform to the rules already laid down for sacred music. The use of the piano and of noisy or trivial instruments, such as drums, grosse-caisse, cymbals, bells and the like, is prohibited. Military bands are strictly forbidden in church, and only in special cases is it allowed to introduce a limited number of wind instruments, provided always that the music to be performed by them is written in the same style as that proper to the organ.

The Gregorian chant means simply plain singing, mostly in unison. Where the work is well done the music is effective; but plain singing is frequently difficult singing, especially where the voices are in unison. It is apt to drag and become monotonous, and where the voices are not in tune the defect becomes painfully apparent in attempts at unison.

In large centres of population there will be little difficulty in securing trained male choirs; but in smaller places the banishment of the women will be a serious matter. It is only seemly and proper that the Mass, which deals with the sacred mysteries of the life and death of Christ, should be suitable music; and it must be admitted that not infrequently the music of the Mass is anything but sacred and anything but suitable; yet it is difficult to see why women should be banished from the choirs. It cannot be intended as a reflection on them, as lacking the reverential spirit; yet to some it may seem so. The Pope, however, is determined. "I have uttered and published my intention," he said in a recent interview; "the rest is assured. I shall secure obedience. I know how to take all the general and even special measures which may be necessary, and I shall act."

The decree has not come into force in this diocese yet; but it is expected that it will before long.

It is worthy of note in this connection that the present Pope is very fond of music, both vocal and instrumental. He has had two pianos and organ placed in his private apartments for the express purpose that those of the sacred college who 'really understand music,' and those especially invited, may come together and enjoy an hour now and then of 'comforting and elevating music." Nor is he averse to opera music. He likes it when it is good, but he insists that its proper place is "in the theatre."

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more pone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kimloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

Fuel Gas in Demand.

PROSPECTS ARE THAT CITY WILL HAVE LARGELY INCREASED NUMBER OF USERS BEFORE LONG.

The Chairman of Gas was looking cheerful this morning when an Intelligencer man called on him:.

"What's new in the gas situation?" he was asked.

"I have come to the unalterable conclusion," said Ald. Sinclair, confidently, "that in the gas plant the city has acquired a bonanza."

And then he went on to say that applications for fuel gas services were as numerous as robins in the trees, there are 38 now on file, whose desires will be granted as soon as possible. Three new ones came in this morning. The Gas Committee has sent for a new and up-to-date "tapping" machine, which makes the asphyxiation of the men working in an excavation an impossibility. Last month the works made and sold 900,000 feet of gas, which was a large increase over the same month of last year. Things are looking bright —much brighter than the gas looked when that awful ice and water was in the mains. The question of changing the present system of making gas, from oil, to the coal retort system, is one on which Ald. Sinclair grows enthusiastic, and the deputation which lately went on a tour of examination will, he says, recommend to the Council that the change be made. It costs, to make gas, from oil, all the way from 60 cents to 90 cents per 1,000 feet; Kingston, which is said to have a splendid oil system, makes it for 71 cents. By putting in coal retorts, Ald. Sinclair said, they would be able to make gas in this city at a cost of 27 cents per 1,000 feet—allowing, of course, for the rebate in the way of the sale of bi-products such as coke, tar, etc.

"And how much will it cost to instal the coal retort system?" he was asked.

"In the neighborhood of $10,000," said Ald. Sinclair.

Mr. Thomson, superintendent of the gas works, came in.

"By the way," said Ald. Sinclair to him, "I think it would be a good thing to put a tile roof on that building you spoke of. We can, I understand, use the rails on Front street for structural and supporting purposes."

That looks as though the rails were due for a move.

"By the way," said the Gas Chairman, as the newspaper man was going, "it may be well to note that it will cost no more in the way of labor to make gas from coal than it does from oil."

"Has that carload of gas stoves arrived yet?" said the scribe, by way of a parting shot.

"Not yet," said the Alderman, "but I still feel convinced that the city should buy them and sell them to users on the instalment plan."

FAILURES IN CANADA.

MONTH OF APRIL SHOWS INCREASE OVER LAST YEAR.

(Dun's Review)

Failures in the Dominion of Canada during the month of April numbered 91 and involved liabilities of $981,179. This is a considerable increase over the corresponding month last year, when only 62 defaults occurred and losses aggregated $500,826. Manufacturing failures were 29 in number and $600,757 in amount, compared with 15 a year ago for $207,338, while 59 traders suspended with total liabilities of $374,922, against 44 last year for $299,388. There were three other commercial failures for $5,500, against two for $3,100 a year ago, and one banker suspended with liabilities of $10,749, while there were no financial failures in April, 1903. Particelly all the excess for this in the Canadian insolvency returns was provided by a beet sugar manufacturing company in Ontario, and the only significant trading failures were two furniture houses. General stores alone supplied any considerable number of defaults and eliminating the beet sugar suspension for over half a million dollars, the month's exhibit would compare most favorably with the corresponding month in recent preceding years.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES PASS PLEASANT EVENING.

INSTRUCTIVE ADDRESS BY REV. DR. McTAVISH — NEXT REUNION WILL BE A PICNIC.

A largely attended meeting of the Young People's local union of Christian Endeavor was held in the Baptist Church last evening.

Rev. W. S. McTavish, Ph. D., of Deseronto, the Moderator of the Presbytery of Kingston, was the speaker of the evening. This gentleman has taken a deep interest in and studied the conditions of Y. P. societies, and gave a very interesting and instructive address, particularly emphasizing the importance at present of making a study of the missionary field of the world, suggesting various plans to be followed, such as debates, blackboard exercises, the systematic following of some such text book as John R. Mott's, "The Evangelization of the World in this Generation," every week, as part of the regular exercises of each meeting.

No small interest was added to the meeting by the mode in which the roll call was made; of the six societies represented the proportion of their membership and those then present was given by the respective President, following this statement a verse of scripture previously selected was repeated. The John Street Presbyterian Guild took the lead, having 87 per cent. of their members present, then followed that of the Reformed Episcopal with 66 per cent. and so on through the list. This plan, if followed in future meetings, will, no doubt, lead to a friendly rivalry. The hymns sung were the choice of each society, and in this and other ways all were made to feel they had contributed a share toward a successful programme.

Miss M. Wilson sang acceptably as a solo "Jesus I am Resting, Resting"

The President, Mr. H. C. Hunt, announced that the next meeting, the mid-summer reunion, would take the form of a picnic at "Fairbank," his residence on the Trent Road, on Friday, June 17.

The initial parade of the Fifteenth Regiment last night was very gratifying to those in authority. In fact, one of the officers told us that it was the best he had ever seen at the beginning of the season. The full six companies were represented, some of them having over twenty men in uniform.

Whether the Regiment will go to Kingston or not on the 24th inst. has not yet been definitely settled but will be decided at a meeting of the officers to be held on Friday evening next. Most of the rank and file, it is said, are greatly in favor of going.

Nothing Seems to Stop the Advance of the Japanese—Russians Still Retreating.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Shan Hai Kwan, May 10.—It is reported that the first Japanese army corps, having followed the Russians retreating from the Yalu River, overtook them twenty miles south of Lio Yang yesterday and a severe engagement ensued. The Japanese dragged their guns up hills believed to be insurmountable. The Russians thereupon continued to retreat north.

A division of the first corps is approaching New Chwang, which is now garrisoned by a handful of Russians.

Japanese scouts have been seen six miles from New Chwang. Nineteen women were the last civilians to leave New Chwang for Shan Hai Kwan. They arrived here to-night and confirmed the reports of the evacuation of New Chwang.

Meeting Postponed.

A meeting of the Demonstration Committee was to have been held last evening, but owing to counter attractions it was postponed until Wednesday evening. Although there will be no demonstration here on Dominion Day, it is proposed to hold one later in the season and every effort will be made to make it a success.

Foresters At Home.

Court Quinte, Ancient Order of Foresters, had an "at home" in their lodge room last evening, which proved to be a most enjoyable function. During the course of the evening an impromptu programme, consisting of vocal and instrumental selections, was given, which gave general satisfaction. A few short addresses were given by some of the members and invited friends. Mr. George H. Grills presided over the gathering. Refreshments were supplied in abundance.

A Man of Many Aliases.

A young man was arrested at Deseronto on Saturday under the name of Bert Glenfield, but during the trial there yesterday it came out that he had two other aliases, namely, Grant Warren and Ross Percy. He was charged with the larceny of articles from various places. It appears the accused, in company with another man, was canvassing the town for enlarging pictures, and it is alleged that he, in visiting houses, carried off some articles which he was not entitled to. He was tried yesterday before Magistrate Bedford, and was acquitted on some charges but convicted on another. The Magistrate reserved sentence until to-day. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown and Mr. Deroche the accused.

THE GERMS OF CATARRH.

Not only attack the passages of the head and throat, but finally reach the lungs and cause consumption. Nothing destroys catarrh so quickly as fragrant healing Catarrhozone, which relieves the cough, stops the discharge, takes all soreness from the throat. "I consider Catarrhozone has no equal as a cure for catarrh and lung trouble," writes Jas. E. Wetherell, of Brighton. "It cured me after many good doctors failed to even relieve my trouble." Catarrhozone can't fail to cure—it's guaranteed. Two months' treatment, $1.00; trial size 25c.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN G. FROST AT NOON TO-DAY.

WAS FOR FORTY YEARS A RESIDENT OF BELLEVILLE, AND ONE OF ITS MOST PROMINENT CITIZENS.

Sincere regret was expressed on every hand when it became known this afternoon that Mr. John G. Frost had died at noon to-day. The surprise was all the greater because it had become known that Mr. Frost was expected to shortly return to this city, his health having recently become much improved. It seems that this morning a turn for the worse was taken, and about noon death put an end to his sufferings.

The late Mr. Frost was born in Birstal, Yorkshire, England, 59 years ago and came to this country when very young. He lived for some time in the neighboring village of Canifton, and about 40 years ago moved to Belleville, where he carried on a furniture and undertaking establishment. About a year or so ago Mr. Frost developed the malady which caused his death, and went to Toronto for treatment. Last winter he left the Queen City for Kingston and the medical attention he received in the latter place, it was believed, was benefitting him greatly, but the malady evidently had too deep a root.

A widow (formerly Miss Margaret McSoriey, of Bowmanville,) and two daughters survive to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father. The daughters are Mrs. H. P. Thomas, of this city, and Miss Dora, at home.

During his residence in Belleville Mr. Frost took a deep interest in civic and political affairs. He was a member of the Council for many years; also a Water Commissioner. He was twice a candidate for Parliamentary honors, in the Liberal interest, being defeated by the late A. Robertson, M.P., and Mr. E. Guss Porter, M.P. He was also at one time a candidate for the Mayoralty. The local Board of Trade had in Mr. Frost an active and energetic member, he being President of that body for many years. He was a Methodist, a Free Mason, an Oddfellow, and a member of the A.O.U.W. and at one time a member of the Sons of England.

The remains will be brought here for interment.

The late Mr. Frost was a warm-hearted, generous man, whose deeds of charity were many, and who will be followed to his grave by the sincere regret of those who knew him best in life.

REVEREND EDITOR MUST SHOW CAUSE

WHY HE SHOULD NOT BE COMMITTED FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT.

(Special to The Intelligencer).

Toronto, May 10.—The Court of Appeal has given out its order calling on the Rev. J. A. MacDonald, editor of The Globe, to appear before that court on Monday next to show cause why he should not be committed for contempt of court for Friday's editorial on the North Renfrew election case.

Literary Notes.

THE STAY-AT-HOME DAUGHTER.

The touch of sympathy which to many women is more than meat or raiment will be found in Lillie Hamilton French's article on "Mothers and Stay-at-Home Daughters" in The Delineator for June. A note of true wisdom will be generally recognized in the following;

"'My sons have professions, my other daughters have homes and children of their own. I must allow my single daughter the privileges of her own particular tastes,' a wise mother announced to her friends when the best beloved of her children at the age of twenty-five chose to enter a profession. To have kept this daughter at home would have been to cramp her nature and to sap her vitality. The father was too rich to raise a question of family mending, the mother too vigorous to resign her direction of affairs. Later, when the need of the mother did arise, the daughter returned bringing back into the home the cheerful sweetness of a ripened nature."

M. PLESKE DEAD.

Late Russian Minister of Finance Succumbs to Accident.

London, May 10.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from St. Petersburg announces the death of M. Pleske, late Minister of Finance.

M. Pleske, who was born in 1852, was the son of a Russian general of German extraction. He entered the Ministry of Finance when twenty years of age, and was credited with being a disciple of M. De Witte, whom he succeeded as Minister of Finance. In December last M. Pleske became seriously ill as the result of an injury to his spine in a carriage accident some time previously. He was then transferred to the Council of the Empire.

January 27, 1903.

I cannot express in words the praise that is due to Iron-ox Tablets, which I got as a trial package from our druggist, Mr. McDonald, who told me they were just what I wanted. I took them more for fun. but before I had finished one box I got great relief. I was subject to great misery after meals, with bloating, and would rift up bile of the bitterest taste, and always woke up in the morning in the same way for the last twenty years. Had tried all medicines, but now I am completely cured, and it was by taking Iron-ox Tablets. Words cannot express my gratitude to you.

FISHERIES EXPERIMENT

The Dominion Charters Herring Steamer and Picked Crew.

Women's Liberal Federation, Presided Over By Countess of Aberdeen, Condemns Licensing Bill Because It Creates For the First Time Vested Interests in Licenses—Financial Times States Explicitly What Railways Are For.

London, May 10.—(C. A. P.)—Herring steamer No. 33 of Yarmouth has been chartered by the Dominion Government with a picked crew to carry on experimental fishing work in Canadian waters and sailed for Canada. Capt. Anderson has taken on board 60 tons of coal for the voyage which he expects will last a fortnight.

Creates Vested Interests.

London, May 10.—(C. A. P.)—The Countess of Aberdeen presided at the executive committee meeting of the Women's Liberal Federation when resolutions were passed emphatically condemning the Licensing Bill on the grounds of its interference with the magistrate's powers, and that it creates for the first time vested interests in licenses.

Aliens' Bill Won't Interfere

London, May 10.—(C.A.P.)—W. E. Gordon has written The Times that the Aliens' Bill now before the House of Commons will not interfere with the business of shipping companies carrying transmigrants through England on their way to America or the colonies.

What Railways Are For.

London, May 8.—(C.A.P.)—The Financial Times, referring to the appeals made to the Railway Commissioners to intervene in the matter of the Grand Trunk Railway increased freight rates, says that apparently the good people of Ontario do not realize that railways were not built in Canada solely for the purpose of providing cheap transport for the inhabitants. The outside capital was put in for dividends, not for philanthropy. It declares it learns from a well-informed source that it is very unlikely the law authorities will intervene.

Gives a Free Hand.

London, May 10.—(C. A. P.)—The House of Lords gave a first reading to the Bishop of St. Joseph's Education Bill. The bill gives both sides a free hand touching the control of religious instruction. The Marquis of Londonderry declined to pledge the Government either way with regard to the bill.

Britain's Wheat Acreage.

MR. PETTYPIECE INTERESTED.

Sees Premier Ross About Appointment of Railway Taxation Commission.

Toronto, May 10.—Mr. H. J. Pettypiece, M.P.P., consulted with Premier Ross yesterday morning respecting the appointment of the commission to investigate the various systems of taxing railways in the United States. A Cabinet Council will be held to-day, when the matter will be fully discussed with Mr. Pettypiece.

As to the composition of the commission, and whether one or more of its members will be railway experts, Mr. Pettypiece said that nothing had been decided. He thinks the inquiry will last about six weeks, and he is of opinion that it should include the effect on local railway rates of the different methods of taxation.

Goldwin Smith and Journalism.

To his interesting article on the Treaty-making Power in the new number of The Canadian Magazine, Mr. Goldwin Smith appends a little autobiographical note: "I may say that I never was a member of the political Association of 'Canada First,' nor had I anything to do with the founding of The Nation. I was in England at the time, though on my return I was persuaded to contribute. I also contributed a few articles to The Liberal. The attacks made upon me in The Globe gave me an artificial prominence, but it was well understood at the time that they were really directed against Mr. Blake, whom the Browns feared to attack directly. It is untrue, also, that I have ever sought or desired to enter public life in Canada. I had declined it in my native country, and have again more than once declined it since I settled here."

Death of Mr. Daniel Rose.

Toronto, May 10.—While sleeping peacefully at his home at 50 Avenue road, Daniel Rose of the firm of Daniel Rose & Son, printers 112½ Bay street, passed away early yesterday morning. He had gone to bed chatting brightly and evincing no sign whatever of illness. At 7.10 his wife went to call him and found that he was dead.

Born on March 11, 1835, in Wick, Caithness-shire, he came to America at the age of 26, and settled in Montreal, where he was apprenticed into the printing trade. He came to Toronto in '57, later returned to Montreal, and in 1877 he returned to this city and started in business with the Hunter, Rose & Co. Twelve years later he started in business alone. Deceased is survived by a widow, two sons and one daughter.

Meet Me at the Inside Inn.

Never Before Did a Great World's Fair Have a Big Hotel Inside the Grounds.

RATES WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

"Meet me at the Inside Inn." That will be the expression most frequently heard at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. This hotel is an immense structure, 400 feet wide and 800 feet long, with 2,257 sleeping rooms and a dining room seating 2,500 persons. The hotel is inside the Exposition grounds, and operated under the supervision of the Exposition management. It is well appointed and furnished in modern up-to-date style, and will be the center of social affairs in the way of dinners and family reunions inside the grounds.

This hotel is in the southeast portion of the grounds, not far from the Plateau of States, and to the north a short distance are the famous Cascade Gardens, Festival Hall and Colonnade of States, which form a part of the main picture of the Exposition. Street Railways running by the door go direct to the Union Railway station downtown, and the Intramural Road, inside the grounds, carried guests from the hotel entrance to all points of interest. Here is a cool retreat, where persons can find rest, enjoyment and quietude away from the noise and crush of the crowds along the avenues of the Exposition grounds. Sightseeing at a large Exposition is the most tiresome pleasure, because the mind is busily engaged and finds diversion by constantly changing scenes, while the body is becoming weary and the visitor does not realize how tired he is until he stops to rest. The place to rest is the Inside Inn. The hotel rates cover the daily admission fee to the grounds, and the registered guest at this hotel is free from the annoyance of pushing through the crowds at the gates. There are 500 rooms at $1.50 per person, 500 at $2.00, 500 at $2.50.

The Inside Inn will long be remembered as a distinctive feature of the largest Universal Fair ever held in the world—a fair representing a total cost of $50,000,000 and as large in size as the Columbian, the Pan-American and the Paris fairs combined.

WHILE MEMBER ABSENT

Scott, M.P., Abuses E. B. Osler, Alleging Settlers' Wrongs.

Revives His Old Attack on Long Lake, Qu'Appelle Railway, and Monopolizes the Attention of the House During Most of the Afternoon and Part of the Evening—Ministers Answer Some Questions.

Ottawa, May 10.—Walter Scott of West Assiniboia yesterday returned to his favorite topic, the Long Lake, Qu'Appelle and Saskatchewan Railway, and succeeded in monopolizing all the afternoon and part of the evening sitting of the House. The settlers in the West, according to Mr. Scott, are being wretchedly served by this railway. Upon their hardships he discoursed in halting accents for a couple of hours. He located the root of the whole trouble in E. B. Osler, M. P. for West Toronto, the chief controller of the road. On previous occasions Mr. Scott has attacked the junior member for West Toronto on the strength of the latter's connection with the Long Lake, Qu'Appelle and Saskatchewan Railway. He was even more bitter yesterday. He read letters from settlers and bondholders, charging the railway company in general and Mr. Osler in particular with some very serious misdemeanors. The names of the accusers he refused to divulge, though the point of order was pressed hard by the Opposition.

T. O. Davis of Saskatchewan supported the attack of his colleague from West Assiniboia. Mr. Osler was not in the House during the afternoon. He will doubtless take an early opportunity of answering the accusations fathered by his two irrepressible enemies from the west.

Mr. Sifton referred briefly to the situation complained of. He said he had ordered enquiries to be made, and was doing his utmost to remove the difficulties. He did not blame the railway officials, who, he said, were doing their best to handle the traffic. The trouble was that five miles of the road were under water and ferry boats had to be used for transfer over this water.

Answers to Queries.

Replying to Mr. Sinclair, the Minister of Finance said that the Government had not thought it necessary to appoint a commercial agent in Newfoundland on account of the close business relations between the two countries. He promised, however, that the suggestion should be carefully considered.

T. O. Davis moved for a return showing all papers, letters, petitions and resolutions in reference to payment of the claims for losses arising out of the Northwest rebellion, 1885. He made a strong plea on behalf of the people, who, he said, had been deprived of their property.

Walter Scott, Nat Boyd and Henderson also spoke on the motion. The latter suggested that if the claims were sound the members were remiss in their duty in not threshing them out long ago. Rufus Pope hinted that the member for Assiniboia was bringing up the question in order to strengthen himself in his constituency.

Four Commissioners.

Ottawa, May 10.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier has given notice of an amendment to section 9 of the National Transcontinental Railway Act, so as to provide for the appointment of four commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway instead of three.

It is not known whether the Government has suddenly realized that the work will be too heavy for three men or whether the list of applicants has been lately reinforced.

Militia Council Amendments.

Sir Frederick Borden has given notice of several more amendments to the Militia Act. The act is to come into force upon a date to be fixed by proclamation of the Governor-General.

WOULD COMMIT GLOBE EDITOR.

Ed. Dunlop Protests Against Editorial Comparison of His Expenses.

Toronto, May 10.—E. A. Dunlop, M.P.P., for North Renfrew, seeks to commit Rev. J. A. Macdonald, editor of The Toronto Globe, to jail as a result of certain editorial comments made on Friday in that paper in regard to Dunlop's election expenses. Application was made yesterday at Osgoode Hall by Barrister Hellmuth for an order of committal. The Court of Appeal seemed in doubt as to the procedure. It is requested that the committment be made on the grounds of contempt of court, Mr. Hellmuth pointing out that the statements would have a tendency to prejudice the election protest against his client in September.

Chief Justice Moss said judgment would be given to-day. Mr. Macdonald was not present.

$2,305,000 Contract Awarded.

Montreal, May 10.—The Board of Harbor Commissioners yesterday awarded a contract for the construction of the twelve steel freight sheds with which the new wharves are to be equipped, amounting to $2,305,000, to Peter Lyall & Son.

Peter Lyall is the Liberal candidate in St. Antoine division for the next Federal election.

Mr. Fitzpatrick at London.

London, May, 10.—Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, the Dominion Minister of Justice, arrived in the city yesterday morning. At noon he was entertained at the London Club, where he was the guest of George C. Gibbons, K.C.

Quebec, May 10.—Yesterday morning about eighty carpenters and joiners, engaged in nine of the city shops, did not put in an appearance. They are on strike.

Hardly any rubbing with Sunlight Soap. The Sunlight Maids say its child's play.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

Will wash anything, but to secure best results with least labor should be used in the Sunlight way. First dip the articles to be washed in a tub of lukewarm water and draw it out of the water on a wash board and rub the soap over it lightly. Then roll them up tightly and lay under the water. Leave them there for thirty minutes and let Sunlight Soap do its work. Commence rubbing the clothes lightly on the wash board and the dirt will drop out. Turn the garments inside out to get at the seams but don't use any more soap. No need to scald or boil a single piece and don't wash through two suds. Rinse in lukewarm water taking care to wash out all the dirty suds, then ring out and hang out to dry. That's the Sunlight way. It makes the clothes snowy white.

ADMIRAL TOGO IS AGAIN SHELLING PORT ARTHUR.

Japs Resume Angle Firing Upon Russian Stronghold,

Russians Say Communication With Port Arthur Has Been Re-Established, But Do Not Say How It Was Brought About —But Official Circles Are Saddened by News of Jap Activity in Eastern Manchuria.

London, May 11.—The Tokio correspondent of The Standard says under date of May 11 that the bombardment of Port Arthur was recommenced yesterday morning by the Japanese by angle firing and is still in progress.

Communication Re-Established.

St. Petersburg, May 11.—Viceroy Alexieff has telegraphed to the Emperor as follows: "During the night of May 9-10 railroad communication with Port Arthur was restored. The telegraph line is being repaired. As General Stoessel has not reported the investment of Port Dalny, the reports from abroad of its capture by the Japanese are now disbelieved by the general staff.

Severe Engagement Reported.

Shanhaikwan, May 11.—It is reported that the first Japanese army corps, having followed the Russians retreating from the Yalu River, overtook them twenty miles south of Liaoyang yesterday and a severe engagement ensued.

Lt.-Gen. Zassalitch Killed.

Paris, May 11.—The Matin's St. Petersburg correspondent says it is persistently rumored that there has been a big fight near Maotienling Pass, between the Russians and General Kuroki's army. The Russians, he says, lost heavily, Lieutenant-General Zassalitch being among the killed.

Sobered By Official Despatches.

St. Petersburg, May 11.—The most important official news from the front up to this hour is that telling of the complete re-establishment of railroad and telegraphic communication with Port Arthur, though how it was brought about and whether a battle was necessary to accomplish it are mysteries which Viceroy Alexieff failed to clear up.

The elation of authorities, a natural consequence of this achievement, is sobered by official despatches showing the activity of the Japanese in Eastern Manchuria.

The people naturally wish for more details concerning the re-establishment of communication with Port Arthur. All they know definitely is that the railroad has been repaired, and that at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the first despatch passed over the reconstructed telegraph lines.

Japs Great Activity.

St. Petersburg, May 11.—The general staff has received a despatch from Major-General Karkevitch, dated May 9, which says:

"On May 5 our scouts discovered at Liaoyahampuzo, fourteen miles north of Takushan, on the left bank of Talinhe River, a Japanese detachment one regiment strong. During a fusilade with a line of Japanese sharp-shooters, one Cossack was killed."

"At Luanmyako, eight miles north of Takushan, on the same bank of the river, our scouts were subjected to firing from the right bank.

"On the same day they met on the main road from Fengwangcheng, four and a half miles from Salitzaipudza, on the Talinho River, and twenty-one miles north of Takushan, the extreme outposts of enemy's scouts, who hid in the mountains.

"On the following day Japanese scouts appeared at Handajou, six six miles south of Salitzaispudza, and in the valley of the Sedseko River, near the mouth of Sedsekhoghto.

"According to Chinese information Japanese detachments, numbering three infantry regiments in all, are in the mountains fifteen or twenty miles from Doyanche."

Japs in Three Divisions.

London, May 11.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Morning Post, under date of May 10, says that the Japanese army is advancing in three divisions—the first from Fengwangcheng, and the third from Suliencheng to occupy Kulienhsin with the object of severing commuication with the rear of Liaoyang, where only small preparations for defence have been made.

FALL WHEAT A FAILURE.

Wellington County Alone Gives Relief From the Gloomy Outlook.

Toronto, May 11.—From detailed reports received, coming from districts practically representing the present arable capacity of the Province, it will be seen that farmers all over have been hit hard with their winter wheat. From only one section—Wellington—does there come any relief to the prevailing gloom, and there present indications point to a splendid yield from a good average acreage.

There is substantially unanimity as to the cause of this unfortunate position of affairs this year. All agree that the young plants were killed through the formation of thick ice sheets close to the ground and the consequent smothering of the wheat. The passing of the snow found the wheat fields in bad color, and as they did not pick up, many farmers have already plowed them down and replanted with spring wheat, oats or barley.

In some quarters this pessimistic outlook is not fully concurred in. Many farmers persist in taking a more hopeful view of the situation, and are confident that the plants will actually make their appearance. Time alone will decide how much of truth there is in this more hopeful talk, and there will be a general hope that it may be justified in the early future. Meantime the recent high prices have tempted farmers to dispose of their last year crop, and the small yield now expected, unless it materially improves, will find them unprepared for the emergency.

LAWYER BANGS CROWN WITNESS.

Told By Wilcox Where to Get the Stolen Money.

Winnipeg, May 11.—Lawyer Bangs, released on bail in connection with the Wilcox trial, gave sensational evidence at the hearing in Regina Monday. He appeared as a witness for the Crown, and admitted receiving money which he knew to be stolen, Wilcox, the accused, telling him where to find the hiding place of the Bank of Hamilton bills. At the conclusion Wilcox was committed for trial.

Given the protection of the Crown, Bangs said he had gone to a certain place to get the money. He was told by Wilcox the money was there and to go and get it. He heard of the loss of the money afterwards. He gave Wilcox $200. He knew he needed it for he had asked for it. He had no special authority to invest the money. Wilcox instructed him to get it changed. The amount that remained in the witness' control would be obtained and restored. Wilcox told the witness that the money was stolen when he directed him to the place where the money was.

No defence was offered, and accused was committed.

Had Narrow Escape From Ditching.

St. Thomas, May 11.—No. 3 express on the Michigan Central had a miraculous escape from being ditched at Hagersville about 9.30 Monday night. The train had passed over the diamond crossing there, but left the rails at the "D" rail to the west. The engine, Atlantic type No. 428, rolled over into the ditch, and the buffet and smoking cars left the rails, but remained upright. Engineer Green and Fireman McPhail managed to escape uninjured, as did the passengers, the only injury reported being a slight bruise to the foot of Conductor D. Powers. The damage to the engine and derailed cars was not of an extensive value.

Still the Bayonet.

The fighting on the Yalu was signalized by the reappearance of the bayonet, which in modern warfare has come to be considered as useful as an intrenching tool or a culinary utensil, but of little use as a weapon. Gen. Kuropatkin reports that the Japanese infantry "under our fire made continual bayonet attacks on our troops." He also reports that a battalion of the Eleventh (Russian) Regiment "advanced with fixed bayonets, preceded by buglers, to clear a passage," and that "the Japanese declined a hand-to-hand conflict and recoiled," adding that "it was only by advancing on the Japanese with the bayonet that the regiment was able to retire."

These are strange tales to be told of modern warfare, but they are neither incredible nor inconsistent. The General had already explained that the Russian infantry had abandoned the battery upon which the Japanese charged. The canoneers were doubtless unarmed, and to attack them with the bayonet was the most obvious thing to do, when once the assailants had come up close to the guns. A bayonet can "repeat" much faster and oftener even than a modern magazine rifle. Bayoneting the gunners was an equivalent operation, for infantry, to "sabring the gunners" in Tennyson's account of the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava. Also it is compatible with the "recoil" of other Japanese when the Russian battalion advanced upon them with fixed bayonets. A bayonet charge, like a cavalry charge, is an affair of momentum. The Russians being bigger and heavier men than the Japanese would have the advantage in this, and the Japanese would naturally decline a hand-to-hand conflict," preferring to "retire and pepper the advancing column with musketry fire. All the same, a man hurt in modern war so seldom sees his enemy or knows what hits him that these hand-to-hand conflicts have an old-fashioned, almost a Homeric effect in the recital.

Daily Intelligencer.

HOW IT IS DONE.

The Dominion and Ontario Governments give large subsidies in land and money to aid in the construction of railways, as soon as they are built the Ross Government imposes heavy taxes upon every mile of railway, and Mr. Hays, the manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, announces a raise in freight rates. This raise of rates is, of course, to meet the extra tax imposed by the Ontario Government.

This tax does not go into the treasury of the different municipalities, where it properly belongs but into the coffers of Ontario, to assist Grit extravagance.

In the face of this fact, Rossites tell the people there is no direct taxation.

People will understand now who pays these taxes. If the railway corporations have to pay additional taxation, they must take it directly out of the people. Who can blame them? They cannot pay unless they earn. To earn they tax the people by raising the rates.

Such is Grit Government in Ontario.

AN EXPERT'S OPINION.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

Kuropatkin is showing his strength as a commander by refusing the temptation to indulge in doubtful operations to revive Russian prestige. He is concentrating his forces for a decisive battle with a deliberateness which bodes ill for the Japanese armies when they encounter him. It will be in a position of his own choosing and everything points to a tremendous conflict when the armies meet. Then Russian troops will be put to a test to which they have never yet been submitted—a pitched battle with a highly disciplined and well equipped army under first-class leaders. Neither side can afford defeat and the fighting promises to be stubborn and the losses heavy.

TWEED.

About 1.30 p.m. on Friday morning last fire was discovered in Finlay and Son's hub factory on McGowan St., and in about two hours' time the building, which was of frame, was entirely consumed. The partly finished stock in the dry kiln was saved. Owing to the very inflammable nature of the interior of the building, the fire had made great headway when the fire engine arrived, but good service was done in protecting adjacent houses. The present proprietors, the Messrs. Finlay, of Norwood, only purchased the factory about five months ago from Jno. Walker and Son, of this place, and it was being operated very successfully under the management of Mr. A. J. H. Fitzgerald. The loss, including stock, is estimated at from three to five thousand dollars, with no insurance. The factory will be rebuilt at once.

DESPONDENT MOTHERS.

FIND NEW HEALTH IN THE USE OF DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

A few years ago Mr. James R. Stuart, of Thorold, Ont., who is well known to most of the residents of that town, found her health severely shattered as the result of an attack of anaemia. As told practically in her own words, Mrs. Stuart says: "My blood was turned almost to water; I suffered from nerve racking headaches, and the least exertion would cause my heart to palpitate so violently as to render me almost breathless. I wasted away in flesh and often was so weak that I could not walk about. I was under the care of a good doctor, but as I was not getting better I grew melancholy and despondent, and felt I was becoming a hopeless invalid. At this stage I was advised to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I began taking them, thinking it would be a miracle if they ever helped me. To my great gratification when I had been using the pills less than a month I found my health improving. I used about a dozen boxes in all and found myself enjoying once more the blessing of good health. I had been reduced to almost a skeleton in appearance and while taking the pills gained over twenty pounds in weight. I gratefully recommend the pills to other ailing women."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the greatest blood builder and nerve tonic known to medical science. Through their use pale cheeks are made rosy, dull eyes made bright, and thin wasted figures made plump Every dose makes new, rich red blood that drives out disease and strengthens every organ in the body. You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine, or by mail post paid at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HALLOWAY.

The farmers in this locality are very busy at their spring's work. Strawberries and fall grain are looking excellent after the long, severe winter.

On Monday morning last the barn of Mr. Hamilton Bird was destroyed by fire. Had it not been for the strenuous efforts of his many good neighbors, Mr. Bird's loss would have been greater, as other of his buildings were very close and could not have escaped the flames. His loss is partly covered by insurance.

Prof. Munro spent Sunday at Mr. David Guffin's.

Mr. Geo. Cadman and Miss May Dafoe were united in marriage last Wednesday afternoon by the Rev. C. L. Thompson, Foxboro. They did it up rather on the 'quiet.'

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Faulkner spent Sunday at Mr. S. Sine's, Corbyville.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

Speaking of the above play which comes to the Carman to-morrow night, the Kingston News and Times says: "There were only six people in "The Tyranny of Tears" Co., which played here on Saturday afternoon and evening, but in that sextette of actors was concentrated the talent and brains of an average fifty. The company was composed entirely of English people, who spoke with that rich, clear accent, which American actors never seem to acquire. Of course Mr. Reeves-Smith led the cast, but not by far. Around him the play evolved, but he did not make the mistake of thinking that he was the whole play. Mr. Smith is a talented actor. He speaks his lines with wonderful ease and power. He moves about the stage without any bravado or cheap gesture. In fact he makes his part so close to the ideal that to find fault were surely out of place."

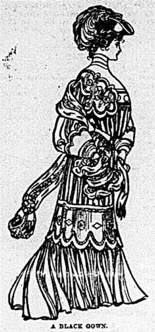
THE NEW COSTUMES.

Spring Jackets—Louis XV. Costumes Almost Perfect Representations.

The long straight jacket is to be much worn this spring. It is a jacket perfectly fitted in the back and sides and over the chest, but falling in the front straight from the bust downward to about ten inches below the knee.

Louis XV. costumes have the skirt in tiers, the skirt of the coat forming the third tier. The hat worn with this sort of costume is a modified tricorne, the whole suggesting the hunting costumes of the time of Louis XV. The resemblance is made more striking by the embroidered waistcoats and the filmy jabots and lace undersleeves falling well over the hand.

A costume of this sort seen recently was of Veronese green velvet, with a waistcoat of pale robin's egg blue embroidered in silver. A jabot of point de venise and ruffles of the same gave the required touch of softness. The hat was in dark, with a rosette embroidered in silver.



A BLACK GOWN.

Passementerie and braid work, especially those showing a silky finish, will be much used for coats, and there will also be a great demand for fringe in all its varieties.

Some notable changes are being effected in the realm of hair ornaments—always a fruitful subject to la mode. Wide flat bows have taken the place of the tiny upstanding ornaments which were prime favorites a short time ago, and these are carried out in paillettes in the most exquisite shades—deep rose or blue toning down to white and of course jet and beads as well as gold and silver.

The picture shows a gown of black chiffon velvet or silk. The collar, yoke and belt are of light silk, which show beneath the openwork embroidery.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Bedmaking Exercise.

The making of a bed is a whole gymnasium in itself. The entire body is called upon in this phase of housework. The body bends from the waist; the muscles of the arms and the legs are alternately stretched and contracted. Beat the mattress and pillows with the proper vigor and the blood tingles in your finger tips. Tuck in the bedclothes and the waist muscles are exercised, the twisting and turning of the body takes off all superfluous flesh and makes a shapely waist. Seldom do you find a fat chambermaid in our hotels. Well rounded, shapely, deft and graceful are most chambermaids, all because of the exercise of housework.

Baby's Playthings.

A well known specialist in children's diseases says: "Do not give young babies a quantity of playthings, nor many articles at a time. The first year of a child's life the brain develops more rapidly than at any other period during life. Give the baby simple things—a spool, a clothespin, an empty bottle tightly corked, a teaspoon. Always have some article in reserve to please the tiny mite, to whom all things are new. When rubber rattles or dolls are given procure those of natural red rubber."

The Matinee Girl.

The matinee girl existed as early as the eighteenth century. In Japan girls in those days used to throw their fans and purses at the feet of the "leading man" as he minced along "the flower walk" to the stage. Pictures of these "heroes" were an early product of Japanese wood engraving, and these portraits were secret treasures of many maidens.

BOOKCASE CURTAIN.

A Pretty and Durable One May Be Made of Burlap.

A very pretty and durable curtain for a bookcase may be made of burlap. One noticed recently was light brown, with trimmings of red. A brass rod was fastened to the top of the bookcase, and the drapery was thrown over it so as to form a deep lambrequin at the top. The burlap was lined throughout with turkey red. Red felt was used for a border across the top and bottom. This was feather stitched to the burlap with red worsted in clusters of six quite long stitches, the middle stitch being the longest, and were graduated toward each end, with a space of about an inch between each cluster.

The border of felt across the lambrequin end of the curtain was about eight inches deep. Across the bottom of the curtain the border was a little deeper and was set up from the bottom, leaving about five inches of the burlap below it.

It was an extremely effective curtain and was made very quickly and with little expense by a busy housekeeper.

The use of burlap is being revived for a number of purposes. It is often used as a substitute for wall paper, sometimes in the form of a deep frieze with the paper below or a figured burlap is used upon the walls, with plain burlap for frieze and dado, or frieze only. It comes in green, blue, red and brown. In fact, nearly every color may be procured.—Ladies' World.

DO THINGS EASILY.

Strive to Eliminate the Heavy Strain From Housework.

"Do sit down," said a wise mother of a family to the new and ambitious young housekeeper. "I do not in the least approve of what might be called laziness or the habit of collapsing into a chair every time one turns around, but I do believe in saving one's strength when it is just as easy to do it. You are standing at the table to pare your potatoes when you might just as well sit down to it. By and by there will be cleaning and brushing and scrubbing to do, when you must stand.

"If there is fruit to prepare, vegetables to get ready or any of the many things where one may remain quiet while doing them, it is much better to sit. This gives renewed energy for the harder part of the work, and while there is so much about housework that is necessarily taxing it seems to me a very wise thing to do this. I do not know why economy in strength is not just as important as economy in anything else."

Certainly the ability to make the best of our powers is worth a little study. People who are well and strong often seem to enjoy a reckless exhibition of their physical ability, but with these a time almost always comes when the heavy strain of wasted energy begins to tell on the constitution. Then it is too late to prevent the damage.—Philadelphia Ledger.

LAUNDRY LINES.

Try kerosene to clean the rubber of your clothes wringer.

In starching doilies with fringed edges it is well to dip the fringe or lace into salt water before proceeding.

As starch is very apt to rot clothes, they should be washed, rough dried without starch and pressed out smoothly when they are laid away for the season.

If collars and cuffs are threaded on a piece of tape or string and tied to the clothesline it prevents dirty peg marks and also does not pull the ends of the collars out of shape.

"The proper way to dry woolens," says a large manufacturer of woolen goods, "is to hang the garments on the line dripping wet without wringing out at all. If dried in this way the shrinkage will be so slight as to be almost unnoticeable."

PILLS AND PILES.

A prolific cause of Piles is the use of cathartics and pills of a drastic, violent nature.

Followed by a reaction on account of the resinous, drying properties they contain.

There are other causes, but no matter what the cause or what the kind of Piles, Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid can be relied upon to cure—to stay cured.

It's an internal remedy that removes the causes of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Suppurating Piles.

It can be obtained for $1.00 at druggists.

BUNYAN RELIC.

Original Warrant Which Committed Him to Bedford Jail.

On April 23, 1661, there took place the coronation of Charles II., and as a mark of royal clemency prisoners for every offence short of felony were that day released, those awaiting trial dismissed at discretion.

On the 243rd anniversary of that day—a day on which John Bunyan would have been released from Bedford jail after his first three weeks' confinement had it not been for the perversity of the authorities, who chose to regard him as a legal conviction, rendering it necessary that a pardon should be sued for—there will be offered for sale at Sotheby's, London, the original warrant under which, in 1674, he was for a third time incarcerated, although, owing to the intervention of the Bishop of Lincoln, in whose diocese Bedford then was, for a period of six months only.

The warrant, signed by thirteen J. P.'s—six baronets and seven esquires—is addressed to the constables of Bedford, and charges Bunyan with having preached or taught at a conventicle meeting or assembly, under the color or pretence of the exercise of religion, in manner other than according to the liturgy or practice of the Church of England. Nonconformity is somewhat freer nowadays!

Rarities by the "tinker . . . who strove to mend men's souls as well as kettles and pans" are to-day the object of extraordinarily eager competition in the sale-rooms. It is worthy of note that apart from important monuments of early printing, such as the Fust and Schoeffer Psalter of 1459, a copy of which on vellum brought in 1884 £4,950, the highest amount ever paid at auction for a book, and examples by our own Caxton, no printed work save one has realized anything like as much under the hammer as "The Pilgrim's Progress."

It has a wider circulation than any book except the Bible, has been translated into 104 languages, and in 1901 the Nash copy of the first edition, Part I., with the perhaps unique frontispiece of Bunyan dreaming, realized £1,475, as compared with an issue value of 1s. 6d.

As has been said, one other work only, apart from those printed in the fifteenth century, has realized as much at auction. This is the First Folio edition of Shakespeare, whose "record" is £1,720.

The sale of the Bunyan warrant promises to be one of the most interesting auction-room events of 1904.—London News.

Old England Disappearing.

Bit by bit, says the London correspondent of The Yorkshire Post, the historic old houses in Holborn are disappearing. Furnival's Inn had to be demolished a few years ago to make way for the gigantic buildings of the Prudential Assurance Company. For months there have been rumors that the Black Bull—the famous house of the coaching days, and once the favorite resort of Mrs. Gamp and Mrs. Prig—would soon give way to business premises. The expectation is now about to be realized. Up to a few years ago the Black Bull still preserved in the courtyard the old-fashioned galleries which were so familiar a feature in coaching inns. But for a generation its chief fame has rested upon its association with Dickens. In the back parlor you may still be told that you are seated in a room much frequented by the great novelist. Whether that be true or not, he certainly knew the old place well. "A little dull, but not so bad as might be," was Mrs. Gamp's description of it. "I'm glad to see parapidges in case of fire, and lots of roof and chimley pots to walk upon." Now that the Black Bull is going, the oldest licensed house in the district will be "Ye Old Mitre," in Hatton Garden, which dates back to 1546.

Mr. and Mrs. Neville Lytton.

It rarely happens, says The Sketch, that the descendants of two famous authors meet and marry. This, however, was the pleasant fate of Mr. and Mrs. Neville Lytton. Lord Lytton's youngest brother is, of course, the grandson of the great Bulwer Lytton, whose fame in English letters is now enjoying a revival, while his young wife was Miss Judith Blunt, the daughter of Mr. Wilfrid and Lady Anne Blunt, and a descendant through her mother of the great Lord Byron. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Neville Lytton was a great romance, and excited keen interest, both in this country and in Egypt, where the youthful bride was well known. Mr. Lytton was, at the time he became a benedict, only just twenty. He and Mrs. Neville Lytton, who is her distinguished parents' only child, live in a quaint, old-world place, Rake Mill, in Surrey. They are both devoted to outdoor life, Mrs. Lytton being, perhaps, one of the best horsewomen in the kingdom. She also has a great love of flowers and of gardening.

Another Democritus.

Lord Kelvin, the new Chancellor of Glasgow University, has been described as another Democritus. Of that ancient Greek father of the atomic theory we know nothing but what his pupils tell us; but Lord Kelvin's work is writ large in the annals of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, and its practical results are patent in this morning's paper. Among the least of the services of the great theorist to practice is his invention of the siphon recorder, which makes ocean cabling possible. Lord Kelvin has measured the size of the atom and the age of the earth; he has invented a compass, which no ship is without; and he has explained the nature of matter, by studying the vortex rings that issue from a smoker's mouth.—London Chronicle.

DUNSMUIR'S MILLIONS

EDNA WALLACE HOPPER'S UNSUCCESSFUL SUIT FOR THEM.

Although She Has to Pay a Large Part of the Costs It Is Not All Loss, as Publicity and Sympathy Are an Asset to Be Counted by the Little Actress—Seemed Near to Success.

Viewed from a business standpoint, Edna Wallace Hopper's unsuccessful suit against James Dunsmuir, formerly Premier of British Columbia, and one of the richest men on the Pacific Coast, has not been altogether a failure. 'Tis true that the millions for which the actress struggled have eluded her eager grasp, and that she is ordered to pay a large share of the costs in a suit which has been remarkably expensive, but there are compensations. The free advertising which she has received, and the sympathy which has been expressed for her in some quarters are worth it all. In the theatrical profession sympathy and publicity are just as good as unminted gold, for with little trouble they can be turned into ready money.

Seemed Near to Success.

At present, the likelihood of the plaintiff accepting congratulations with composure is slight. Only a few weeks ago it appeared that her chances of spending some of the Dunsmuir millions were very bright. So rosy did her prospects appear that the mother of the man whose estate was in dispute joined Mrs. Hopper as a plaintiff. Had there not appeared to be grave danger that the actress would win her point, this unexpected move would never have been made. Mrs. Dunsmuir's step was obviously made in the interests of the defence, and was quite reasonable, for if James Dunsmuir were to be deprived of his brother's millions, surely his mother had as much right to them as a young comedienne, in whose veins flows not a drop of Dunsmuir blood. Mrs. Dunsmuir's claim was strengthened by the fact that it was she who gave the millions to her two sons in the first place. Both were good business men and increased the capital with which they set out, but to their mother both owed their fortune. She could have disinherited either of them, and this possibility, in the past, had a vital effect on the lives of some of the chief actors in the play which has just come to an end.

Dunsmuir's Coal Mines.

The prologue of this "strange, eventful history" opens with the death of Robert Dunsmuir, some fifteen years ago. Dunsmuir had made a large fortune by developing the famous coal mines at Nanaimo, on Vancouver Island. The coal deposits were not only of great extent, but unusually good as well. So superior was the Vancouver article, that it was able to go down to San Francisco, and, handicapped by a hostile tariff, practically put the United States coal out of business. It was exported to Japan, and wherever it came in competition with either American or English coal, it more than held its own. When Robert Dunsmuir died, this great export trade in coal had attained huge proportions. It had demanded a fleet of vessels, and several lines of railway, all of which were owned by the coal magnate, and by him bequeathed to his widow.

The Buxom Widow Appears.

Mrs. Dunsmuir decided to put James, the elder son, in charge of the actual mining work, and all the business which arose on Vancouver Island, while Alexander, the younger, went to San Francisco, to see to the distribution of the coal in its chief market. Thither Alexander repaired, and threw himself into the work with enthusiasm. He was a man of sound judgment, industrious and enterprising. There was, however, another streak in him which attracted attention when he and Mrs. Wallace, a widow, with one daughter, Edna, began housekeeping together. In explanation it was said that they loved each other, but dared not get married, because Mrs. Dunsmuir would surely cut Alexander off with a dollar. Then Mrs. Dunsmuir sold her interest in the Dunsmuir business to James and Alexander. In a day or two appeared the announcement of Mrs. Wallace's marriage to Alexander Dunsmuir. Less than two months later, on January 21, 1900, Alexander Dunsmuir died in New York. Six months afterwards his widow followed him to the grave.

Left Fortune to His Brother.

Shortly before this second event, Alexander Dunsmuir's will had been made public. Executed on the very day of his marriage, it left all his property to his brother James. The heir's position was strengthened by a declaration signed by Mrs. Dunsmuir, in which she assigned, on behalf of herself, her heirs or assigns, all title to her husband's property in consideration of an annuity of $25,000, which James Dunsmuir was to pay her. These facts coming to Edna's ears, she at once entered suit to have Alexander's will set aside, and her mother's deed declared invalid. Her contention was that her stepfather was not of sound mind when he made the will, he having been on the verge of delirium tremens at the time, and quite incapable of sane action. As for her mother's assignment, Mrs. Hopper declared that undue influence had been brought to bear upon her by James Dunsmuir's lawyers, and that this document was therefore null and void.

Deeds Versus Opinions.

At the trial, which has just been decided against her by Mr. Justice Drake, of Victoria, the former wife of the famous DeWolf Hopper lent all her energies to prove that Alexander Dunsmuir was an habitual drunkard. Many witnesses, including an expert or two, were called to establish this claim. Scores of instances of Dunsmuir's servitude to whiskey were presented. He [illegible] snakes. He feared some one wa[illegible] ing to poison him. Such an [illegible] and comprehensive drinker wa[illegible] that DeWolf Hopper shrank [illegible] him and turned pale when invited by his stepfather-in-law to "say what his was." In view of these facts, the claimant demanded, could Alexander Dunsmuir make a rational deposition of his property? Judge Drake has answered decisively in the affirmative. In his opinion a number of actions going to show that Dunsmuir was a level-headed business man were to be considered superior to the opinions of experts. He also laid emphasis on the intention of Alexander to leave his property to his brother. This intention had been freely expressed by Alexander, and his will verified it. The will was clearly the result of a long contemplated action. Thus saith the learned judge. And when next we have an opportunity of seeing Edna Wallace-Dunsmuir-DeWolf Hopper (and it is said that she is about to add another storey to her name), we shall be interested to see whether His Lordship's decision has left an unsightly line on her smiling face.

"Give me the first seven years of a child's life," said a wise man, "and you may have the rest. These are the ones that count."

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

"And a still more serious thing to be publicly insulted there. The colonel should have seen to it that only gentlemen were invited and not the miserable hound who thinks his title of baron can cover up all his iniquities."

The lieutenant glances rather nervously around, hoping no friend of the baron will overhear what is being said by the fiery little correspondent, or there may be a double duel on the tapis.

"Honestly, now lieutenant, if you had been at the mess table of a German regiment, an invited and honored guest, and this man should say exactly the same against your flag, that he did against our stars and stripes, what would have been your action?" pursues Sandy.

The officer bites his military mustache.

"Really, my dear fellow, you have me. There would be but one course for me to pursue, and that to cast his slur in his teeth, as a brave man like Mynheer Joe has done."

"Exactly! I knew it! Then blame him no more, but rather honor his daring. When this cur had given the insult—what then?"

"Every eye was turned on Mynheer Joe, for we all understand what was meant. I saw him shut his teeth hard, but only a slight frown passed over his bronzed face. Leaning over the table he looked the baron full in the eye and said calmly: 'I return the compliment, baron. That flag could never wave over the land that harbors a Siberia!' And quick as a flash he emptied his wine glass full in the other's face."

Sandy's face glows with enthusiasm. He is proud of his countryman.

He looks at the explorer, and does not see that Joe is impressed with the danger into which he has been thus drawn by circumstances.

"I have great confidence in his ability, and his lucky star seems in the ascendant," he remarks, at which the officer says in a low tone:

"Privately, between us, Sandy, I earnestly hope he will do the baron. Besides the regard we feel for him as a cousin from across the water and the man who avenged Gordon, you understand that we have no love for the Russian, whose mission to India we can suspect."

"Yes, and it's my private opinion that when he runs against Joe he'll wish he had taken some other course."

It is a good thing to have a sanguine friend, but Sandy does not deceive himself from the company. They understand his going, and do not wonder at it. Any man who may be called upon at sunrise to face the Russian duelist would be a fool to stupefy his senses by lingering at a banquet table.

He is immediately joined by Sandy and the pseudo silver king, and the three walk out under the stars to talk. Joe is soon informed with regard to all that Mr. Grimes has learned.

The three presently bring up at the gymnasium, for it is the wish of the latter gentleman that the explorer shall show what he can do, so a comparison may be drawn and a decision rendered as to what Joe's course must be when he receives the challenge expected.

A very few persons are present. Mr. Grimes speaks to the man in charge, and they are made welcome as friends of the officers. The same professor with whom the baron played is present, and with pleasure he agrees to fence with the American, no doubt believing he will have a chance to recover his prestige, lost in the bout with the baron that day.

When Mynheer Joe takes off his coat and vest and puts a belt around his waist, he is ready for the affair. Upon his feet he has drawn a pair of rubber foot holds that will keep him from slipping.

He bares his right arm, and Sandy sees the professor glance at his superb biceps as though pleased. Then the man of foils takes his wrist and feels it.

"A wonderful arm, monsieur," he says, with kindling eyes. "With practice you would be a magnificent swordsman."

"So old Duval used to tell me," replies Joe.

"Ah, sacre! You take lessons from him, ze greatest master in Paris. Perhaps I shall not be able to have ze revenge after all."

Meanwhile Joe rolls up his left sleeve in the same way, an action the professor regards with concern, but which Mr. Grimes takes to mean what he has fondly hoped.

"Ready, professor?"

The foils click and begin to writhe like snakes, passing in an out with the rapidity of thought. Sandy and Mr. Grimes stand near by. They have a deeper interest in this engagement than appears on the surface.

After looking on for a minute Mr. Grimes heaves a sight of relief.

"He'll do, Sandy. I'll stake my all on him even against the Russian. Watch the magnificent play of the wrist. Heavens! I've seen a man wield a sword before, but never like that. Hark! What does he say—that he finds himself rusty and sluggish. Deuce take it, what can he do when in trim, then? Note the poor professor. He actually looks scared. His revenge doesn't pan out very well, does it? I think I'll have to give him a turn myself to make him feel good."

Thus the usually taciturn Mr. Grimes rattles on, while Sandy can hardly keep quiet.

"Jove! He tosses his weapon into his left hand. Again he is at the professor like a tiger. The poor devil has had the button against his heart a dozen times. What d'ye think of that left-handed play, old fellow?" laughs Sandy.

His companion squeezes his hand, for once showing excitement.

"I feel as jolly as if an old uncle had died and left me his fortune. The baron will meen his match. It will be a royal battle. No danger of our Joe getting hurt. Yes, no matter how well he uses the firearms, I shall recommend swords. The other way both may be killed: here, wounds are more possible. Swords are gentlemen's weapons truly. Look! He hunts the professor—he has him utterly demoralized—he throws down his foil and hold up his hand! Enough, gentlemen!"

It is as Mr. Grimes has said. The Frenchman has been rattled until he can no longer use his weapon. He laughs good-naturedly.

"Monsieur must have his little joke. He is rusty this night. What of me?" he exclaims, shaking Joe's hand.

They chat for a short time, anecdotes of the famous sword master of the Rue de Sevres being in order. Then they sauntered over to the shooting gallery, while Mynheer Joe does some good work. Although he knows how to handle a revolver in a way few men can equal Mr Grimes does not change his mind. With the sword Joe is absolutely safe, and as much can never be said concerning pistols.

He is pleased to note, however, that at twenty paces. Joe is at his best, though inferior to the baron on either side of this figure.

Then Mr. Grimes meets the professer, who has as much fun with him as he afforded Joe. The stout, red-faced traveller is not built for a swordsman, and soon tires of being driven into a corner like a rat at bay: but he has put the professor into a good humor.

The three friends pass out into the night and head toward Shepherd's close by. Again is the grand square illuminated and the clattering of many tongues heard. It is about the same, day and night, here, at times more noisy than at others, but only comparatively quiet from midnight until morning, which period the countless curs of the city select for their serenade, baying the moon, if there be one, snarling and fighting in the public square and carrying on like a pack of hyenas let loose.

As they enter the hotel, a pair of eyes fasten upon them, and a man starts forward. Mynheer Joe recognizes a French officer. It is the same whom Mr. Grimes watched in conversation with the baron the morning before. He holds something in his hand—a letter, judging from its appearance.

"Now we have it," mutters Sandy, as he and Mr Grimes purposely fall back a pace.

The courteous French officer bows.

"Pardon! Am I addressing Monsieur Miner?"

"That is my name, sir," replied Joe, calmly.

"I have something for you, monsieur."

"Thanks."

He tears it open, glances at it, smiles in a careless way, and passes it to Mr. Grimes.

"You are Captain Faitoute, I presume?"

"Oui, monsieur, at your service," bowing.

"Captain Faitoute, my friend Colonel Grimes. He will second me. All arrangements made with him will stand. Good evening," and Mynheer Joe walks complacently away, followed by an admiring glance from the Frenchman, who, under his breath, mutters:

"Parbleu! A brave man, deserving of a better fate than a dog's death at his hands; but it is the decree of fortune," shrugging his shoulders.

He and "Colonel" Grimes walk aside to make all necessary arrangements. This is the first time the American has been a second in a duel, but he has a pretty fair idea as to what his duties are, and always carries a clear head upon his shoulders.

The arrangements are soon made. Joe, as the challenged party, has the choice of weapons, time and place. Swords are selected, and the officer promises to have a pair on the ground so exactly alike, that Joe shall pick his own first.

It is also arranged that the meeting occur on the Mokkatam Hills above Cairo, an hour after sunrise on the following morning. Noticing the Frenchman's look of wonder at such haste, "Colonel" Grimes adds quietly:

"My principal sails for India on Saturday, and cannot delay for any by-play such as this. To-morrow it must be."

"Advise him not to be too hasty in ordering his state room, colonel. There's many a slip betwixt the cup and the lip," says the Frenchman with significant meaning.

"Don't worry about Mynheer Joe. I know he is able to hoe his own row, Monsieur le Captaine. We meet then at daybreak on the Delhi wharf."

"Yes—the boats will be in readiness—I shall have two, because my principal may have scruples about returning alongside his victim."

Mr. Grimes laughs quietly at this thrust. He imagines there may be a surprise in store for Captain Faitoute as well as the baron, and the pseudo silver king is a firm believer in the old maxim that he laughs loudest who laughs last.

So he bids the Frenchman bon soir and resumes his talk with Sandy, while Faitoute walks out of the hotel, looking back at the red-faced American, whose eccentricities, no doubt, have made him believe the other a bizarre specimen.

So it is all arranged.

Each principal is to have a second and an additional friend. The Frenchman has suggested bringing a doctor, at which Grimes smiles.

"We expect to have no need of one: but who knows? My principal would not like to have a human life on his hands, especially a white man's. Yes, bring your doctor along, with plenty of lint and bandages, for sword wounds are sometimes ugly things."

In this way he declares, he gave the other a Roland for an Oliver, and broke even. Sandy takes it all in eagerly. As a newspaper man, he has seen many strange sights, but yet has never had the luck to be present at a duel. The nearest he came to it was when he endeavored to see the Bennett-May affair across the water, and arrived on the duelling ground just in time to see the carriages drive hastily away. It begins to look as though he may now have the desired opportunity, and he means to make the most of it, as such affairs are not an everyday occurrence in these degenerate times.

Mr. Grimes, having been made a master of ceremonies, has a weight of responsibility resting on his shoulders; but he knows the best he can do at present is to see that Joe gets a decent night's sleep and is up betimes.

The pseudo silver king has a watch of peculiar make, with an alarm that can be set for any time, just like a clock. Placed under his pillow, it will make noise enough at the designated hour to arouse a light sleeper such as himself. He has depended on it many a time and not been disappointed.

Mynheer Joe has found Molly in the hotel parlors, and seems to be well content to pass the balance of the evening in her company, drinking the intoxicating cup of love from her clear gray eyes.

Mr. Grimes leaves him alone. This will not make his arm nervous in the morning or his eye unsteady. Better to be in her company listening to her songs than drinking with convivial companions, as the baron is doing at this same hour, playing baccarat.

The news has gone abroad—strange how such things do travel, as might the mist that comes silently in from the sea and spreads over the land like magic. People pretty generally know that the insult has been passed between the Russian baron and the American traveller who was with Gordon in the Soudan. Knowing also the reputation one of these men has as a duelist, it is set down as certain that a meeting must take place soon.

TOGGERY.

Here's where the man who is particular about his haberdashery can always get "The Thing." Shirts, neckwear, underwear, hosiery, gloves, collars, suspenders, belts, etc. A little fresher and a little newer than you find at other stores. This is the verdict of our patrons. Suppose you come and see about it. Our prices will be satisfactory, they always are.—Quick & Robertson, clothiers and haberdashers.

PUSHING AHEAD....

Everyday finds us steadily advancing and requiring more and more men to do our work.

And we get the workmen—workmen of the best type, too. Just the kind you want to do your work, that's the style of men we are looking for.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than curselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

TRIFLES OF DRESS.

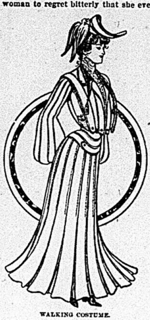
Lace Flounces and Berthas—The Useless Remnant.

It is not correct to mix several kinds of lace on one dress, and yet this is frequently done by the dressmaker who is not particular.

A wide lace bertha is always a dainty and suitable finish for a decollete waist, but a wide lace flounce on a silk dress is an abomination, for it cuts the figure and makes the upper half of the skirt look cheap.

If you have any flounces of real lace, turn them either into berthas or into boleros, or else they can be used to excellent advantage on an evening coat.

Remnants have caused more than one woman to regret bitterly that she ever bought them. They may be cheap, but there is never enough of them to make anything decent, and combinations of two or three remnants are rarely successful.



WALKING COSTUME.

There is nothing prettier for a child's frock than accordion plaiting, especially in white or pale blue.

The picture shows a walking costume of blue cloth. The plaited skirt has a hip yoke. The loose hanging front of the bolero is also in plaits. The revers are of white silk. The hat is blue and white, with a white bird.

Some Stories About the Scots by Sir Archibald Geikie.

Sir Archibald Geikie has just published his Reminiscences—a volume full of stories about the Scots. Here are some of them:

"Weel, Tam, are ye gaun hame wi' your wark?" was the invariable greeting of a doctor to a tailor of his acquaintance, when he met him carrying a bundle. Once the tailor saw the doctor walking in a funeral procession. "Weel, doctor, are ye gaun hame wi' your wark?" he asked.

HANDLING AN INCUBATOR.

Harry L. Daily Tells How He Does It in Orange Judd Farmer.

I run my machine in my cellar. It is roomy and has good air. You cannot have good success unless you can have plenty of fresh air. I start my incubator two or three days before I put eggs in so to get the run of it and the temperature right. Then I put in eggs and do not touch them till the third day, when I commence to turn twice daily and cool them every night. I take them out, put them on top of the machine and shut the doors. Leave them out a little longer every day.

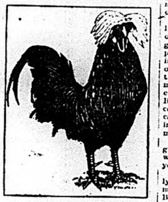
I think too much stress is put on moisture. The less I use the better the hatch. The only time I use it last year was in a very dry time. I did not use it till they began to hatch and come out dry. Then I filled the trays with water heated to 110 degrees and they came out nice and wet. I have got as high as 49 chicks from 50 eggs.

Ventilation is a greater question than moisture. I do not open the ventilators until the third day; then I open them a little more every day till I get them wide open. I test out the infertile and dead eggs the seventh day and again on the 14th and on night of the 18th day. When they are hatching I keep the machine closed and do not open it on any account. If you help any chicks out they hardly ever live and if they do they never amount to anything.

Fill, clean and trim lamp in the morning, then I can get the correct temperature before night. Do not use more than one kind of eggs in your machine at once to get a good hatch. Eggs should begin to hatch by the 20th day in morning and all be out on the night of the 21st. If they commence to hatch before the 20th day, you have had your machine too hot and if they do not hatch by the 21st, you have not had it hot enough. I hang thermometer in machine with bulb level with the eggs and keep temperature as near 103 degrees as possible. Run as near the machine rules as you can. Don't think you know more than the man who made the machine. He has probably worked many years to get it where it is and you can't improve it in a couple of months. Above all, have good, fresh, fertile eggs.

Desirable Fowls on Small Places.

The Polish are a class of poultry very much like by fanciers and breeders who have small places and can give them the proper attention, says American Agriculturist in presenting the accompanying cut. They are probably the handsomest class of poultry, their large topknots and brilliant coloring making them very attractive. The White Crested Black are solid black in color except the topknot, which is pure white. The fowls are medium in size and lay beautiful white eggs.



WHITE CRESTED BLACK POLISH COCK.

Mineral Food for Hogs.

Mineral matter is necessary for hogs to aid in bone building, as an appetizer to remove intestinal parasites, etc., says the live stock editor of The Chicago Tribune. A mixture should be kept in a strong box protected from rain, and the quantity and frequency with which pigs will visit and eat of the mixture will often be surprising. The following mixture is satisfactory: Charcoal, 1½ bushels; common salt, 4 pounds; hardwood ashes, 10 pounds; slacked lime, 3 pounds. Fresh water, shade in summer and grain food when on grass and dry bed free from dust, shelter in winter and above all when confined have area sufficiently large so that it will not become foul with droppings and mud bogs—these are essential for successful hog raising.

Set Some Hens.

The hens need a rest after the long laying season, and why not let this rest be one of profit to the owner and pleasure to the hen. Rather than raise a brood of chicks in the natural way, some people would rather confine the poor hens until they give up the idea of rearing a brood.

After the hens are "broke" from setting the owners wonder why they don't lay, and often a fine bird is killed because she didn't lay immediately after she got over her broody spell. If a hen is allowed to become a mother of a brood she has more chance to enjoy nature. If a hen is given 15 good eggs, she will nearly always bring off and rear a brood of 12 chicks.

Marketing Ducks.

In nine weeks ducklings should weigh four and a half pounds each and are ready for market. They should be marketed before the pinfeathers begin to grow, which is likely to occur after the ninth week. Ducks are best killed by cutting into the base of the brain at the roof of the mouth. Before killing the feet of the birds should be caught in a loop, with head hanging downward. Immediately after being killed the picking (dry) should be done. Care should be taken to prevent injury of any kind to the carcass.

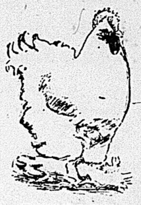
EGGS, BACON AND HAMS

REPORT OF MR. A. W. GRINDLEY, CANADIAN AGENT IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Canadian Egg Trade in a Good Way in the Mother Country—The "Canadian Box" Is Popular and Gives General Satisfaction—Our Mild-Cured Bacon and Hams Are Also Popular in Britain. But There Is Room for Improvement in the Packing Cases.

The following is the report of Mr. A. W. Grindley, Agent of the Department of Agriculture in Great Britain, regarding an important branch of the Canadian export trade in food products for 1903:

The Canadian egg trade is in a good way, best brands selling as high as fresh or Danish selected. The eggs are chiefly shipped in the "Canadian box," with "fillers" holding thirty dozen. The style of package is popular and being of good quality gives general satisfaction. A limited number of eggs are shipped in the "Foreign box" which holds twelve long hundreds (1,440 eggs). The eggs in these large cases are packed in straw or excelsior and are put up in this style at the request of the importers. "Continental" and "Irish" eggs are packed in this style of package.



WHITE COCHIN COCKEREL.

They are good layers and excellent show birds—Modern type.

Both "fresh" and glycerines" have come forward late in the year in large quantities; the quality was good, but the total shipments have not been so large, owing to scarcity of eggs in Canada.

According to a book recently published in Russia, that country boasts of having left Denmark behind as regards export of eggs. Russian competition in butter, eggs and poultry is becoming very serious by reason of adopting up-to-date methods, and these products are becoming much more popular on the British markets, owing to the improved quality. Russia, Denmark and other foreign countries are now taking greater care in selecting, grading and packing eggs, as well as getting them marketed as fresh as possible.

These foreign eggs now arrive regularly several days every week, as well as regularly every week of the year.

The bulk of these eggs are perfectly clean, and are graded into as many as six sizes, so that to-day the British importer is not inclined to speculate as in former years, and will have little if anything to do with stocks which have been held in cold storage.

As Canadian exporters have to meet this competition, great care must be taken in selecting and sending forward only eggs which are perfectly fresh, clean and graded into sizes.

During 1903 the United Kingdom imported 19,848,897 great hundreds (120) of eggs, valued at £6,617,619. Canada's share of this large trade amounted to only 557,080 great hundreds, valued at £218,571. The imports from Russia amounted to £1,866,421 and from Denmark to £1,648,367. Germany, Belgium and France are the other leading exporters of eggs to Britain, each of these countries sending from three to four times as many as Canada.

Bacon and Hams.

Mr. Grindley also reports as follows concerning the bacon and ham trade:

Canadian mild-cured bacon and hams are becoming very popular in Great Britain and are preferred to those imported from the United States, as they are leaner and there is always a demand for lean cuts. Canadian packing houses should make a close study of the various British markets and supply them with the cuts which are in demand by the consumer.

There is still room for improvement as regards packing cases—these are often of knotty lumber, badly nailed, and no battens at ends (same as American packers use) which give double nail bearings. Heavy split wood hoops should be used to bind round each end of the case and for extra large cases an extra binder should be placed round the centre.

Shippers of these mild-cured meats must take advantage of the best means of transportation which are now provided. Ship goods as little as possible to be sold on commission and then only to reliable firms who will see that they are warehoused under proper conditions as regards cleanliness and temperature.

Tastes Have Changed.

Years ago large, fat wethers were very much in demand for export. During recent years, however, the tastes of consumers in Great Britain have been modified in this respect so that large, well grown lambs are coming to be more sought for in those markets than the old fashioned heavyweight wethers. We are pleased to notice that the demand for this kind of export sheep is good at the present time.—Wool Markets and Sheep.

A SUCCESSFUL CONCERT.

GIVEN UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE JOHN ST. Y. P. GUILD LAST NIGHT.

A very successful and largely attended concert was given in the Sunday School rooms of John St. church last night, under the auspices of the Young People's Guild. Mr. Hunter, president of the Guild, was chairman. There was not a poor number on the programme, and some exceedingly enjoyable ones, indeed. The soloists were Miss Holton, Mrs. Parker, Miss Landers, Miss Stork, Miss Wilson, Mr. Detlor, Mr. Sanford Burrows, and Mr. Peter Forin. Mrs. Campbell acted as accompanist and played a Meyerbeer number with charming taste and expression. Miss Bonisteel gave two readings in finished style, and a quartette composed of Mrs. Parker, Miss Wilson, Mr. Parker and Mr. Hart sang delightfully. One could hardly wish for better balance. They gave Sullivan's "O, Hush Thee My Baby" and "I Love my Love in the Morning" with a daintiness and dulcet effect that was pleasing in the extreme. Their numbers were delightful bits of cultivated vocalization. The promoters of the concert are to be congratulated on the rich treat they gave the very appreciative audience.

USE OF ALCOHOLIC DRINK

SCIENTISTS AGREE THAT IT IS SELDOM BENEFICIAL TO HUMAN BEINGS.

The committee of fifty scientists which has for ten years been studying the liquor question has issued its fourth preliminary report in two volumes. The following are the main conclusions drawn: Effects of moderate or occasional use of alcoholic drinks differ with individuals, age, occupation and climate. With the majority of occasional moderate drinkers no special effect upon health seems to be observed by themselves or their physicians.

In some such cases drinking is harmful; in a few it is thought to be beneficial. Eighty per cent. of the leading brain workers of the United States use alcoholic drinks occasionally or regularly or in moderation. The use of such drinks to stimulate mental effort gives, on the whole, bad results. Even occasional or moderate use is likely to be harmful to young persons, mainly because of the danger of its leading to excess. Among diseased or infirm persons over 50 years of age, alcoholic beverages, while sometimes useful, should be taken, if at all, with the last meal of the day. "Fine old whiskies" and "fine old brandies" are nearly as likely to produce injurious effects as are the cheaper sorts, if taken in the same quantities.

In moderate quantities, beer, wine and diluted whisky have a certain food value, but they are seldom used for food purposes—rather for their effect on the brain. In large quantities and for some persons even in moderate quantities, they are poison. Alcoholic drinks in moderate quantities may be useful as restoratives in fatigue after work is done, but they often produce depression and harmful results when used just before and during labor, physical or mental.—Harper's Weekly.

RINGLING BROS'. CIRCUS.

THE FIRST TO VISIT BELLEVILLE.

C. A. White, press agent in advance of Ringling Bros., was in town today and had the following to say:—

Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows, which will exhibit in Belleville Saturday, June 4, has been enlarged upon such a broad scale of liberality as to almost preclude the depiction of its real magnitude on paper. The Ringling Brothers, always modern and progressive, have had for years the biggest and best show on earth, yet this season they have more than trebled their immense amusement enterprise by the addition of complete new trains, hundreds of horses and people, and by entire new shows. The crowning feature of these almost unlimited additions is the grand spectacular and pantomimic production of Jerusalem and the Crusades, in which are shown twelve hundred characters, magnificent costumes, fifteen carloads of special scenery and an enormous triple strength cathedral pipe organ of rare volume, power and sweetness of tone. This spectacle is shown in the largest tent ever made for a circus—a vast canvas theatre, arena and aerial enclave, brilliantly lighted by electricity. Jerusalem and the Crusades is but one of hundreds of marvellous attractions the Ringling Brothers have gathered from all points of the compass. The monster free street parade—a glittering pageant fully three miles in length—is alone worth the amount charged for the circus proper. It is replete with new and novel processional attractions, displaying beautifully carved and decorative floats representative of every country on the globe, richly attired horsemen from every known nation, and monster herds of elephants and camels, with a division for the children, and a full hundred cages of the rarest wild animals known to zoologists. In the arenic performance the Ringling Brothers introduce 375 performers, each one a premier artist. Among them are the marvellous six Glinserrettis, the most famous acrobats of Europe; the Pasmanias, from Australia; the Dollmard troupe, from Germany; and the eight Colini-Clairons, from France. These celebrated artists appear in America for the first time with Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows. Other gymnastic performers of international fame are the three Rios, the Fortuns Brothers, the Tybell Sisters, Genero and Theol, the Flying Fishers and the wonderful Dacoma family. Heading the greatest assembly of riders ever brought together are the four Eldreds and the four Bedinis, the most sensational bareback riders in the world. The equestrian acts of these renowned artists are thrillingly original and perilous, and have never been accomplished before. Other distinguished riders are Orrin Davenport, the Hobsons, Rhoda Royal, Reno McCree, Lulu Davenport, Madame Royal, May Davenport, John Agee, Frank Shadle and John Slater. There are more than 200 acts in the circus programme and most of the acts are exclusively novel and sensational. In the trained animal display the Ringling Brothers present three herds of huge elephant actors, under the direction of Pearl Souder, troops of cute little ponies in acts that never fail to please the children, Captain Webb's wonderful performing seals and cake walking and high school horses in exhibitions of the highest type of equine intelligence and marvellous new conceptions. The circus performance is given on two stages, in three rings, and on a wide quarter-mile hippodrome track.

Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows will exhibit here one day only and give performances at 2 o'clock and 8.

A BRILLIANT LECTURE.

WAS THAT DELIVERED BY REV. C. O. JOHNSTON, OF TORONTO, IN HOLLOWAY ST. CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

A rather small audience gathered in the Sunday School rooms of Holloway St. Church last night to listen to a lecture by Rev. C. O. Johnston, of Toronto, entitled, "Character sketches of Englishmen, Irishmen and Scotchmen." The lecture was a brilliant effort, and deserved a crowded auditorium. Rev. Mr. Johnston proved himself to be an orator of rare ability, with a fund of wit and pathos which was highly entertaining. Speaking of the characteristics of the different nationalities, he said the Irishman was noted for his vivacity, which sometimes led him to the verge of dangerous superficiality, caused by his quickness of speech and ready wit. The Irishman's redeeming trait was his warm-hearted sympathy and charity. The Scotchman was cautious; his dangerous characteristic was a tendency to narrowness, and his redeeming trait "dourness" and tenacity of purpose. The Englishman was gifted with the ability to see far ahead, with a steadfastness of purpose and sublime confidence in his own powers which eventually landed him in the front. The lecturer summoned up the different characteristics as follows: If, he said, he were running a circus he would want the Englishman to be ringmaster, for he would act with dignity, and dearly loved to crack his whip at somebody else's heels; the Irishman should be clown, for he loved to crack jokes, and the Scotchman should be ticket seller, for he could account for every penny. If he had a funeral to conduct, the lecturer also said, he would want the Englishman to dig the grave, for it would be dug square and straight; the Scotchman to lower the coffin, for it would be done reverently and with proper solemnity; and the Irishman to do the weeping, for it would be done copiously, and the mourner would soon after be ready for the ordinary duties of life.

Rev. F. B. Stratton was chairman, and a quartette composed of Misses Grills and McMurray, Messrs. Berkeley and Wrightmeyer, sang "Rule Britannia" and the "Red White and Blue."

A THREE-YEAR-OLD'S TERRIBLE PLIGHT.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN AND MIRACULOUSLY ESCAPED A FRIGHTFUL DEATH.

Port Hope, May 10.—Little Kathleen Buller, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Buller, Newtonville, had a miraculous escape from death.

Mr. Buller is agent at the Newtonville station, and his residence being very near at hand it is difficult to keep the children away from the track.

It was about 3.14 on Saturday afternoon and the little tot was gathering stones from the railway track. A shrill whistle told of an approaching train, and the servant girl at Mr. Buller's, as she does on all occasions, rushed to the door to see if the children were safe; she was horrified to find the little girl standing in the centre of the track and hurried to remove her, at the same time calling for her to come. It was no use, the little one could not move any faster, and the train was drawing nearer and nearer. Finally, she managed to pull her tiny feet over the rail, but she was then confronted by the high platform. Any further move on her part meant death, and there she stood on the end of the tie about ten inches from the tracks. Mr. Moses, a G. T. R. painter, who was a short distance away, and seeing the affair, hurried to the assistance and arrived at the little one just a few seconds before the train. He grabbed her up, but before he could place her on the platform, the buffer struck her on the hip, throwing her against the platform and bruising her head and arm. Mr. Moses was also struck on the arm, but only slightly injured.

Strike at Power Works.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 11.—The strikers are the rock-drillers and helpers, the steam engineers and the hoist runners. An officer of one of the unions says four hundred men are out, but contractors claim that not nearly so large a number have struck. The drillers, engineers and hoist runners demand thirty cents per hour. They are getting 25. The drillers' helpers are getting 20 cents an hour and demand 25. The men began to quit on Saturday and Monday morning the strike was in full force. The laborers are all at work yet, but they may go out for an increase from 15 to 17½ cents per hour. That would mean trouble.

High Heels.

Sarah Bernhardt, who was interviewed on the subject of high heels, says: "High heels are exquisite for the woman who knows how to wear them. Every one does not know how. A happy medium must be struck. I can see no reason in the world why there should be any danger from wearing high heels. The great argument in their favor is that they are prettier than low ones."

OSLER HIT SCOTT HARD

Likens Attacks on Him to Gambols of Alaskan Sable.

If Parliamentary Rules Did Not Prevent He Would Characterise Mr. Scott's Charges With a Single Word of Three Letters—The Militia Resolutions Passed—Pay of the Men to Be Increased.

Ottawa, May 11.—Assertions and contradictions, charges and counter charges, personalities in profusion, and points of order at frequent intervals were the features of yesterday's sitting of the House. The affray began with E. B. Osler replying to the attack made on him in the House yesterday by Walter Scott and T. O. Davis. It ended when the Osler sympathizers and the Scott-Davis people exhausted their powers of recrimination.

Mr. Osler gave the history of his connection with the Long Lake, Qu'Appelle and Saskatchewan Railway, and the Calgary-Edmonton Railway. Incidentally he likened Walter Scott to a species of Alaskan Sable and inveiled language characterized Scott's charges as a lie. "Curs and mongrels" was another of the descriptive phrases Mr. Osler shot at his assailants.

Walter Scott declined to accept Mr. Osler's explanations, and hypersensitiveness caused him to resent the language in which the explanation was couched. The controversy soon spread, and it was 9 o'clock before one of the most inglorious squabbles that was ever witnessed in the House came to an end.

Sir Frederick's Estimates.

Sir Frederick Borden moved the House into committee on his resolution fixing the pay of the permanent force and militia under the new bill. Replying to Mr. McColl, the Minister of Militia said that the increase to the militia would begin from the coming into force of the act. It was not retroactive, but on and after three years service, dating from the passage of the act, the militiaman would receive $1 per day.

Sir Frederick Borden said that there was some provision that referring to increase for good conduct, under which a man, if his conduct was good could receive his advance of 25c. at once. In the militia a man would receive his 50 cents per day the first year, then probably 70 cents on enlistment, then advance to 75 cents and 85 cents, and in the third year to $1.

Mr. Borden suggested that the wording of the resolution might be changed with advantage to the militiamen.

The resolution was finally amended to read that the pay of privates shall be at the rate of 50c. a day, which rate may be increased as may be prescribed by regulations approved by the Governor-in-Council, but not to exceed a maximum of $1 a day.

On the resolution giving the Governor-in-Council power to fix the pay and allowances of the officers of the general staff, and headquarters staff, Mr. Clarke entered a plea on behalf of the district officers commanding, who, he said, were underpaid.

Sir Frederick said that while he could not state exactly the amount that would be allowed by the Governor-in-Council there would be an increase which he hoped would be satisfactory.

The resolution providing for the appointment of an officer holding the rank not below that of colonel in the militia charged with the military inspection of the militia, salary $6,000 a year, was then considered.

Not While G.O.C. Is Retained.

Sir Frederick Borden explained that it was not intended to appoint an inspector-general so long as the office of general officer commanding was retained. Power was merely taken to appoint such an officer in case Canada should see fit to adopt the new English system. In that event the office of G.O.C. would be abolished, as it has been abolished in England. In England an army council has been created. It is composed of the Minister and leading military men, the Deputy Minister or Under Secretary of State. The leading member would be known as the chief of general staff. Sir Frederick Borden said he favored the new English system, and he thought Canada should have a similar system in case the armies of the two countries should be called upon to act in concert in Canada. He did not think the adoption of the English system would mean the increased expenditure of a single dollar.

More responsibility would likely devolve on the district officers, who at present have little or no power, and take all their orders from Ottawa. The duties of the inspector-general are to instruct and report to the army council as to the condition of officers in the militia. He might be an Imperial officer or might not. Sir Frederick explained that it was desirable for the Government to have the power to appoint such an officer in case it should be deemed advisable to adopt the English system. The resolution passed.

Canadian Artillery Association.

Sir Frederick Borden introduced a bill to incorporate the Canadian Artillery Association just as the Dominion Rifle Association was incorporated some years ago.

Editor Must Show Cause.

Toronto, May 11.—The Court of Appeal yesterday ordered that Rev. J. A. Macdonald, editor of The Globe, should appear at Osgoode Hall on Monday at 11 o'clock and show cause why he should not be committed to jail for contempt for publication of an editorial commenting upon the expenses of E. A. Dunlop in the bye-election in North Renfrew. It was also directed that Mr. Macdonald should pay the costs of and incidental to the application and order.

KILLED BY A CAR.

Accident at Fort William Results in William Hamilton's Death—Several Other Fatal Accidents.

Port Arthur, May 11.—A fatal accident occurred at Fort William yesterday afternoon in which Wm. Hamilton, carpenter contractor of that place, came to his death. He, with three other men, were driving to the west of the Fort, when a car came along. A dog belonging to Hamilton ran on the track and the motorman rang his bell to scare it. The horse took fright and made a bound, its head going through the glass in front of the car. The carriage was thrown and the men hurled out of it. Hamilton's head went under the car wheels. The motorman had put on the brakes, but the man was dragged along a number of feet. When taken from under the car his skull was fractured. Death was instantaneous. The coroner did not deem an inquest necessary.

Three Fatal Accidents.

Hamilton, May 11.—Within 24 hours three men have been killed in railway accidents. William F. Baker, brakeman, was killed in Brantford Monday night while coupling cars on the T. H. & B. Yesterday morning at an early hour another Hamilton trainman, Charles Buckler, 555 York street, a G.T.R conductor, met a horrible death near Stony Creek. It is supposed that while walking over the top of his freight train he stumbled, fell, and was run over. A man believed to be A. Langham, 201 Spadina avenue, Toronto, judging from a letter found in his pocket, was cut in two by the 11.15 G.T.R. train for Toronto yesterday morning. As the train was pulling out of the station he ran after it, seized the hand-rail on the front of the rear coach, stumbled, and was thrown under the wheels.

The ball severed the jugular and she died about midnight Monday night. The person who fired the shot is unknown. The girl was shot by a rifle, and it is thought the bullet must have traveled a considerable distance, and was just about spent.

Cigarmaker Drowned.

Toronto, May 11.—A man, whose name is supposed to be Jeanceau, was drowned at the foot of Sherbourne street yesterday afternoon. He fell out of his boat. He was a French-Canadian and came to Toronto from Montreal, or Brockville, where his parents reside.

He wanted the resolution supported, but some members urged delay for further discussion and it was referred to the committee on home affairs.

SIR H. M. STANLEY DEAD

The Famous Explorer Succumbed to Pleurisy.

Sketch of His Work in the Dark Continent—The Finding of Livingstone and the Rescue of Emin Pasha—His Literary Labors and the Works He Left Behind Him—May Be Buried Beside Livingstone in Westminster Abbey.

London, May 11.—Sir Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, passed away peacefully shortly after six o'clock yesterday. He was quite conscious to the last and was able to recognize his wife.

Before he died Sir Henry expressed a wish to be buried at his country seat, Furze Hill, Pirbright, Surrey. The question, however, is being discussed of burying him beside Livingstone, in Westminster Abbey.

Stanley's Career.

Sir Henry Morton Stanley, the most famous of modern explorers, was born of poor parents near Denbigh, Wales, in 1841, and at first bore the name of John Rowlands. When about fifteen he worked his way as cabin boy to New Orleans, where he was employed by a merchant named Stanley, whose name he assumed. He served in the Confederate army in the Civil war, contributed to several journals, and in 1867 began his connection with The New York Herald. As its special correspondent he accompanied Lord Napier's Abyssinian expedition, and the first news of the fall of Magdala was conveyed to Britain by The New York Herald. Stanley next went to Spain for his paper, and in October, 1869, received from Mr. Gordon Bennett the laconic instruction, "Find Livingstone." But first he visited Egypt for the opening of the Suez Canal, and traveled through Palestine, Turkey, Persia and India. In January, 1871, he reached Zanzibar, and in March marched into the heart of Africa. On the 10th November he "found" Livingstone at Ujiji. The two explored the north of Lake Tanganyika, and settled that it had no connection with the Nile basin. In March, 1872, Stanley set out for the coast. On his arrival in England he was awarded the medal of the Royal Geographical Society, and his book, "How I Found Livingstone" had an enormous sale. An expedition under Stanley, who had followed the Ashanti campaign for The New York Herald, was fitted out jointly by The Herald and The Daily Telegraph to complete Livingstone's work, and in August, 1874, he left England for Bagamoyo. Thence he made for the Victoria Nyanza, circumnavigated the lake, formed a close friendship with King Mtesa of Uganda, next determined the shape of Lake Tanganyika, passed down the Lualaba to Nyangwe, and by a ten months' journey from Nyangwe traced the course of the Congo to the sea. Having published "Through the Dark Continent" in 1878, in 1879 he again went out to found, under the auspices of the King of the Belgians, the Congo Free State. He took part in the Congo Congress at Berlin in 1884-5, and lectured in Great Britain and America on his African work. In 1886 he was summoned from America to take command of the expedition for the relief of Emin Pasha. In March he, his officers, Soudanese soldiers, etc., landed at the mouth of the Congo. On the 15th of June the expedition had reached Yambuya, on the Aruwimi, where he left a part of his 650 men under Major Barttelot, and with 388 men marched into the forest. Disaster overtook the rear column, but after long delay news came that Emin and Stanley had joined hands on the shores of the Albert Nyanza. The return journey was made overland to the east coast, and Bagamoyo was reached in December, 1889. In 1890 he received in London a reception almost royal in its splendor. The Geographical Society gave him a special gold medal, and Oxford, Cambridge, Edinburgh and Durham conferred on him honorary degrees. That same year he married the clever artist, Miss Dorothy Tennant. In 1891-2 he lectured in America and Australia. He was naturalized as a British subject in 1892, and stood unsuccessfully for North Lambeth in the Unionist interest; he was, however, returned at the general election of 1895. Among his published books other than those mentioned are a novel, "My Kalulu" (1873), "Comassie and Magdala" (1874), "The Congo" (1885), "In Darkest Africa, or the Rescue of Emin" (1890), "My Dark Companions and Their Strange Stories" (1893), and "My Early Travels in America and Asia" (1895).

To Revivify Royal College.

Kingston, May 11.—The Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons is to be revived, with Senator Sullivan, one of the charter members, as president. This corporation has a royal charter, issued in 1866. Since the Queen's Medical College resumed its relation with Queen's the Royal College has been dormant. It is now proposed to revive it and utilize its examining powers in granting fellowships and the degree of F.R.C.P. S. This degree can only be secured on examination of a high standard and a thesis by doctors of five years' standing. Since 1892 the Royal College has conferred one or two degrees, but now it is proposed to thoroughly reorganize it and make it a live corporation.

Capt. Richardson Dead.

Victoria, B.C., May 11.—Capt. Richardson, Secretary of the Provincial Bureau of Mines, died suddenly of heart failure yesterday morning. He was formerly private secretary to Lieut.-Governor Dewdney. He held a captain's commission in the 35th Regiment of Infantry of the British Army, and saw service in several campaigns.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

A Sure Cure for Headaches.—Bilious headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralising the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedelia."

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

WHO OWNS CANADA? THE PEOPLE OR THE RAILWAYS?

Canadians Becoming Slaves to Railway Corporations.

So Said a Member of Parliament in the House Wnen Discussing the Increase of Freight Rates on the Grand Trunk Railway—Members Generally Agreed That the Time Was Inopportune—Railway Commission a Hiding Place.

Ottawa, May 12.—Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper took his seat in the House yesterday beside the leader of the Opposition. This was Sir Hibbert's first appearance this season. Sir Wilfrid Laurier crossed the floor of the House and warmly greeted the member for Pictou. A similar courtesy was paid to Sir Hibbert by Sir William Mulock.

Leighton McCarthy presented a petition from the Western Insurance Company and the British American Insurance Company of Toronto. Owing to the recent conflagration in Toronto, he said, it had been found necessary to issue new stock, and for this reason legislation was being asked.

W. S. Calvert introduced a bill incorporating the Tilsonburg, Lake Erie & Pacific Railway.

G.T.R. Freight Rates.

Mr. Brodeur, on a motion to adjourn, brought up the question of the increased freight rates of the Grand Trunk Railway. The severe winter, meaning as it did increased operating expenses, did not justify the increase of freight rates. The people, he declared, suffered more than the railways. Goods ordered for delivery at Christmas remained undelivered in March. Perishable goods were destroyed. These misfortunes fell not on the railways but on the people. Charles M. Hays, however, practically contended that the people had no rights. This position he assumed in the face of the fact that the municipalities of Ontario had taxed themselves to the amount of $17,561,080, for the benefit of the Grand Trunk; the Province of Ontario had granted $9,798,377, and subsidies from other provinces made a total of $2,587 per mile of the 10,078 miles of railway in Canada. Mr. Brodeur argued that the aid granted by the people to the railways gave them a right to a voice in the fixing of rates.

To the Commission.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied that the Railway Commission had been vested with full powers as to the control of freight rates. It would not be advisable for the Government to interfere until the Commission has been given a fair trial.

Dr. Sproule pointed out that the Railway Commission would be governed by public sentiment, and it was Parliament's right and duty to draw attention to grievances. The Government seemed to have a misapprehension as to the relative rights of the people and the railways. Nearly $60,000,000, which the Grand Trunk owed the country, remained unpaid. From various sources the Grand Trunk had received in subsidies from the Canadian people $75,614,000, but now the Grand Trunk seemed to think that it owned the road, owned the people, owned the country and could do exactly as it pleased.

Change the Whole System.

Rufus Pope declared it was time for Parliament to change the whole system of chartering railways. In fact, it was time to cease giving special charters altogether and allow men to act together and build railways wherever they pleased, with their own money. The watered stock of Canadian railways amounted to an appalling sum, and upon this the people had to make up the dividends. Mr. Pope protested against the Prime Minister's contention. "If," said Mr. Pope, "we can't do anything else, let us take into consideration the purchase of all the railways in Canada, even if they cost $250,000,000, and see if we can't get some benefit out of them."

Mr. Richardson of South Grey, considered the time most inopportune after a hard winter to increase rates. The result was to accentuate the ill-feeling of farmers towards railway companies. There was a feeling, he said, that we were no longer a self-governing country, but that the country in its material interests is controlled by the large railway corporations. It had come to this that the price of a commodity was practically fixed by the railways, which was an intolerable condition and one demanding immediate redress.

Convenient Hiding Place.

Mr. Johnston of Cardwell, likened the Railway Commission to a convenient hiding place for the Government to retreat behind when urged to do something to relieve the people from the oppression of the railway companies. He gave an instance where last winter, owing to delay in shipment, he lost $21 in freight rates, and the expense of feeding a bunch of cattle for three and a half months. He pointed out that the farmers had had to foot bills for the extra cost of keeping roads open last winter and wanted to know why the railways should not also put up with some loss. If, however, the railway companies were going to make the farmers, by means of higher freight rates all summer, pay for the companies' winter losses it was certainly the strongest argument yet for Government ownership of railways.

Mr. Cochrane arraigned the Grand Trunk for its excessive and discriminatory charges upon freight, mentioning as an illustration a charge of 75c. a barrel upon apples between Hastings and Ottawa, as compared with a dollar a barrel from Western Ontario points to Great Britain. Mr. Cochrane thought it not only an extortion but an insult to Canadian that the same railway company should charge an American 2c. a mile in Michigan and a Canadian 3c. a mile across in Ontario, notwithstanding that its Canadian line had been heavily subsidized by the people.

Mr. Donnelly gave specific instances of the extremely bad service of the Grand Trunk in Western Ontario.

Make Railway Act Stronger.

Mr. Robinson thought the remedy lay in making the Railway Act strong enough to give control of rates and then the Railway Commission would effectually enforce the law. Britons boasted that they had never been slaves, but in Canada they were fast becoming the slaves of the railway corporations.

Mr. Lennox drew attention to the serious loss the country suffered through inadequate railway equipment and submitted that it would have been good policy to impose, as one of the terms of the Grand Trunk Pacific bargain, that the Grand Trunk should properly equip its present system.

Mr. Ingram pointed out that one of the causes of the proposed increase in rates was the necessity of meeting the extra taxation of $239,739 imposed upon the Grand Trunk Railway System in Ontario to meet the extravagance of the Ross Government.

This closed the discussion.

Evening Sitting.

The evening sitting of the House was devoted to consideration of the Opposition amendments to the Grand Trunk Pacific contract. Four of them were argued and voted down. The first was to provide that the G.T.P. shall have an absolute and unencumbered title to the rolling stock, upon which the Government is to have a first mortgage as security for the operation of the eastern division by the company.

The second provided for the payment by the Grand Trunk Pacific of 3 per cent. upon the Government section between North Bay and Winnipeg, taken over for use by the company previous to the completion of the eastern division.

The third declared that the expression "working expense shall not include any tolls or rents for rolling stock."

The fourth was that in case of goods shipped over the G.T.P., and not specially routed, the rate shall not be higher to a Canadian than to a foreign port.

The committee then arose and reported progress, and the House adjourned at midnight.

That Yukon Case.

Ottawa, May 12.—The Public Accounts Committee yesterday morning investigated the question of a payment by the Government of $5,000 to Leighton McCarthy's law firm in connection with services rendered in the Yukon royalty case. The Deputy Minister of Justice declared that he had initialed the account, which he claimed was for Mr. Osler. Mr. McCarthy's partner affirmed that the member for North Simcoe was not a participant in the amount. In cross-examination by Mr. Barker, Mr. Osler persisted in this.

LONDON TIMES LECTURES KING.

SOVEREIGN TOLD HE MUST NOT EXCEED PREROGATIVES.

London, May 11.—King Edward has returned from Ireland immensely enthusiastic over his visit. He was received with respect and cordiality everywhere, the manifestations being spontaneous.

The Times has actually lectured him severely for his sympathetic speeches, which, it fears, will inspire hopes of concession to the Nationalist demands, which are impossible. It reminds him, moreover, of his limitations as a constitutional sovereign, and of the danger of overstepping his prerogatives.

The secret of this astonishing outburst is that the ascendency party in Ireland has become aware that the King has been privately discussing Home Rule with prominent Irish Unionists, indicating that at least he has an open mind on the question. In addition they consider that he neglects the Orange Loyalist section of Ireland to cultivate the good opinion of the Nationalist population.

The King is determined to work for the pacification of Ireland, and he now is in constant communication with the Irish Secretary, Mr. Wyndham, as to measures to be adopted to stem the tide of emigration which is draining the life blood of the country.

The Irish Unionists, at the outside one-sixth of the population, fear that if it becomes known that the King is not afraid of Home Rule its passage would be swift and certain.

OUR POORLY INFORMED PREMIER.

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier selected himself as the best qualified man to handle the great railway question now before Parliament, it is only fair to infer that he did so because he thought he was the most capable man in the Cabinet for that purpose. Perhaps he was, but, if so, then the others are a poor lot, indeed, for there is no exaggeration in saying that, in his various speeches on the question, involving the country in the expenditure of vast sums of money, and committing it to enormous responsibilities, the Premier displayed a dense ignorance and weakness in matters concerning which almost any schoolboy of 14 is fully informed. He misquoted Scott, and actually referred to a Shakespearian quotation made by R. L. Borden as a poem written expressly for the occasion by the talented Leader of the Opposition. Sublime ignorance, truly! To continue, Sir Wilfrid flatly contradicted a statement by Mr. Tarte to the effect that the people of the State of New York had in a plebiscite authorized the expenditure of $101,000,000 on the Erie canal. Every man of ordinary intelligence knows that at the elections held last November, the big issue before the electors was "shall the Erie canal be deepened," and by a majority of a quarter of a million votes the expenditure was authorized. Still the Premier, the man who is handling the greatest railway measure in the history of the country, did not know that the Americans were undertaking this enormous obligation for the avowed purpose of diverting freight from Montreal to the City of New York. On another occasion the Premier expressed the opinion that Canadian vessels could not carry freight between Canadian and United States ports. Later he corrected himself when the absurdity of the contention was brought home to him. These are facts. They are to be found on the pages of the official reports of the House of Commons proceedings. Is it not humiliating to find such nonsensical declarations coming from the head of the

"A Subscriber" writes: "Is it not about time something were done to abate the dog nuisance in this city? I have been three times attacked by dogs on the street this spring, while riding my bicycle in the pursuit of business; my neighbor's daughter had her dress torn by a cur, while the children of another neighbor are afraid to go to school by a certain street because of their fear of a savage dog. There may possibly be justice in the remark of one of the Aldermen (as reported in your paper) that 'if a man is afraid of a dog he should keep off the street,' but personally I think that human beings have a few rights which override those of dogs, and it certainly appears to me that it is high time the authorities took steps to abate the dog nuisance in this city."

We are shocked at the action of a certain Kingston paper, which published a picture of Lord Stanley, late Governor-General of Canada, and labelled it as that of Sir H. M. Stanley, the deceased explorer. The least our Kingston contemporary could have done was to give the picture a shave.

LARGEST ON EARTH.

RINGLING BROTHERS' GREAT CIRCUS COMING ON SATURDAY, JUNE 4.

Last year Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows was thought to have reached the climax of size and inventive genius, but this season's display proves this idea to have been fallacious. Not only are there a greater number of imported ring features, and startling home creations, including the spectacular production of Jerusalem and the Crusades, but all other departments of the show life — the menagerie, aquarium and horse fair—have been enlarged nearly double. Two giraffes, supposed to be the last of their race, the only rhinoceros in captivity, a real baby elephant, no higher than its mother's knee, and taking nourishment like a human infant, and a seemingly incredible herd of forty elephants, are exclusive features in this remarkable zoological collection. This baby elephant is the first ever bred, born and successfully reared in America. It is a sight of a lifetime, and an object of the keenest scientific study as well as popular delight. The model horse of aristocratic lineage and perfect symmetry is shown with Ringling Brothers' marvellous exhibitions as seen nowhere else in the world. These horses not only have rare beauty of form, but they exhibit amazing intelligence, and in their graceful and difficult exercises present a feature of indescribable attraction.

Saturday, June 4, is the day fixed for the exhibition of the Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows in Belleville. Readers of this paper are familiar with the magnitude and high character of this famous show. No circus has ever reached the public heart like this one. Other exhibitions come and go, but the impression they make is short lived, while the memory of the great Ringling Brothers shows is a lingering pleasure, and makes their return warmly welcome. Circus ideas that whet public curiosity generally originate with this great enterprise, and whenever copied by other shows create the same interest or sensation. The reason is not far to seek. The Ringling Brothers not only expend extravagant sums of money to get the truly novel in arenic features, but they insist on securing the ablest known performers to interpret these acts. Each season presents a programme of surprising freshness and enjoyment. Everything goes along with the speed of perfect system, and the myriad and bewildering bill is finished before the slightest tinge of unrest is felt. Acts follow each other without the slightest delay, and the delicate and heavy properties are arranged without friction or notice. The theatre stage manager is made to appear like a much overrated and puffed-up person after witnessing the masterly manner in which the immense programme of the great Ringling Brothers great shows is handled. This circus is the standard of the world, more than twice as big as any other, and must be copied by all that seek success.

HEART PALPITATION AT NIGHT

Rattles even the strongest man, but to the average woman it is a taste of general purgatory. Take a little Nerviline in sweetened water and away goes the palpitation. You'll be saved lots of worry by keeping Nerviline on hand, which is a treasure for all sorts of pains and aches. Nerviline cures headache, stomach and bowel troubles quickly. Costs 25c for a large bottle.

The truthfulness of what a man says doesn't always depend on the amount of noise he makes in saying it.

PROMINENT MONTREAL MINISTER SAYS BAPTISM IS A BARRIER TO CHURCH UNION.

Montreal, May 10. — The proposed union of the Protestant Evangelical denominations was discussed at a meeting of the Protestant Ministerial Association yesterday, and as a result it was decided to hold a public meeting at an early date to further consider the matter.

The discussion was introduced by Rev. Hugh Pedley, of Zion Congregational Church, Toronto, who declared the proposal both desirable and practicable. At first the Anglicans and Baptists might be excluded.

Rev. J. L. Gilmour, pastor of the First Baptist Church, said that from the point of view of the Baptists, union was not practicable at the present time. The question of the rite of baptism would prove an insuperable barrier.

The Church of England was represented by Rev. Dr. Symonds. He said that the question that now separated the Congregationalists, Presbyterians and Methodists was practically the same as separated the high and low church parties in the Church of England, viz., the apostolic succession of the ministry. He felt, however, that the Anglican Church had already made some steps towards union with the other denominations.

THE GERMS OF CATARRH.

Not only attack the passages of the head and throat, but finally reach the lungs and cause consumption. Nothing destroys catarrh so quickly as fragrant healing Catarrhozone, which relieves the cough, stops the discharge, takes all soreness from the throat. "I consider Catarrhozone has no equal as a cure for catarrh and lung trouble," writes Jas. E. Wetherell, of Brighton. "It cured me after many good doctors failed to even relieve my trouble." Catarrhozone can't fail to cure—it's guaranteed. Two months' treatment, $1.00; trial size 25c.

Politeness.

If those who are doubtful as to the correct course to pursue in any given situation will remember that even the wrong thing is overlooked if one is but absolutely polite in the doing of it their relief might be great.

A gentleness of demeanor and a courteous response or question can never be out of place. A man may wear a business suit of clothes to an evening wedding less noticeably than a truculent air of insolence. If he be perfectly well bred as far as behavior goes, it matters not so much what his outward garb, although by an unwritten law of social observance certain clothes are the correct thing for certain occasions.

Politeness is never wrong. Its practice goes nearly all the way toward the goal of the right thing in the right place. We hear of polite insolence, but insolence is never polite, and it is never, under any circumstances, polite to be insolent.

The easiest way to outwit a liar is to tell the truth.

Increased Seeding Area.

Winnipeg, May 12.—Reports from 90 points on lines of the C.P.R. in Manitoba and the Territories indicate that there will be an increase in seeded area of 12 1-3 per cent. None of the points reported on show a falling off, though in several of them the area is the same as last year. The Prince Albert and Manitoba and northwestern branches show the highest percentage of increase. Seeding has practically been completed in the whole of the district named, and the weather throughout is considered most favorable. In several districts the grain is well sprouted, and is beginning to show above ground. Despite the lateness of the season the farmers are well pleased with the prospects.

May Not Be So Bad.

Toronto, May 12.—C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, stated yesterday that he thought the official reports of the crops of spring wheat in Ontario would not be as disappointing as some that have already gone into circulation. He admitted, however, that the season was a bad one and the crops could hardly be expected to be as good. It will be next week before the official reports are received from correspondents.

Hanged Himself.

Port Colbourne, May 12.—George Zavitz, aged 65, a farmer living in Wainfleet, hanged himself early yesterday morning. He was found in a shed near the house. Mr. Zavitz has been in ill-health for some time.

When the Feet Ache.

When the feet begin to ache, even if you have on your most comfortable shoes, try something else for the rest of the day or for a few hours at least. It is quite essential to comfort to have the shoes fit. Tight shoes are not more uncomfortable than very loose ones, nor are they harder on the feet in the end, as the loose shoes rub and produce corns, etc. A change from either for a time will rest the feet.

HOME DECORATION.

The Artistic Purpose of Wall Paper. A Very Pleasing Design.

The choosing of a wall paper has become an important matter, for people in general have learned to recognize its true artistic purpose, which is to serve as a complement and background rather than as an independent feature of decoration; hence the increasing tendency toward quiet tones of color and unassertive designs. Of course there are exceptions in plenty to the rule, when wall paper has to be relied upon to provide the entire mural decoration—as, for example, in the case of staircase and passage walls or in rooms where there are few pictures or mural ornaments of any kind.

Then there are occasions on which the wall paper must be made to contribute a certain proportion of the salient decoration so as to give balance and completeness to the scheme of a room. While taking all this into account, however, the feeling still remains that for a room one has to live in one does not wish the wall paper to be the first item to strike the eye or to assert itself insistently. Its proper value is as a note in the general harmony, giving ever increasing pleasure the more completely it is felt to fulfill its vocation in this respect. A paper of much originality which answers all these considerations is the thistle down design shown. It has its main ornament based upon the growth of the thistle. The remaining surface of the paper is lightly powdered with detached floating heads of the thistle down.

Fuel economy is an important feature in a range. Almost as important as good cooking facilities. Every housewife wants to do good cooking but she doesn't want it to cost her too much in fuel. The good cooking qualities of the are enhanced by its great fuel economy. The big scuttle of coal of other style ranges is replaced in Imperial Oxford homes by a smaller scuttle less often used.

The fire-box is evenly proportioned to the size of the oven, so there is no more fire needed than the size of range demands—no waste heat. The arrangement of flues and drafts concentrate the heat in the stove—it doesn't lose itself up the chimney.

FOR CHEAP AND ARTISTIC WORK.

HIS MERMAID

By HENRY THOLENS

...Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure...

"By Jove, Jack, you must wait until I get my camera for that afternoon sun over the water. Aren't those clouds magnificent? The rocks on the beach, the woods over yonder, the waves almost too lazy to break as they come rolling up—I can see the picture now, printed deep down on sepia paper, fast to a prize at the amateur exhibition."

Jack laughed good naturedly.

"All right, old man; sail in, but hurry up," he said.

Five minutes later George Carrington had snatched his camera from the broad hallway of the Berkeley inn, snapped it at the waterscape, and he and Jack Grayson were off on a fishing trip. It was the last day of their vacation, spent wandering down the coast at random, seldom two nights in the same place.

The final day's sport over, Carrington sped back to the city in a train, camera, fishing kit and grip beside him, tanned and tired, but happy. He reached his apartments and thought of the last picture of clouds and rocks and sea. He must develop it forthwith, and he did.

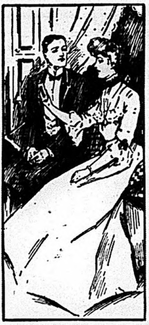
"A vacation of jolly good fun without a romance," he mused. "Nature, sunshine, fresh air, a good chum and good fishing; nothing more to be desired."

The film sank in the developing fluid, and in a few seconds the outlines of a coast scene appeared. First came the blotches of black, representing the high lights—clouds and the crests of waves. By an alchemy which never ceases to be marvelous all the delicate gradations of light and shade filled in until the perfect picture appeared.

Then occurred something which caused Carrington to gasp in astonishment and almost drop the developing tray, for in the center of the picture, head and shoulders visible above the crest of a breaker, appeared the form of a young woman, like a mermaid arising out of the sea. There was a saucy tilt to the laughing face, and the bare arms were outstretched as a beckoning mermaid's might have been. Carrington knew that no human being had been in that expanse of sea while he was on the beach.

With almost feverish haste he made a print from the film. There was no doubt about it. It was no freak effect.

The girl's face, which he had never seen before, seemed to mock him in mystery. Clad in a dainty bathing suit, she fitted into the picture as if an artist hand had posed her there, a dainty bit of indisputably human life that rounded out the scene and perfected it. Fate had tossed a romance into his vacation after all.



SILENT AND BEWILDERED, SHE STUDIED THE PHOTOGRAPH.

He recalled the events of the day. Grayson and he had reached the inn just before noon, tired by a tramp of a half dozen miles from a fishing station farther down the coast. Dinner, then a rest; the snapshot and the final two hours' fishing that closed the fortnight's holiday, leaving the camera in the hotel office beside his grip while he was gone; then supper and the train back to the city. All this was clear enough. But how did the mermaid creep into his camera? Carrington stared at the laughing face in blank perplexity. Only one point was certain. It was the prettiest face he had ever seen in his life.

A paper he had recently read in a scientific journal flashed across his mind. It dealt with the photographic discovery of a new light ray invisible to the eye, but duly recorded on the peculiarly sensitized photographic plate.

"Nonsense!" he promptly said. "That's a flesh and blood girl. She has the face of an angel, but angels don't wear bathing suits with all those frills."

Next day he jumped on a train and was whisked to Berkeley inn. He sought the manager and showed him the picture.

"You recognize her, of course?" Carrington asked, with a careless air.

"I should say I did," said the manager, with a smile. "That's the handsome one of the Langford girls, who were here a month with their aunt. Went back to town only a couple of days ago. Splendid picture. Taken right here on the beach, too," he added in a quizzical tone. "I didn't know you were acquainted."

Carrington rejected the conversational tender. "Yes; I think it's pretty good," was all he said. But just before train time he sought the porter and casually asked him the destination of the Langford baggage two days before.

"New York, sah," came the ready response. "Thank you, sah."

The journey had not been altogether in vain. And while other passengers on that train chatted gayly together or read their newspapers or watched the panorama of forest and farmland and the twinkling lights of villages there was one young man whose eyes and attention did not wander from a photograph he held before him.

Three months later he was at one of Mrs. Bloomer Billings' receptions. He did not know Mrs. Bloomer Billings, but he had not been idle during the autumn months, and without being a Sherlock Holmes he decided that he must get an invitation, and he did. Mrs. Billings was a literary lady whose assemblages were diverse and often astonishing. Artists and writers attended them, musicians and player folk, with a leavening of accepted "society." They were truly heterogeneous gatherings.

Eagerly Carrington scanned the rooms. A long haired violinist had just finished a Beethoven sonata, and there was much clapping of hands. Carrington was presented to Mrs. Billings, who was surrounded by a bevy of pretty girls. A moment of gallant conversation, and then his face lit up with a sudden joy that caused his hostess to look up in politely suppressed wonder. In that group, now in a setting of pink and white, but with the same laughing face of the glistening beach and wave, stood his lady of the sea.

An hour later they sat together on a window seat listening to a prima donna's song.

"I have a picture I would like you to see, Miss Langford," he said diffidently. He took the photograph from his pocketbook and showed it to her.

She gave a little startled cry, and the unmounted print fell from her hand.

"Why—why, you were at Berkeley inn!" she exclaimed.

"I took a picture of the beach, but not that one," he said slowly. "And yet that is the one I found in my camera."

Their eyes met for an instant, and the girl flushed crimson. Silent and bewildered, she studied the photograph. Suddenly she broke into the laugh of the water witch again.

"No less surprising was the picture my sister took of me," she exclaimed excitedly. "The water and rocks were lovely, but I was nowhere to be seen!"

"Now the mystery is no longer mysterious!" laughed Carrington. "It's plain enough. I saw another camera in the hotel office, but never thought until this instant that I might have picked up the wrong one. Your sister took a picture with my camera, and I took one with hers." Suddenly he became silent and after a moment or two stammered, "I—I suppose this is your sister's property, but may I not keep it?"

The girl tossed her head and smiled in mock hesitation. She had been turning the picture around and around in her hand. Then the smile and the warm blood left her face in company, and there was an almost imperceptible tremor of the long dark eyelashes. On the back of the photograph she had read:

"My mermaid."

Again their eyes met, but hers were quickly withdrawn. Her hesitation was real now.

Both were silent another moment. He sat eagerly, expectantly. Her eyes were fixed on the floor, and as she slowly extended her hand and placed the picture in his he felt the warm touch of her finger tips.

Cured her husband.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

Hence, Mynheer Joe finds himself the synosure for many eyes, and he is annoyed at the interest people seem to take in him, but that is the fate of any one whom fortune destines to move on a higher plane than his fellows, and he must get used to it.

Molly on her part, believing this attention is caused simply because the people have learned that he is the sole survivor of the massacre at Khartoom, is proud of the fact that he is her friend—pleased to think he is an American, and thinks more of him than ever.

He gives no hint of what is to come off in the morning, for it is not his way to boast, and he can keep a secret. Indeed, to see how merry he appears no one would think he has anything on his mind. Those who are in the secret are amazed, and not a few make up their minds that the whole report may be a canard, for they cannot imagine a man who expects to meet the Russian baron at sunrise could be so cool about it.

The evening passes, and finally Mynheer Joe bids the ladies good night. Mr. Grimes sees that he retires to his room to get a few hours sleep. At the proper time Grimes is up and arouses both Mynheer Joe and Sandy.

Together they quietly repair to the dining-room of the hotel. A cook has been bribed to be up and hands them each a cup of coffee, than which no better can be had in the world than right there at Shepherd's in Cairo.

This opens their eyes and makes them feel as though they have a warmth next their heart. Outside the poor moon hangs up in the sky, but her pale light already gives way to the coming of early morning. Soon the gathering hosts of light will rush up from their stronghold below the eastern horizon, when the rout of the night king will be complete.

Just about this hour, Molly Tanner, dressed in a white wrapper and with her hair showering down her back, enters her father's room by means of the connecting door.

"Who's that?" asks Tanner, sitting upright, his night-cap hanging over his ear.

"Only Molly, father," comes the reply.

"What the dickens are you wandering around for? Go back to your bed, child," he says softly, for his love toward his daughter is very great.

"It is early morning. You can hear the birds twittering out in the trees. I was awake, and, catching voices, went to the window. Below I saw three men move toward the river. I am almost positive I recognized one of their voices."

"Well," grunts the orator, getting ready to resume his nap, "what of that, Molly?"

"But it was Mynheer Joe."

"Eh?"

"And I heard one of the others—I am sure it must have been Mr. Grimes—say: 'I will examine the swords. He shall have no advantage.'"

Tanner grunts again.

"Then the report was true."

"What report, governor?"

"Never mind, child. It doesn't concern you. Go back and get your beauty nap," he growls.

"Not until you tell me what this means. Three men leave the hotel at daybreak. They talk about swords. What is about to happen?"

"Bah! Some officers on a lark, perhaps."

"You know better, governor. You betrayed yourself when you said the report was true. What report? It concerns Mynheer Joe. I remembered now how strangely they looked at him last night."

"Confound it, child, you are a little tyrant and I a bulldozed old man! Listen, then. It was reported that Mynheer Joe and the baron were to fight a duel about sunrise this morning."

Molly covers her face with her hands and utters a low cry. Then she eagerly questions Tanner and learns all that he knows, until at last he stubbornly drops back on his pillow and feigns sleep: so there is nothing for the wretched girl to do but to return to her room, and, sitting there, await the rising of the sun, with a dumb feeling of pain at her heart.

CHAPTER XIII.

When Mynheer Joe and his two friends, having secured a cup of coffee and a bite of breakfast at the hotel, pass down toward the river, the very first gleam of daylight is abroad, though as yet kept in the background by the moon, which shines on the land of the Pharaohs with a peculiarly dull radiance, unlike the flood of light poured upon the earth when the Queen of Night is at her full.

Knowing the way they experienced no trouble in reaching the point where they have been informed the two boats will be in readiness. This time there is no attempt made to rob them. Perhaps the rascally Arabs who prowl about the narrow streets during the night looking for victims have retired, like beasts of prey, to their various dens at the approach of dawn. At any rate, the three men meet with no adventure as they advance to the Nile.

"Here we are," says Sandy, when they bring up at the designated spot.

Sure enough, two boats are seen upon the water, both of a trim model. Voices can be heard, as though the sailors are on deck, and all is in readiness for casting off.

Sandy takes one look into the face of Mynheer Joe as they come upon the boats. It is enough to reassure him, for the man does not show the least emotion. If he were made of ice Mynheer Joe could not take the situation in a cooler manner than he does. This satisfied the newspaper man that the Russian duelist is about to be surprised. He may have had plain sailing in past affairs of the kind, but when he ran across Mynheer Joe he certainly struck a snag, that now gives promise of wrecking his bark.

Mr. Grimes hails, and a voice answers—the voice of the French officer who met him as the baron's representative. They are to take the dahabeah nearer the shore. The others have just arrived, and if all their party can be counted, there is nothing to be done but to push off and get up sail.

"Captain, one question," says Mr. Grimes.

"At your service," replies the polite Gaul, whom they can just indistinctly see standing on the roof of the second cabin in a brave attitude, such as French officers delight to assume, although those of other nations are not far behind them in this respect.

"You spoke of a doctor—the family doctor of the baron, who understands his constitution and knows how to treat him. Pardon me, but is he on board with you?"

Silence follows this cool question, as though the Frenchman has been staggered by it; then, in his courteous way—he would be polite if thrusting his sword through an enemy—the officer of the Khedive replies:

"He is with us, sir."

"Good. Then we consent to start," says Grimes, conscious that the baron's ears have caught all that has been uttered, and willing to let him know that there is no such thing as "scare" in their party.

No more is said.

Orders are given and the two Nile river boats gotten under way with the rapidity that distinguishes the peculiar model common to this country. Mynheer Joe clasps the hand of his second and gives it a squeeze.

"Thanks, my good friend. That dig is worth something to me, you understand," he says in his quiet but earnest way.

"Of course, sir. You know, my interests are bound up in yours. I am determined that this story shall end in the proper way, and it can hardly do that if the baron spits you on his sword like a fowl before the fire. I have confidence in you, Mynheer Joe," replied Mr. Grimes.

No more is said just now, for the boat is being gotten under way. The breeze chances to be favorable, and there is more of it than usual at this time in the morning. It comes from a quarter not far removed from northeast, and the three-cornered sails of the dahabeah are peculiarly fitted to catch a quartering current of air.

Both boats are speedily rushing through the water at a lively rate. The situation is rather romantic, with the moon nearly overhead, day beginning to break in the east, and the great sails of the rival boats catching the fresh breeze that has worked in across the intervening delta of the Nile, from the Mediterranean.

Was ever a duel fought under similar circumstances as those which promise to mark this one? Probably not.

The two boats seem to be about equal in point of speed, as they continue to keep the same relative distance apart. Perhaps, in a genuine race, with a wind like this, their craft could gain the advantage by "blanketing" the other and cutting off her supply of wind, but this will not pay under present conditions.

Although Joe has made the conditions of the duel, being the challenged party, he really leaves the selection of the ground to his rival, having only stipulated that it shall be among the hills that lie above Cairo.

Sandy and Mr. Grimes stand together near the bow of the little vessel, listening to the music of the water as her prow cuts through the tide of the Nile like a knife, curling the foamy suds on either side and hurling them back in rolls.

Both of them are duly impressed with all their romantic surroundings, and the war correspondent is jotting down ideas in his mind that will be called upon to supply space in some forthcoming article. At the same time it is evident he has something worrying him.

Mr. Grimes is quick to notice such things, as he has made a business of reading faces.

"What's wrong, Sandy?" he asks, abruptly, as he removes his cigar to flip the ashes from the end with his dexterous little finger.

"Who said so? How did you know? Hang it, Mr. Grimes, you read men as I would books. You may have buried yourself out in Colorado—you took care to study human nature."

"Then you confess you are bothered, my boy?" continued the other, steadily.

"Well, yes, I've been wondering. You see, we know this baron is a sly schemer?"

"Admitted."

"And not to be trusted out of sight."

"Ordinarily I should not dare to put my life in his charge. You're right, Sandy.

"Well, we've let him select the spot for the affair. How can we tell but what he may spring some shrewd game on us. Can you promise that yonder dahabeah has not half a dozen hired assassins on board, ready to annihilate us in case the baron feels the necessity?"

Mr. Grimes laughs, and there is a reassurance in his manner that speaks for itself.

"Sandy, give over worrying. I believe the strongest proof we can have that the means no treachery is his astounding confidence in himself. He has fought duels before and believes himself invincible. Hence it seems a picnic, a walk-over to him."

"Very true, very true, sir, but you must admit there is a chance that—"

"Always 'that,' my boy, but you also forget something of interest—ourselves! 'What are we here for?' as a member from the South asked in a republican convention? If Joe can take care of the baron, surely we will be able to look after his friends be they two in number or a dozen."

PUSHING AHEAD....

Everyday finds us steadily advancing and requiring more and more men to do our work.

And we get the workmen—workmen of the best type, too. Just the kind you want to do your work, that's the style of men we are looking for.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

DUELING IN GERMANY.

It Is a Custom Firmly Established Among the Students.

In every German university there is still dueling, and there will be as long as German universities exist. Each has its quota of fighting clubs, which correspond to our own secret societies. Every student is anxious to be invited to join one of these clubs, and, having been initiated, it is not long before he is assigned to a duel. The members of these various organizations are distinguished by their colored bands and caps, as our fraternity men are by their Greek letter badges. The most aristocratic of the fighting corps are the Borussia at Bonn, to which all the Hohenzollern princes belong, and the Saxo-Borussia at Heidelberg, of which most of the German princes outside of the Hohenzollerns are members. Other prominent fighting corps are the Rhenania of the University of Wurtzburg, Normania of Berlin, Franconia of Munich and the famous corps of Hannovera, in which Bismarck was a famous fighter, of Gottingen. Every corps has its own officers, its own laws, rules, regulations, but all are bound by a universal "code of honor."

The customs and ceremonials incident to these student duels are queer and peculiarly fascinating, the costumes and fighting attire unique and interesting. The duels are of two kinds—the one an "honor duel," where one student has insulted another, and honor has to be satisfied by a little blood letting, but these are often not infrequently the result of purpose rather than of actual insult just for the sake of a little fighting. The German student, like Pat, is often "spoiling for a fight." The other kind of duel is generally a more serious matter and is known as "by agreement." It is by a challenge from one corps to another and partakes of the tournament order. A list of dates is drawn up, and on a certain day of each week a member of the one corps meets a member of the other for "die mensur."—Fritz Morris in Illustrated Sporting News.

EASTER EGGS.

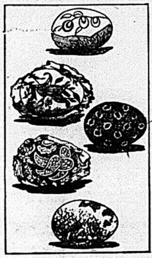
How Little Girls Used to Color Them Years Ago in Old Virginia.

Easter eggs were a great thing with us little girls in Virginia. I do not remember whether there was any talk of new Easter clothes; but, then, that would have been in our eyes a small matter in comparison. The prettiest ones by far were dyed with calico. Get the calico either small figured, wee sprigs of flowers and the like, or with a flower large enough to decorate the whole side of the egg. A piece about 4 by 7 inches will serve the purpose or two pieces 3½ by 4 inches, or larger if the figures require it in order to be well placed upon the egg.

In covering put the right side of the goods to the egg, and tack or pin the calico tight over it, and follow this tacking with close sewing (see illustration), drawing the calico tight and as smooth as possible, especially where the figures are, as you wish the figures to lie flat against the egg, and whole figures, if possible, rather than parts. Outside of these smooth places the plaits and ridges (resembling the spurs of a mountain range) need extra stitches and extra tightening to adjust them right.

We were advised to use calicoes which faded easily, but that was exaggerated advice. The tolerably fast dark colors succeed better. The brown, black or scarlet of good, fast colored prints scarcely color the egg at all. Purple seems desirable and dark blue. Deep pink roses often come out beautiful. A white or very light ground is generally best.

Prints not intended to be washed do well. For instance, the cheaper draperies, like thick silkoline and the thin furniture coverings, especially old fashioned "curtain calico" (lately fashionable again), which has a sort of varnished glaze.



EASTER EGGS.

We boiled our eggs (thus sewed in their covers) in weakened lye, but I, living in town, boil them in washing soda and water, a lump the size of a walnut to a quart or less, which boils down generally to still less. Put the eggs into the boiling mixture at any time, only be sure that the soda is fully dissolved. Let them boil nearly half an hour. If your calico is, however, of somewhat fast colors, an hour may be better. The danger is of boiling off the pictures which you have boiled on. The fast colors will stand a good deal of boiling, getting prettier and prettier, whereas the less fast may soon begin to fade out of the egg as well as out of the covering.

Use a spoon in handling the wet egg. Soda or lye eats the skin. Do not boil many at once in a can if there is danger of the colors running much. The picture shows eggs wrapped in cloth and also after the cloth is removed.

If all this is too much for the family patience, there is another entertaining way. Get some of the ready prepared egg dyes, to be used cold. Boil the eggs hard and after they are thoroughly cooled mark words or figures upon them with melted wax. Then dye and afterward carefully tear off the wax.

Do not put away lye very long in a bottle, as it eats it thin and brittle, and between broken glass and biting lye you could have a mishap from which you might get real injury.—Margaret Meredith in Household.

Fashion's Echoes.

Buttons of every description are now the fashion, and you may wear them on any part of the costume, from the hem of your gown to the crown of your hat.

Boas of all sorts are a fad. The Paris way to wear them is wound twice around the neck and hanging down the back instead of in front. A lovely one is of valenciennes fulled on to white satin ribbon.

When gathers appear on skirts they are almost flat and simply define the least suggestion of a drawing together of the material. The cut is in every way responsible for the closeness and clinging effect so often obtained in Parisian skirts.

Colored muslin aprons with ribbons to match for waitresses are the last fad in swell New York houses. It comes from London.

Basques rather than boleros are now the thing.

The long shoulder line predominates on all the new gowns.

Not for a long time have the separate coats, quite distinct from the gown, been so fashionable.

The becoming and pretty Japanese puff is the latest smart thing in hairdressing.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more pone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

A Sure Cure for Headaches.—Billious headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralising the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedelia."

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kimloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

PETERBORO REVIEW HANDS OUT A WARM LINE OF TALK TO THE OPPONENTS OF THE TRENTON TERMINUS.

(Peterboro Review.)

The opponents of the opening of the Trent waterway are now throwing off their masks. The Toronto Star, returning to its attack, thus owns the interested source of its inspired misrepresentations. It says:

"Unless Peterboro men who are most interested, put a curb on Mr. J. A. C. Culverwell, of Peterboro, the Burleigh Falls Power Managing Director, who is travelling all over Ontario, riding roughshod over their Trenton outlet and new reservoir conversation schemes, people will accept Mr. Culverwell's assertions, and there will be a scandal."

Now, in the first place, Mr. Culverwell is not a Peterboro man and in no sense represents public opinion here. We believe that he has recently rented a room in town, in order to afford him an excuse for giving an address that will delude those who take him at his word. He has an interest in the Burleigh Falls water power, and as an adventurous speculator is endeavoring to boom it for his private gain, no matter who may suffer. His quarrel with the Peterboro and Lakefield power owners is because by regulating, not increasing the superabundant supply of water they would improve their power and therefore delay the date when it will become necessary to draw power from Burleigh Falls. These power owners cannot hurt him any more at Burleigh than the lamb could muddy the water for the wolf since they are lower down the stream, so he can have no complaint against them in that respect.

The attack made by Mr. Culverwell on Mr. R. B. Rogers, superintending engineer of the Trent Canal, is a dastardly calumny. The sole crime of Mr. Rogers is that by the instructions of his department, he secured water power on the Trent River, on the route of the canal, to prevent it from falling into the hands of adventurers, who were planning to fleece the people of Canada. This is the reason why Mr. Culverwell suddenly joined with the Port Hope people to obstruct the completion of the work on the Trent waterway. His misrepresentations regarding the water power on the Trent River, are in keeping with his design. As a specimen he "eliminates" the head of power, when in two instances there is a partial diversion, as if the head would be diminished by a change in location, or the fall from Rice Lake to the Bay of Quinte would not remain the same, even if an elbow were cut through. At the same time he makes little of the diversion of the Trent River from its ancient bed, by a cut to Port Hope, through this would affect all the power, public and private, on the Trent, and ensure a plentiful crop of claims for damages, which could not be resisted.

In all his lucubration Mr. Culverwell dwells with admiration on the enlargement of the Erie canal. Has he some affiliation also with that project, that he is opposing the completion of the Trent waterway, planned to avoid the Erie, and is working for the substitution of a cut to Port Hope so as to afford a feeder for the Erie canal at Oswego!

These schemers talk as if the alternative lay between Trenton and Port Hope. There is no necessity for a barge going into Trenton, any more than into Barrie, Orillia or Lindsay, for the route does not pass through neither of these towns, though they all have short and direct communication with it.

Another mistake of these gentlemen is to talk as though it were proposed to enter Lake Ontario either at Trenton or Port Hope. The river Trent does not fall into Lake Ontario, but into the Bay of Quinte, and this long sheltered inlet connects with the St. Lawrence river, thus avoiding the dangers of the lake, and its facilities for diverting the harvests of western Canada from our own ports to New York, via the Erie Canal.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

Speaking of the above play, which comes to the Carman to-night, the Ottawa Journal said: "A really beautiful play is The Tyranny of Tears, with Mr. Reeves-Smith in the stellar role who opened a two nights' engagement at the Russell theatre last evening. The play gets its name from the copious tears with which a young wife always managed to get her own way with her husband until the climax when he asserted his rights and finally brought his wife to time and made a happy ending to the play. The lines are resplendent with humor of the purest and most wholesome kind."

Cement Works Notes.

Work is progressing rapidly at the cement works, at Point Ann, which at present is a hive of industry.

To-day ten cars of machinery were delivered at the works, six coming from Glasgow, Scotland; two from Canton, Ohio; one from Hamilton and one from a local foundry of this city. Word has been received at the head office that the steel erectors would be on hand early next week to erect the steel which is now nearly all on the grounds.

Yesterday was pay day at the office in the city and upwards of $2,000 was paid out in wages.

HIS FAME CONTINENTAL.

HIGH PRAISE FOR MR. WILLIAM JOHNSON BY A CORRESPONDENT OF THE GUARDIAN.

Writing to the Christian Guardian from Beirut, Syria, Rev. Theo. J. Parr, one of the delegates to the World's Sunday School Convention at Jerusalem, says:

"On Easter Sunday, the Sunday School on the ship was in charge of Mr. William Johnson, of Belleville, than whom Canada possesses no better Sunday School superintendent. His reputation is continental, and well was that reputation sustained in his management of the session of the pilgrim Sunday School. There was the main school, fore and aft, and the following departments were in operation: Primary, Young Ladies', Home, Teacher training, Mexican, each having a superintendent and necessary staff of teachers. The superintendent, as we have stated, was from Canada, the assistant superintendent from Oklahoma. The welcome committee was from Ontario, Manitoba, Kentucky, Kansas and Ohio. The school was addressed by Agathanghelos, of Macedonia, Bishop of the Greek Orthodox Church. There were 557 present, and the collection was between $60 and $70, in behalf of the International work, the coins in the offering representing Greece, France, Germany, Italy, Mexico, Portugal, Turkey, besides Canada, the United States and Great Britain. In the officiary and teaching staff there were represented twenty-two States of the Union, and five provinces of Canada, as well as Syria and Mexico. In one class, taught by a Canadian preacher, there were ten present, and each one hailed from a different state or province. These unique facts will show the cosmopolitan character of modern Sunday School work, and the tremendous possibilities that lie before the forces of the Lord."

THE LAST SAD RITES.

ALL THAT WAS MORTAL OF THE LATE JOHN G. FROST LAID AWAY THIS AFTERNOON.

Citizens of all walks of life were in attendance at the obsequies of the late Mr. John G. Frost, which took place this afternoon from the family residence on Albert street. The funeral was conducted by the I.O.O.F., and a large number of the brethren were in attendance. After services at the house, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Crothers, Pastor of Bridge St. Church, and the Belleville Lodge, I.O.O.F., the cortege was formed, headed by the I.O.O.F. band. It consisted of the members of the two Oddfellows' lodges, members of other societies and the City Council and city officials. The bearers were members of Belleville Lodge, No. 81, namely, Bros. J. W. Walker, C. H. Vermilyea, R. P. Hamilton, W. J. Magrath, L. C. Pascoe and Rev. A. L. Geen. A large number of beautiful floral designs were contributed by relatives and friends. The remains were interred in the cemetery here, the services at the grave being conducted by Rev. A. L. Geen, past grand chaplain of the I.O.O.F.

Armstrong vs. Canada Corundum Company.—An action by the plaintiff for the specific performance under an alleged agreement for delivery of stock in a mining company which was being formed. After much evidence had been submitted the case was dismissed. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff; A. B. Aylsworth, K.C., for the defendants.

Couselman vs. Artis.—The parties reside in the northern portion of the county. Action by plaintiff for damages for breach of contract under which the plaintiff's son went to work for the defendant. Verdict for plaintiff for $250 and full costs. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff; Northrup & Roberts for the defendant.

Graham vs. Manchester Liners.—An action brought by Mr. R. J. Graham against the defendants for damages for loss on poultry shipped to the Old Country. It appears that the plaintiff shipped a large consignment of turkeys to England for the Christmas trade, but owing for the Christmas trade, and alleges that owing to the late starting of the boat they did not arrive in time for the holiday and in consequence had to be sold at a loss. The defence claim that the poultry were not up to the mark. F. E. O'Flynn for the plaintiff; Porter & Carnew for the defendants.

After the evidence had been submitted His Lordship gave judgment in favor of the defendants.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

RUSSIANS BLOW UP DOCKS AND PIERS AT PORT DALNY.

London Despatch Says the Czar is Greatly Depressed and Wants to Abdicate

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Viceroy Alexieff has telegraphed to the Czar announcing that the Russians have blown up the docks and piers at Port Dalny, presumably to render more difficult a Japanese landing at that point.

Tokio, May 12.—Later details of the Russian attack on Anju last Tuesday state that the fighting lasted all day. Japanese reinforcements arrived from Ping Yang at 10 o'clock in the forenoon. The Russians retired Wednesday morning at the approach of further Japanese reinforcements from Kosen. The Japanese are pressing the Russians in the direction of Kai Chong.

Liverpool, May 12.—The Post to-day asserts that a report has reached London from a high quarter in St. Petersburg that the Czar is suffering from great mental depression and is desirous of abdicating.

Tokio, May 12. — Official inquiry shows that Viceroy Alexieff's report that railway communication with Port Arthur has been restored since Monday is untrue.

THE FUEL GAS QUESTION.

CITIZEN THINKS COUNCIL SHOULD HANDLE GAS STOVES AND ALSO PROVIDE "QUARTER IN THE SLOT" METERS.

Talking on the fuel gas question a citizen said this morning: "I think with Ald. Sinclair that the city should handle gas stoves and sell them on the instalment plan to its customers. If the municipality is in the business it should handle all the side lines. That, I think, is the only way the gas works can be made a success in this city. Then again, there is the question of meters. The city must provide them, anyhow, and while they are about it they should get the "quarter in the slot" kind, which would result in the gas bills being paid in advance and make it easier for plenty who might find it inconvenient to pay a moderate tax bill at the end of a quarter. For my part, I know no harder bill to pay than a gas bill, except, possibly, a whiskey bill."

The gas is at present being installed on Sinclair street, and there are, we are told, applications from people living on many other thoroughfares.

It is amusing how we live and learn. Some elegant housekeepers feel when using Lessive Phenix they still require the soap suds on their hands, and mix in some soap simply from habit. No need of it. Lessive Phenix does all the cleaning. Soap leaves everything dirty until it is washed out by work, hard work. Lessive Phenix makes hard water soft and soft water softer. 10,11,12

S. H. TEACHERS' CONVENTION

WHAT WAS DONE AT THIS MORNING'S SESSION—NEXT YEAR'S OFFICERS.

The South Hastings Teachers' Institute convened in the City Hall at 10 o'clock this morning, President J. Johnston, I.P.S., in the chair.

As the first business was the election of officers for the ensuing year a nominating committee, consisting of Messrs. Hicks, Mott, Simpkins and Armistead, was appointed. The report of the committee was as follows:

President—J. Johnston, I.P.S.
Vice-Pres.—Chas. Simpkins.
Sec.-Treas.—S. A. Gardner.
Com. of Management—S. A. Gardner, S. F. Armistead, L. Ross, W. H. Nobes, O. S. Hicks.
Delegates to the Ontario Educational Association. — Miss M. A. Northcott, Mr. W. Mott.

Mr. S. F. Armistead and Mr. Lester Ross, delegates to O. E. Association, gave excellent reports of the doings of that association.

A vote of thanks, proposed by Mr. P. W. Fairman and seconded by Mr. Barragar, was given the delegates for their very full and complete reports.

The next subject was "Junior Reading with a Class," by Miss Laura Phelps, teacher of junior classes at Canifton Road School. The class consisted of eight bright pupils, George Wall, May Macdonald, Edna Bowen, Pearl Henderson, Elsie Stapley, Alta Dennis, Edith Bulpit and Grace Gurney. Their reading was all that could be desired, being distinct, expressive and animated, doing credit to themselves and their teacher.

A hearty vote of thanks was given Miss Phelps and her class, on motion of S. A. Gardner, seconded by Mr. Luck, of Deseronto.

Miss White, teacher of Third Class, Trenton, read an excellent paper, which was full of very valuable suggestions on teaching. Illustrations were taken from the readers, and she was listened to with close attention. The applause which followed showed how fully her paper was appreciated.

The report of the committee appointed at the last convention on "Primary Readers," was as follows:

To the President, officers and members of the South Hastings Teachers' Association:

Your committee appointed to examine the Primers submitted by the Canada Publishing Company and the Morang Publishing Company beg leave to report as follows:

I. We have made a careful examination of both books and consider neither fill the requirements for Primary Classes.

II. We would advise that the books now in use be continued.

III. But if forced to change, we prefer Morang's book.

STAGE HORSES RAN AWAY.

LIVELY TIME ON UPPER BRIDGE THIS MORNING.

The horses attached to the Tweed stage ran away this morning and for a few minutes made things somewhat lively. They ran from Front street over the upper bridge, evidently heading for home. In the centre of the bridge the stage was upset, and the animals were captured. It was fortunate that there were no passengers aboard at the time or a serious accident might have resulted. Some glass was broken in the conveyance, and the tongue was also broken.

Toronto, May 12.—To the Penitentiary at Kingston:

Frank Duffy, age 26, 10 years.

Edward Duffy, age 19, 7 years.

Thomas Whitesides, age 20, 7 years.

The above sentences were passod on the three young men who were found guilty of outraging Mrs. Barrible. Although the jury asked for leniency, Justice Anglin could find no excuse for granting it, on account of the evidence. His Lordship, in sentencing the prisoners, said he could not conceive a more gross or brutal crime. This was Justice Anglin's first criminal trial, and those who come before him can form an idea as to the penalties he will impose.

In the Sessions Court, William Bray, who was charged with criminally assaulting Lizzie Smith, a 12-year-old girl, was honorably acquitted.

RELIES ON FREE TRADE

Sir Robert Griffen Attacks British Zollverein As a Dream.

Argues That Commercial Union Does Not at the Best Tend Towards Political Union—Arnold White Complains of the Unfair Burden Imposed Upon Motherland in the Defence of the Colonies—Coming to Canada.

London, May 12.—(C.A.P.)—In the last two essays added to his "Economic Enquiries and Studies," Sir Robert Griffen attacks as a dream the project of a British zollverein, arguing that commercial union does not at the best tend towards political union. He argues it is better to rely still upon free trade and the coloniesl abandoning what he admits to be their present favor for preference, and to improve and render more intimate the Empire communications and monetary union, on which rests propsperity.

An Unfair Burden.

London, May 12.—(C.A.P.)—At a banquet of the Navy League, Sir John A. Cockburn, proposing success to the league, spoke of the important work Sir R. H. Wyatt was achieving for the colonies. The number of foreigners and Lascars employed in the British mercantile marine had increased from 6 per cent. in 1860 to 45 per cent. in 1902. He hoped the league would use its influence to secure a larger proportion of British subjects.

Arnold White, speaking at the annual meeting in the afternoon, complained of the unfair burden imposed on the Motherland in the defence of the colonies, and urged the Navy League to establish an intelligence department. Balfour's pmamphlet showed that on the navy alone depended the country's existence. The Navy League Committees had forgotten the fact. Sir E. Freemantle said he would not remain in the league if disrespectful remarks like Mr. White's could be made at meeting concerning those holding important offices under the Crown. The annual report showed that the league had gained strength in the colonies, but had not made relative progress at home.

Canada Will Not.

Ottawa, May 12.—(Globe Special).—The United States Government, through the British Ambassador at Washington, have again expressed a wish to unite with the Canadian Government in a measure for the protection of salmon fisheries on the coast of British Columbia. They want to assist in the erection and maintenance of a new hatchery in British Columbia. The feeling here against granting the request is very strong.

BLOWING UP THE SHIPS

Russians Despair of Ability to Defend Port Arthur.

Explosions Heard Near the Beleaguered "Gibraltar of the East"—Admiral Togo Thinks Russians Are Destroying Battleships Prior to the Evacuation of the Fortress—Spiridonoff, a Russian Hero, Gets Train of Ammunition Into Port Arthur—Progress of the War.

Tokio, May 12.—Admiral Togo reports that since May 6 many explosions have been heard coming from the vicinity of Port Arthur, but their cause has not been ascertained. The impression here is that the Russians, despairing of their ability to defend Port Arthur, are destroying their ships before evacuating the place.

Unofficial Report.

Che Foo, May 12.—An unofficial Japanese despatch has been received here to the effect that the Russians have destroyed their fleet in Port Arthur.

To Cut Off Vladivostock.

Possiet, Siberia, May 12.—A Japanese torpedo boat made its appearance in the roadstead two days ago, and suspicious lights have been seen. Everything is quiet here, but all is in readiness to meet any landing of the enemy, whose probable purpose is the cutting off of Vladivostock.

Spiridonoff a Russian Hero.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Gen. Kuropatkin has telegraphed to the Emperor as follows:

"Reconnaisances between Salitszaipudza and Fengwangcheng failed to discover Japanese troops.

"A Japanese column of considerable strength advanced from Fengwangcheng May 8 in the direction of Haicheng.

"Pulancheng station is occupied by our frontier guards, and the damage to the railway by the Japanese as far as Sanchilipu has been repaired. All the work was carried out under the supervision of Lieut.-Col. Spiridonoff of the 4th Railway Battalion. This gallant officer undertook to get through to Port Arthur a train full of ammunition, which arrived at Liaoyang after the landing of the Japanese at Pitsewo. Every preparation was made to blow up the train in case of necessity in order to prevent its falling into the hands of the Japanese.

"The task was carried out and the self-sacrifice of the men of the 4th Railway Battalion was crowned with complete success.

"Shortly after 4 o'clock in the afternoon the train arrived at Jinchau station, forty miles from Port Arthur, where it was handed over to Gen. Jokoff, who immediately despatched it under proper protection to Port Arthur. Lieut.-Col. Spiridonoff returned on a locomotive.

"After landing at Pitsewo, the Japanese began marching toward Kinchau. On the night of May 10 their forward guard, consisting of about two regiments of infantry, passed the night on the heights above Sanchilipu, on the railroad about 60 miles from Port Arthur.

"About thirty Japanese vessels are lying north of Cape Terminal, on the east coast of the Liaotung Peninsula, below Pitsewo."

Japs on the Move.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Lieut.-Gen. Sakharoff sent a despatch to the general staff yesterday, communicating a report of Lieut.-Gen. Zassalitch, dated May 10, as follows:

"Troops which appeared to be a division of the Japanese guard have been advancing for the last two days from Fengwangcheng westerly in the direction of Haicheng.

"It is reported that a Japanese force consisting of about a division of infantry intended to march on Saimadza with 40 guns and 1,500 cavalry.

"From reports received from the River Dazaw, it may be concluded that the Japanese army is concentrated in three groups, the two southern groups being on the lower section of the River Tayang at Hondouhanya, on the left bank of the river at Dayan and at Donamyo, in the same locality, and the northern group opposite Habalina, on the road from Fengwangcheng to Saliddza, 14 to 16 miles from Fengwangcheng.

"It is difficult to obtain information from the local Chinese. In one case we discovered that the Chinese had warned Japanese troops of an ambuscade which had been arranged by Cossacks."

Small Brush at Anju.

Tokio, May 12.—Details of the attack by Russian Cossacks at Anju, Corea, Tuesday morning, were received here yesterday. The Russian cavalry numbered 200 men, and their attack was spirited. The Japanese garrison resisted stoutly and succeeded in driving off the enemy. Later, Japanese reinforcements arrived from Pingyang.

Indications point to the presence of a Russian force at Yongbyang, between Anju and Unsan, but it probably is small. The Japanese report of the fighting at Anju does not give any losses.

Linger Near Newchwang.

Shanhaikwan, May 12.—The Russian troops are lingering in the vicinity of Newchwang, and some of them are returning to the city. The Russian artillery is ready for instant transportation. The reports of fighting at Liaoyang have not been confirmed. It is reported here that the Japanese are creeping closely to Port Arthur.

Battle of the Yalu Death List.

Antung, May 12.—An official report of casualties at the battle of the Yalu River shows a list of thirty-one Japanese officers killed and twenty-nine wounded, one hundred and sixty men killed and six hundred and sixty-six wounded. On the Russian side, 1,262 men were found dead on the field, four hundred and seventy-five wounded are in Japanese hospital, and one hundred and thirty-eight men were taken prisoners. Most of the Russians who surrendered at Hamatan, west of Chiulien-cheng, where the Japanese charged the Russian rear guard, were wounded.

Japs Only British Protectors.

London, May 12.—Earl Percy, Under Foreign Secretary, replying to a question in the House of Commons yesterday, said the British Consul at Newchwang had not asked for a gunboat for the protection of British interests there, in view of the possibility of an attack by brigands. Newchwang being in the theatre of war, His Majesty's Government some time ago took the only step possible in requesting the belligerents to safeguard the interests of British subjects. The Russian Government promised that all precautions would be taken. Should the Russians retire from Newchwang, the Secretary did not suppose there would be any protection for British life or property against brigandage until the entry of the Japanese into the town.

FLOODS OUT WEST.

Over Forty Buildings in District of Brandon Under Water—Sheep and Hogs Drowned.

Minneapolis, May 12.—The Journal has the following from Brandon, Man.: Not in twenty years has the Assiniboine been as high as now. It rose over three feet in twelve hours, and is still rising steadily and rapidly. Already over forty buildings are under water, as well as all slaughter houses and barns in the low-lying districts of the city.

The roadways on First and Eighteenth streets leading to the north side of the river are under water, and fears are entertained that the bridges on both highways will be washed away. Men employed by the city are on both bridges keeping the piers clear of driftwood.

Three of the leading butchers have feeding barns on the flats, and the buildings are under water almost to their roofs. Knight & Fairar had 50 hogs and 15 sheep washed away. Burchell & Howey succeeded in liberating their imprisoned stock, while James Donaldson has about 150 hogs and sheep in the loft of his barn. They are safe as long as the barn stands, but the water is running at a terrific rate, and the building may be lifted from its foundations at any time.

Galicians Beat Hasty Retreat.

All residents, principally Galicians, living in what was considered the danger zone, were moved out of their houses, but the water rose higher and early yesterday others had to make hasty retreats. The banks of the river are lined with household goods. In some instances everything had to be left and some citizens had to take to the roofs of their dwellings and there dress.

Across the dam of the Assiniboine, known as the Syne, are small bridges leading to an isle in midstream. These have been washed away, and also all small structures on this side.

The railway bridge is so weakened that trains cannot cross. In Hanbury near a saw mill were piled huge heaps of slabs. These have all been washed away, as has the summer's supply of wood, gathered by the poor foreigners who lived on the flats.

Many old settlers predict that the worst is not yet. Hundreds along the bank of the river are watching the rapid rise of the water, which has risen so high that the waterworks pumphouse is out of business and the city is without fire protection.

Oldest K.C. Dead.

Toronto, May 12.—In the death of David Breakenridge Read, which occurred at an early hour yesterday morning at his residence, 40 Breadalbane street, the oldest K.C. in Ontario passed away, he having been given the title in 1858. Mr. Read was in his 81st year. In November, 1902, he was stricken with apoplexy, since which time he was confined to his home. Mr. Read was born in Merrickville, Grenville County, in 1823, and he was an active figure in the municipal life of Toronto 45 years ago. He was the author of several Canadian historical works.

NESTLE'S FOOD

TALK IT OVER

Yes, talk over the question of the best food to give your baby with every one who can help you. Especially talk it over with your doctor. You may have been fortunate during the past Summer, but you know of very many mothers who have had serious trouble with their children because the right food could not be found for them. You remember the experiments they made, the constant change from milk to one food or another, and the struggle and danger which it all meant.

We will send you, free of charge, a trial package of Nestle's Food sufficient for eight meals.

Send us a postal card.

MR. JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN MAKES A PREGNANT SPEECH.

Reminds Unionists That Day of the Empire Has Come.

Rising Colonies Will Not Forever Hang on the Skirts of Britain's Indecision—Must Have Federation of States or Sink Into No Account in the History of the World—Voice of the Colonies.

Birmingham, May 13.—At the annual meeting of the Unionists yesterday, Mr. Chamberlain prefaced his speech by a reminder that the day of the Empire had come. Let them hold the banner high and plenty would come to their standard. What higher ambition could they have than to unite the Empire. They must have federation with the sister States or sink into no account in the history of the world. Rising colonies would not hang forever on the skirts of our indecision. The great colonies had decided with a unanimous voice that the question of union could best be approached from the commercial side. They had made concessions and were ready to make more. He would not call them sacrifices, because they were mutually beneficial in order to secure a self-sustaining Empire, interchanging of products more freely and the strengthening by ties of interest the sympathies already existing, thus paving the way for the consummation of the highest ideal which the nation can reach of evolving from the loose assemblage of several States a great Imperial organization preserving for all its members local independence, but acting against all the world when the interests or honor of any of its members was attacked.

Devonshire and Rosebery.

He was at a loss to understand how the Duke of Devonshire and Lord Rosebery could treat the offer of the colonies as not existing. They doubted its faith and went about assuring their countrymen the colonies would give them nothing worth acceptance, and, on the other hand, demanded a sacrifice they could not afford to make. If any reasonable proof they could ask was afforded these statesmen would they then give favorable consideration to these proposals for preferential mutual trade within the Empire and authorize whatever Government was in power to enter into negotiations with the colonies to secure the great object.

Must Work at Home First.

He had received in recent months an invitation from the Government of Australia and important representative organizations in Canada to visit them, but he had replied he must convince his own people first. When the mandate is given he or another will go to Canada and Australia and claim from them the same patriotism found in our own people, and we will unite the Empire. He wanted to arrange taxation so as to promote free exchange among his own people. He would prefer to take everything from his own Empire which would produce everything within its own boundaries. Every penny we pay for our own purchases would secure not only our wants, but divert to the colonies the trade with foreign countries, which was falling off. Disaster was only staved away by an increase of trade with the colonies.

The Colonies' Goodwill.

The decline of trade with foreign countries was certain to continue. The colonies would not continue to present the policy of Montreal. A preference alone would keep their good-will. He was in full sympathy with the present large proportion of trade with the colonial brethren. He wished free trade statesmen to declare definitely what assurance, either from Government, Legislature or individuals in the colonies will assure them that our children across the seas were earnestly and unselfishly desirous for a closer union. Would a referendum be taken in Britain he believed a large majority would favor his proposals.

Within the Empire.

London, May 13.—(C.A.P.)—Sir Vincent Caillard, reading a paper on an Imperial preference and the cost of food, at the Compatriots' Club, declared that the whole supply of corn we need can be produced under competitive conditions within the Empire. The supplies of meat and wheat in Canada were capable of great development, but Australia would ultimately take the place of Canada as a wheat producer. Refrigeration worked wonders, and a preference would give her a decided superiority.

Canadian Cattle Embargo.

London, May 13.—(C.A.P.)—At a meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce it was resolved to remit a letter asking the assistance of the Chamber to bring about a removal of the restrictions upon Canadian cattle from the Montreal Chamber of Commerce to the Manchester and Salford Butchers' Association for consideration and report.

London, May 13.—(C.A.P.)—The Canadian Associated Press understands that the amount paid by Russia as compensation for the seizure of Canadian sealers is in the neighborhood of eighty thousand dollars.

Farmer Commits Suicide.

London, May 13.—James Hutchinson, a farmer of Westminster Township, committed suicide Wednesday evening by shooting himself with a revolver. Hutchinson was walking along the road in company with a neighbor, when he pulled a revolver from his pocket and shot himself in the temple. He died instantly. Hutchinson, who was about 40 years old, had been melancholy for some time.

Spain Builds Warships.

Madrid, May 13.—The naval budget provides for the construction during the coming five years of warships which will cost $7,500,000.

THIBETANS ON THE OFFENSIVE.

Bombard British Camp at Distance of Six Furlongs.

Gyangtse, Thibet, May 10.—(Delayed in Transmission.)—The Thibetans have taken the offensive against the British mission camp here. From a fort about six furlongs away they are steadily bombarding the camp with a half dozen guns carrying solid cannon balls of a pound weight.

Another large gathering of Thibetans is reported from the Rong Valley, and although the British communications in the rear are still open, the mission is practically besieged.

Must Advance to Lhassa.

London, May 13.—Indian Secretary Brodrick informed the House of Commons yesterday that the Government had decided that recent events in Thibet made it inevitable that the British mission must advance to Lhassa, the capital, unless the Thibetans consented to negotiate at Gyangtse within a given date.

EX-MAYOR ROACH IS DEAD.

One of Hamilton's Oldest and Most Prominent Residents.

Hamilton, May 13.—George Roach, ex-mayor and prominent citizen of Hamilton, died at 1 o'clock this morning. He was 86 years of age and was a native of the Isle of Wight. On Saturday he was taken ill with pneumonia, which terminated fatally.

Mr. Roach took up residence in Hamilton in 1847, after two years in New York and four years in other parts of Canada. He was for several terms an alderman and was mayor in 1875-6.

He was actively identified with the commercial and financial affairs of Hamilton, and was a director of the Bank of Hamilton from its commencement. He also held many other offices of a public nature. For years he was a noted breeder of swine, and at the World's Fair in Chicago exhibited four loads of his best stock, and won many prizes.

RAILWAY COMMITTEE.

Three Members of the Executive Council Appointed By Government.

Toronto, May 13.—The Ontario Government has appointed three of its members, Messrs. Latchford, Harcourt and Dryden, as the Railway Committee of the Executive Council. The committee has jurisdiction over steam and electric railways; it may superintend agreements between railways for running rights, crossings, etc., and may settle disputes between railway companies and municipalities with respect to service, rates and speed of cars. FOOTBALL.

A Creditable Publication.

The Midland Football League has just issued its first annual, and copies are now being sent to the secretaries of the different clubs in the league. The book is a very creditable publication of 32 pages, and, in its make-up, is in keeping with the dignity of the league, which this year, the second of its existence, is the largest independent football organization in the province. Half-tone cuts of the officials and also one of the Stratton Cup, representing the League Championship and donated to it by Hon. J. R. Stratton, adorn the pages of the annual.

The schedule of games for 1904, secretaries of the different clubs, constitution of the league and laws of the game are also included in the publication, which is put up in an attractive form.

VICTIMS OF HARD WINTER.

DEER BY THE THOUSAND DEAD IN THE WOODS—LUMBERMEN SAVED MANY.

"I am quite satisfied in saying that I have seen 1,000 deer lying dead in the forest up in the French River district this last winter," said John Kelly to the Toronto News.

Mr. Kelly owns Kelly's Point, near Sturgeon Point, Victoria county, and recently came down from the North Shore, where he spent the winter bushranging for a Saginaw lumber firm.

"I have travelled the woods a good deal in winter," went on Mr. Kelly, "but I never saw such a depth of loose snow, nor such mortality among the deer before."

"In 1861-2 there was 6 feet of snow on the level, but it was in two or three layers, with heavy crusts between that would carry the deer. But this year the snow was very deep and all light and downy, and the deer would make little progress through it. The habit of the deer is to keep to the runways and browse along them, but in this long, severe winter the fodder close to the runways gave out and then the deer starved. I came across their dead bodies everywhere. Often they had waded out into the deep snow toward other trees, and, overcome by weakness, sank down and died where they were.

"The lumbermen saved hundreds of deer. Hunger drove the animals right up to the camps, where they were not molested, but allowed to feed at the haystacks. I never saw a lumberman try to hurt one of them, but have often seen deer lying beside the stack, chewing their cuds. This treatment, and the horse feed littered along the cadge and draw roads have been a great help to the deer.

Daily Intelligencer.

RESPONSIBILITIES ARE MULTIPLYING.

It were well for the people of Canada to thoroughly post themselves as to the facts in connection with the iniquitous railway deal now before the Parliament of this Dominion. One of the most serious features of the question is the fact that the bonds of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company are to be guaranteed by the Government to the extent of three-quarters of the cost of construction on the prairie and mountain sections and the Government will build the eastern section. The company undertakes to pay the interest on the bonds. But there is no assurance that the new railway will ever earn sufficient to enable the promoters to do this. In case there is a default, the country must pay the bills and look for the money in any direction other than the railway magnates. They are not to be touched under any circumstances. But apart from the hypothesis that the Grand Trunk Pacific may default, there is a serious proposition staring the Government in the face. The company undertakes to pay three per cent. interest on the bonds. There their obligation ceases. Within a short time the country has been forced to pay four per cent. to replace expired bonds. No man can say that the money market in the near future will produce better results. If the war in the East lasts any length of time, there is bound to be a demand for loans that will give the money market an upward tendency and Canada will have to suffer with the rest of the world. Suppose that at the time the bonds are floated, the rate is as high as to-day, what does it mean? This country is going to be out of pocket the difference between three and four per cent. The amount for which the Government is accepting responsibility will at least reach the sum of $150,000,000. The interest on that sum at one per cent. is $1,500,000 per annum. Perhaps this may be a trifle, but who in Canada deems himself rich enough to ignore the magnitude of this fortune? This is just where the country will stand if the financiers of the world are inclined to look at things from their present view point. The Government, however, have not even considered it of sufficient importance to take this phase of the question into consideration.

The drowning season has opened auspiciously in Toronto and other places, and in this connection it might be apropos to print the following from the Toronto News: G. H. It is: "Never "enter a canoe if you cannot "swim, and never take anybody "into one who cannot."

HOW WAR NEWS COMES.

THIRTEEN THOUSAND MILES OF WIRE AND CABLE TO LONDON FROM TOKIO.

When an Englishman takes up his morning paper and reads the cablegrams from "Our War Correspondent" at Seoul, or from our "Special Correspondent" at Tokio, he rarely gives a thought to the marvels of the machinery which makes it possible for him to read at Highbury or Broxton what happened only a few hours earlier at the other side of the world.

And yet there is a whole world of romance in the very travels of the words he is reading, between the far-away correspondent's pen and his breakfast-table. From Tokio the message is flashed over 600 miles of Japan to Nagasaki, where the great Northern Cable Company takes it in hand and sends it under nearly 500 miles of sea to Shanghai whence it darts with lightning speed around the coast of China to Hong Chong; here it plunges again into the sea and remerges in Anam, only to continue its flight over the Eastern Extension Co.'s cable to Singapore.

The message has now travelled about 3,600 miles, but it cannot afford to tire, for it has more than 9,000 more to go before its race is run. Through the Straits of Malacca and the Bay of Bengal it flashes on to Madras, takes a flying leap across the south of India to Bombay, and then, unresting, rushes through the depths of the Arabian Sea and the Red Sea to Alexandria.

It has still more than 3,000 miles to go, but it laughs at the task, and rushing by Malta and Lisbon finds rest at last in London. It has covered as nearly as possible 13,000 miles in about eight hours, and has given the sun such a beating in its eastward flight that it actually reaches Fleet street or Tudor street a good hour in advance, though it has come "such a long way round."

Every word of this message has cost its sender 1s. 11d.—if it has been a private message it would have cost three times as much—and thus a sum of nearly £20 has been paid to enable us to read 200 words of war news for a penny or a halfpenny.—Tid Bits.

THE NATURAL WOMAN.

The Dull Versus the Sparkling—Tiresome Imitators.

The dull person may be a bore when being normal, when chewing the cud, as it were, quite unconscious of cow-like resemblance, but the dull person convulsively endeavoring to be witty, smart, full of repartee and happy allusion is intolerably and altogether maddening. Many smart American women are what they are by the grace of nature, the exertions of the exclusive modistes and the education of brilliant society. Others are what they are by the grace of nature and are most charming and least dull when most natural. There is a genuine attraction in simplicity and sincerity even when these qualities are not allied with remarkable wit or buoyed up by exceptional gayety. The moment when we are liable to become a curse to ourselves and others is the moment when we begin to try to play a part.

Oh, what a joy it is in society and often in the home to come across a perfectly natural woman! How she refreshes you! How she sets you at your ease! I am not especially fond of fine needlework or addicted to fancy knitting, but I remember to this hour a delightful talk I once had at a dinner party with a dear old lady given over to these two innocent pursuits, who was artless enough to assume that I shared her sense of their importance. And so I did while she was telling me about them.

Some time ago I read a clever article attacking people for smiling too much and begging them not to smile unless there was something to smile at. My advice to them would be never to force a smile, but never to check a smile that was coming naturally. Be natural. All this advice to do and not to do tends to the fostering of self consciousness, and self consciousness is a hideous thing.

As with smiling, so with dullness. To a certain extent natural dullness can be minimized. The heavy person can throw out a bag or two of sand and render the brain balloon a little lighter, capable of soaring some feet higher. For instance, she can educate herself. She can read, see, do and so assert herself. But do not, for heaven's sake, let her emulate the "verve" of some strenuous and sparkling creature made by nature as unlike her as the diamond is unlike the pearl.

In being imitative most people become actively tiresome. It is better to be a sedative than an irritant, to resemble the hop pillow than adulterated cayenne pepper.

Our age is full of voices telling us to do this and do that, be this and be that. I should reply to them, "I'm going to be myself." R. HICHENS.

"BROKEN" STOMACHS

Fermentation is the first blow in the shattering of mental and physical force. Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets will ward it off and prevent the onslaught of disease.

Trace the trouble to its source and in ninety-nine cases in a hundred where mental and physical wreck is the climax, you'll find food-ferment the starting point. Dr. VonStan's pineapple tablets forestall this precursor of trouble. They keep the stomach sweet—they keep the nerve centres well balanced—they stimulate the digestive organs. If you're threatened with a "broken down" stomach, one dose will give relief. Sixty tablets, 35 cents. 96

FRIENDSHIPS.

Those of Long Standing and Those Made In Later Life.

People make friends later than they used to, or at least so it seems to us, probably because they grow old in general later than they did. Friendship must change its nature with advancing years, but whatever makes later life full of activities and new beginnings causes friendships also to begin at even the later stages of the journey. Of two old men early friends who had quarreled Coleridge said:

> They stood aloof, the scars remaining.
> Like cliffs which had been rent asunder.

Such an image of course gives powerfully the sense of fixity, the opposite of the fluid potentiality of youth. Yet in the same poem we have the hint that not all is glorious in youth:

> And constancy lives in realms above,
> And life is thorny, and youth is vain.

Friendship becomes rid of some vanity, it becomes more noble and satisfying to the deeper thoughts and ideals, when the roots of it grow back into a long distant past, and if we can keep the power of making a few new friends in age as we need them to supplement those inherited from youth, which grow fewer with the years, but riper and more select, friendship should play a satisfying role far along toward the end of life, the best role indeed of its career, if, as Emerson thinks, a lifetime is needed for its completeness, while an hour or a day is enough for toil or play. The late friendships of the unmarried, the childless and the widowed have a special necessity and pathos of their own, for mates and children to a large extent at certain periods naturally take the place of other friends.

An Interested Juror.

An instance of an interested juryman was reported not long ago. A jury had been impaneled, when a man stepped forward and explained that, having been summoned to serve, he wished to be allowed to do so at once, as he had to attend a funeral at a distant place in the latter portion of the week. A place was therefore made for him in the jury box. The case was tried, and owing to this man's obstinacy a verdict of acquittal was secured. It was subsequently discovered that the man had never been summoned to serve at all and that the prisoner was his friend.—London Tit-Bits.

Both Died as They Wished To.

Tennyson, who was a shy, reserved man, could never understand Robert Browning's love of society. He had been heard to remark that Browning would die in a white choker at a dinner party. The two poets died as they would have wished to die—Robert Browning in the grand Palazzo Ressonicco, with his son by his bedside, and Lord Tennyson in his beloved Surrey home, surrounded by his loved ones.

The Tourist and the Porter.

An English tourist was discussing the relative merits of British and American railway service the other evening when he suddenly sprang the following clincher on his cisatlantic cousins:

"I tell you, though, there's one point you folks are behind in, and that is the lack of consideration shown white passengers in having them pass inspection by an African. Why, the idea of such treatment is an insult to any gentleman.

"A few days ago when boarding one of your famous express trains I was chagrined, to put it mildly, to be asked by a liveried colored man to show my ticket to him. I subsequently learned that this same individual is nothing but a train waiter. Such a thing could not happen in my country."—New York Press.

Chinese Terms of Endearment.

In China a wife is never spoken of by her husband in a plain and straightforward way. Such playful terms as "my thorn in the ribs" and "my dull companion" are more usual, but leave something to be desired on the score of elegance. "The mean one of the inner room" has a distinct flavor of masculine selfishness about it.

NO DIFFERENCE.

No distinction is made as to the kind of Piles that Hem-Roid cures.

The names Internal, External, Bleeding, Blind, Itching, Suppurating, etc., are simply names of the different stages through which every case will pass if it continues long enough.

Piles are caused by congestion or stagnation of blood in the lower bowel, and it takes an internal remedy to remove the cause.

Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid is a tablet taken internally.

It is a permanent cure and no case of Piles has ever been found it failed to cure.

COINCIDENCES.

The Odd Ways In Which Things Come About In This World.

A story is being told of a man selling toys on a London pavement recognizing in a lady who bought from him his own daughter. Stranger meetings have been recorded. Late one night two men who had been dining with the late Duke of Edinburgh at Buckingham palace set out for their club and paused for a moment at a crossing in Pall Mall. It was very late, and rain was falling, but there at the crossing was a tiny boy plying his broom and asking alms. One of the two was a man who never could resist such an appeal. He stopped to question the child. How came he to be there at so late an hour, seemingly so friendless and destitute? The boy answered that he was, as he seemed, utterly destitute. He had walked to London from a town on the south coast.

"And have you really no friends or relations in the world?" asked his kindly interrogator. "Well, sir, it's the same as if I hadn't," replied the lad. "I have a brother, but I shall never see him again. I don't even know if he's alive. He's a sailor, and I haven't seen him for a long time." At this the second man, who had not as yet spoken, showed interest. "What's your brother's name, little man?" he now asked. "His name is ——, sir, and he's a signalman in the Bellerophon, but he's been away so long he must have forgotten me." "Good heavens!" exclaimed his second questioner. "Why, that's the name of my own signalman, and a fine young fellow he is, too, and now I notice there is a strong likeness between him and the boy." The speaker was the commander of the Bellerophon. The boy had been granted toll rights over the crossing for only that one night; his first questioner was the only man in a million who would have stopped in the pouring rain to question a crossing sweeper; his companion was almost the only man in the world who could have attested the truth of the lad's story. It is only necessary to add that the two good hearted fellows took the boy in hand and saw to his being made into as good a sailor as his brother.—St. James Gazette.

HER CHOICE

By Louisa Hubert Guyol

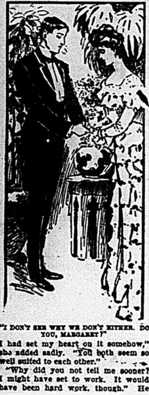
Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

"Now that it is all over, I don't mind telling you that is the girl that I had chosen for you to marry."

She looked up at him over the great bunch of pink roses that she held in her arms and from under the soft chiffon of her white hat, and he looked down at her out of deep set eyes under shaggy brows. Then his glance followed hers down the long distance of the room, resting on the girl who stood there beneath a bower of palms. The cloudy masses of her white veil were thrown back from a face of smiles and blushes as she received congratulations and wondered vaguely at the strange sweetness of it all.

"You—don't—mean—it?" There were great pauses of incredulity between Wilton's words, and the slow smile that came into his eyes was not one of vanity, rather of great pleasure in an unexpected compliment.

"Is she not the girl I have always described? Tall and slender, big brown eyes and soft, curling, light brown hair? You have been blind all this time not to have seen who I meant.



"I DON'T SEE WHY WE DON'T EITHER. DO YOU, MARGARET?"

I had set my heart on it somehow," she added sadly. "You both seem so well suited to each other."

"Why did you not tell me sooner? I might have set to work. It would have been hard work, though." He was still looking at the bride.

"Play the part of matchmaker? And where my little sister was concerned? Ah, no! I could not tell you, but I did so want it."

"That is the greatest compliment you could have paid me. I really"—He had turned and was looking down into her eyes. Suddenly he stopped as if a thought had stifled his words, and the color left his face for one short second.

"Come," she said, as though divining his thought and wishing to interrupt it, "you are to make the first toast, I believe. You must continue your duties as best man."

She led the way down the long hall, and together they paused on the threshold of the dining room.

"Did you do this?" he asked.

"Yes. Do you like it?"

He stood silently drinking in the beauty of the room, with its filmy draperies of asparagus fern, amid the delicate green of which stood forth tall silver and crystal vases filled with long stemmed Bridesmaids' roses. Here and there low bowls of green and gold Bohemian glass were half buried beneath the dainty color of the Duchesse rose veiled in leaves of maidenhair. The conventional cake, with its streamers of narrow satin ribbon, shimmered white amid the colors, and the pink shaded candles threw soft reflections over everything.

It was very beautiful, and he said so to her. She was very beautiful as she moved about in her clinging gown of palest green chiffon, straightening a leaf here or bending a flower there, and his eyes said so, although she did not see it.

Then the next thing he knew the room was filled with people, the young bride was beside him, and some one was holding a glass toward him, saying, "Will you not toast them?"

He looked at the bride, bowed and began.

"Hail to thee, blithe spirit!" then stopped, laughing. "That won't do. You are not a skylark."

"She's a bird, though," vehemently interrupted a boy who had adored the girl for years.

"Then I cannot continue at all, for 'bird thou never wert' won't apply. What shall I say?" He looked at the tall man standing near, then into the eyes of the girl bride.

> "With thy clear, keen joyance > Languor cannot be,"

he quoted, then, improvising, continued:

> "May shadow of annoyance > Never come near thee."

He raised his glass and turned toward the groom:

> "Thou wilt love and ne'er know love's sad satiety."

And amid a murmur of applause and clinking of glasses the toast was drunk. Then some one, taking up the thread of Wilton's thought, began:

> "What thou art we know not
> What is most like thee?"

And the boy who had used the slang surprised them all by continuing the quotation:

"She is 'like a glowworm golden.' Oh, oh, oh! But 'like a star of heaven in the broad daylight' or 'a rose embowered in its own green leaves.' 'All that ever was joyous and clear and fresh' or"—

"Please," said the bride appealingly, "no more. It is very beautiful, but so embarrassing. I don't deserve it. I am going to drink to Shelley, who taught you to say such beautiful things."

"With such a subject," some one began, but Margaret and her sister had disappeared.

Wilton slipped from the crowded room out into the quiet halls, where he wandered up and down, thinking, wondering how he had not thought the same thing before. All these months past how stupid he had been! Yes, he thought it would do no harm to try his luck. Ah, no; she never would, she could not love him; it was too much to expect. She would look higher and find— But she had chosen him for the little sister, whom he knew she loved better than life. If she thought him good enough for her, would she not be willing to—

The idea had taken so strong a hold upon him from the moment he had looked down into her eyes to thank her for her compliment that now he wondered how he could have been blind to it for so long a time. It seemed to him as if he had never had any other thought than this, as if he could never have any other thought than Margaret. He wondered if—

The carriage was at the door; the bride had her arms about her mother's neck; the groom, already halfway down the steps, was impatiently waiting. A shower of rice filled the air, a white satin slipper shimmered through the shower. With a quick pull the horses started, and the man within the carriage turned from waving a last adieu to the party on the balcony and put his arms about the girl.

"At last I have you safe," he said. "Do you know, I was always afraid of that man Wilton?"

That man Wilton was already following Margaret into the drawing room just as a voice behind them said:

"That's the best fellow in town. I don't see why he and Margaret don't"—

The color rushed over Margaret's face as she glanced up to see if he had heard. The smile in his eyes made her look down again quickly. She walked to the far end of the room beneath the palms where her sister had stood and, stooping, picked up some rose petals that lay scattered at her feet. She did it all unconsciously. When she rose Wilton was standing over her. He took her hands in his, rose petals and all, and looked down into her eyes.

"I don't see why we don't either. Do you, Margaret?"

Some one had gone to a piano, and the strains of the march from "Le Prophete" came to them through the open doors, a breeze softly stirred in the palm leaves above their heads, the pink rose petals slipped from her fingers in a shower down over her gown as she put her hands up on Wilton's shoulders and met his eager, questioning look.

"No—I don't," she said very softly.

Her Stately Carriage.

The play was over. The actors, who had lived long on dreams of a full house such as had faced them at this performance, hastened to the box office, where they expected to witness the manager enact the role of the ghost in a beautiful, heart throbbing drama called "The Postponed Walk of Hamlet's Father." But they were late. The manager had walked ahead of time with the money, and, like Mother Hubbard's bowwow, the members of the company "got left."

One thing, and only one thing, remained for the actors to do, walk back to the city with silk and money blest. It was discouraging, but—

"Say," said the low comedian to the woman who had won storms of applause by her representations of Ophelia, Portia and other characters of equal note, "you shouldn't mind this. Just think, as you walk, of the critic who praised your stately carriage!"

He laughed at his joke, but the actress turned up her nose, drew herself up to full height and strode on—with the stately carriage in evidence, but unavailable for locomotion.—New York Press.

Why Parrots Are Great Favorites.

Of all the members of the feathered tribes there are none which have been greater favorites and have been regarded with a greater degree of genuine attachment than parrots. The beauty of their plumage, with its wealth and variety of gorgeous colors, their symmetry of form and gracefulness of manner would alone have been sufficient to give them their popularity.

But the closest link they have established with our affections is, of course, found in their wonderful faculty for the repetition of spoken words and various familiar sounds, together with their possession, in many instances, of a reasoning power which suggests that they are not always mere imitators, but really understand the general sense of what they say. Combined with this power of speech, the fond attachment which they are capable of showing toward those who feed or are otherwise kind to them leads to their being among the most favored as they seem to be among the best fitted companions of human beings. This place of honor in the animal world they have held for many centuries.—Strand Magazine.

A Misquoted Proverb.

Perhaps no English proverb or proverbial phrase is more frequently misquoted than the one that speaks of hitting a nail on the head. Unthinking people almost always say the "right nail," which is absurd. The joiner who hit the wrong nail would be a "duffer" indeed, but an expert hand may now and then hit his nail otherwise than fairly on the head.—Notes and Queries.

WISDOM OF NOVELISTS.

If you want to impress fools you must respect their prejudices.—Anthony Hope.

Success in life rests upon one small gift—the secret of the entry into another man's mind to discover what is passing there.—Seton Merriman.

To smoke a fine cigar, after a real dinner, with a good friend, is about as near heaven on earth as the average man will ever find south of the stars.—John Bain.

There is nothing more fatal to a political career than brilliant impromptus and spirited orations. A statesman's words, like butchers' meat, should be well weighed.—John Oliver Hobbes.

A young man thinks that he alone of mortals is impervious to love, and so the discovery that he is in it suddenly alters his views of his own mechanism. It is thus not unlike a rap on the funny bone.—J. M. Barrie.

Noun Versus Adjective.

The current debasement of the language, of which mention was made recently by a correspondent, needs to be stayed by occasional protests, says the London Chronicle. The education committees are being called in many quarters "educational" committees. This false refinement reminds one of the common inscription, "monumental mason," which should be "monument mason." It is not the artificer who is monumental. Compare "numerical printer" for "number printer." People fear to use a noun as an adjective or wrongly prefer the adjective as more elegant. "War office" and "India office" are correct expressions, better than "military" or "Indian office," while "colonial office" is not so good as "colonies office" would be.

Hungarian Forests.

The Hungarian government does not sell any part of its forests, but buys more each year. In some parts of the country, as in the eastern region of the Carpathians, woods are found of several thousand acres in extent, consisting for the most part of red beech. This is used for firewood, carriages, staves and agricultural implements and in the manufacture of bent wood. There are few fires, and they seldom permanently damage the woods. There are large resinous forests in Transylvania, but they are not very accessible, and there are also some in the district of Marmaros, in the northeast of the country.

To give up of your own will what would cost too much in time and strength is not failure—it is success.

Cuticura Saved Her Life, So Mother Says.

"When my little girl was six months old, she had eczema. We had used cold creams and all kinds of remedies, but nothing did her any good, in fact, she kept getting worse. I used to wrap her hands up, and when I would dress her, I had to put her on the table for I could not hold her. She would kick and scream, and when she could, she would tear her face and arms almost to pieces. I used four boxes of Cuticura Ointment, two cakes of Cuticura Soap, and gave her the Cuticura Resolvent, and she was cured, and I see no traces of the humour left. I can truthfully say that they have saved her life, and any one suffering as she did, I should advise them to give Cuticura a fair trial." MRS. G. A. CONRAD, Lisbon, N. H., Feb. 7, 1898.

Five years later, viz., Feb. 23, 1903, Mrs. Conrad writes:

"It is with pleasure that I can inform you that the cure has been permanent as it is now six years since she was cured, and there has been no return of the disease since, and I have advised a lot of friends to use the Cuticura Remedies in all diseases of the skin."

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

"Well spoken, Mr. Grimes. My mind is already clear on that point. I believe we will come out of this thing with flying colors. My trouble has vanished even as the smoke of this cigar fades into space."

Sandy is himself again, and that means a cheery friend, a faithful comrade, one whom Mynheer Joe could not better were he to search the globe over.

As the daylight grows stronger the moon wanes in power; it is no longer a strife between the two as to which must win, for Luna is already out of the battle.

Cairo is left far behind upon the east bank, and, looking back, they can see the first shafts of sunlight glinting from her numerous domes, although the mighty god of day has not yet shown his smiling face to those upon the river Nile.

It is a strange spectacle, and one that appeals to the artistic in their natures, but all of them are very familiar with the scene, so that the desert, the pyramids, the city of the four hundred mosques, its queer people and the storied Nile itself—all these things do not appear so strange to their eyes as would be the case were they new comers to the land of Egypt.

Besides, their mission is of such a nature that their thoughts are bound to stray to it from time to time—when men are bent on an errand of a deadly character they are not expected to laugh and joke as if going to a wedding.

"Come back to the cabin, Sandy. I think we would be wise to examine our firearms. Nothing like making sure that everything is in working order. These hyenas and jackals of the desert strike with amazing quickness when they do show up. Come!"

His words are significant, and his companion has no difficulty in understanding. Together they pass the sailors squatted about on the forward deck after their usual manner when not at work. These fellows are Arabs, and not the best looking chaps Mr. Grimes has set eyes on. He gives Sandy a nudge, but this wide-awake newspaper man has already noted the fact.

"Fine collection of buzzards, eh? Must say the captain has looked far and wide to find a game set. They'd fight too, I reckon," he whispers.

They find Mynheer Joe lying upon the roof of the cabin, a pillow under his head, which the captain of the boat has brought out, and, to all appearances, enjoying his cigar.

Together they enter the cabin. Upon the table is seen a quaint flagon and a glass. Mynheer Joe moves toward it, but he finds the hand of Mr. Grimes before him.

"Not allowed, my friend. Heaven knows what sort of drug there might be in this. If you must steady your nerves—" And he produces a small flask from one of his pockets. But Joe shakes his head.

"That isn't in my line, sir, though I thank you all the same. I've seldom found a time when my nerves needed strengthening by such artificial means, though I confess that my life was once saved by a small amount of liquor. The fellow drank it who was left to execute me, and got into such a maudlin condition that I easily overpowered him and made my escape. I have no use for the stuff."

"Well, my nerves need a little tonic, and I know of no better. Sandy, how is it?"

And as the little war correspondent wipes his mouth with his handkerchief he murmurs:

"Prime, my lord."

A minute later, all of them are busily engaged in examining their revolvers, which are found to be in good condition.

"Take charge of mine, Mr. Grimes," remarks Joe, who, of course, cannot be thus burdened when about to enter upon an engagement that will require all his agility.

"With pleasure, sir, and should the occasion arise for using it, I trust you will find that I can make each shot count almost as well as yourself. By the way, Joe, you didn't forget to bring the rubber foot holds I borrowed from the professor?"

"Never fear; I have them. The baron will not get his work in through a slip on my part, if I can help it," returns Joe, touching a pocket of his blouse, where a small package of some sort is hidden.

Presently they pass outside again, to find that the sun has arisen and a new day begun. They keep a short distance from the shore in order to catch the full benefit of the breeze, but every palm stands out in bold relief.

The scene is such as can be gazed upon any day along the lower Nile, and yet one never tires of looking upon it. Numerous sails dot the broad river, some beating down, while many fly before the breeze. A string of camels forming a caravan can be noticed above the bank, doubtless bound for the far off cities, between which and Cairo quite a trade is carried on in this way.

Here some travellers on donkeys can be seen, making an early start, for the pyramids. Now and then slaves are discovered at work with the poles and buckets known as a shedoof, and which primitive method of engineering in the way of lifting water from a lower to a higher level is still practiced in the land where they carry on agriculture just as their forefathers did two thousand years back.

An occasional windmill is seen where some house nestles on the bank, but this is generally the property of foreigners. Upon the river freight cangias are met with, heading to or from Cairo. Those boats which have the fair wind are supposed to keep out of the way of others, but the reis in command of their craft seems to be in something of a dare-devil spirit this morning. He swings the dahabeah in so close to one of the heavier craft that he comes within an ace of having the sandal trailing behind sunk.

The sun is now almost half an hour high When will the boats come to land? Surely there is no need of travelling a great distance from old Cairo in order to discover a good dueling ground.

Perhaps the baron has a particular spot in view. He may even have been a principal in some affair of honor that has culminated in a meeting up the Nile, and his success at that time inspires him to select the same rendezvous again.

Our friends show no impatience, whatever they may feel. Sandy, looking ahead, directs the attention of his comrades to a point.

"Like as not we're aiming for that. I can see rows of tombs in the rocks back of it. Such a place would make an admirable spot for the duello. Remember the old stories I've read of steamers on the Mississippi stopping to let a couple of passengers fight on some sand-bar, and the spectators burying one of 'em there. This puts me in mind of it. Where could you find a better place to dispose of the unfortunate victim than in one of those empty rock tombs? Capital idea! Jove! I'll improve on this subject when I write it up, see if I don't!"

Sandy gets no further, as he feels a grip on his arm, and, turning, sees Mr. Grimes making expressive grimaces intended to warn him that he is treading on dangerous ground. Mynheer Joe, however, does not seem at all affected, but treats the matter as a huge joke.

"I think for my part, I prefer being buried in a modern cemetery; and I authorize you, my friends, in case the worst comes, to see that my poor remains are taken care of. In my pocket will be found a letter addressed to you, Mr. Grimes, concerning the little matter we were speaking about last night. You can let the person most interested see it. There—I am done. I have made my peace; but I want both of you to understand that it is not Mynheer Joe's intention to drop before the sword of the Russian. I hope to show him how an American can uphold the honor of his flag, even at the sword's point."

Confident words these, but they express the feelings of the man. It is partly this assurance concerning his own powers that has brought Mynheer Joe safely through numerous deadly perils in the past.

Fear will never paralyze his arm when face to face with danger, nor can an antagonist expect to reap any benefit from such a source.

By this time they see that Sandy was not far out of the way when he marked this point as the scene of their expected debarkation. The leading dahabeah makes a graceful sweep and comes about at the point, landing at a rock that seems especially adapted for such business.

Now it is their turn; the old reis himself has charge of the tiller, and gives his orders in a loud, shrill voice that strikes the tympanum in a painful way, as though some boy is indulging in the agonizing delirium of beating upon empty pans. The Arab sailors can no longer be termed lazy; they jump around in the liveliest possible manner and carry out the commands of the captain.

Not an inch out of the way, they shade the wind out of the sails, and the boat brings up gently alongside the other, to which it is at once secured.

The baron and his party can already be seen upon the shore. Under his arm the Frenchman carries a long slender package, without doubt the swords which are destined to occupy so prominent a place in the coming event. There is a third member of the party, the man known as Colonel Taylor, and also a short individual who carries a surgeon's case in his hand.

When our friends join them, words are passed between. The principals bow in a perfunctory way, but Mynheer Joe smiles in a careless manner that must set the Russian duelist to thinking.

They do not need to go far away; the ground is right there among the rock tombs; but it is advisable to move on a little for several reasons. It is not their intention to have the sailors on board the boats witness the affair, and just beyond the rocks they are apt to find a spot where the sun will not throw his fierce rays into the eyes of either, causing a momentary blindness that may be fatal. So they walk along two and two, Mr. Grimes bringing up the rear.

In five minutes they come to a pause, and the French officer sweeps his arm around with a dramatic gesture, saying:

"Behold, gentlemen! The ground selected for the dullo!"

CHAPTER XIV.

No one can reasonably offer any objection to the selection of the ground, since it is level enough for all practical purposes, and certainly so isolated that there does not seem to be any danger of interruption. The association with the strange tombs hewn in solid rock ages ago, by the Egyptians, might make some men nervous, but it does not appear to have any such effect upon either of the two who have met here to face each other in a combat for honor.

Mr. Grimes, in company with the French officer, goes over the ground step by step and announces that he is perfectly satisfied with the location chosen. It certainly cannot be improved upon, and might not be equaled, so they are well content as it is.

"Now for the weapons," says the American, whose business-like methods cause the other to suspect he has figured in duels before.

The French officer has heard of desperate affrays happening in the South and the West. How is he to know that the participators in these scrimmages are, as a general thing, the very lowest scum of society, and that Southern gentlemen as a rule, have given up their former allegiance to the code as a settler for all difficulties?

Picking up the package he unrolls it. Within, wrapped in chamois skin, are two handsomely made swords, of delicate but magnificent appearance. These he draws from their separate scabbards and holds toward the American.

Select which one you please," he says, quietly.

Mr. Grimes crooks his finger, and when Joe, who is watching, sees this, he comes at once to the side of his friend.

"Try these blades," says his second, curtly.

The explorer takes one up and makes a few movements with it.

"Careful, the baron's looking at you," whispers his mentor just then, and Joe sweeps the air no more with the blade.

He bends it double over his knee, allowing it to fly back again. Then the second sword is also put through its paces. Mynheer Joe's face is a study, for he finds it a pleasure to handle such weapons as these.

"How does monsieur find them?" asks the Frenchman, eagerly.

"Superb—beyond comparison!" replies Joe.

"Which do you choose, monsieur?"

"That is a small matter. I find them equal. One has a stain upon it, you see."

"Oui, monsieur," bending forward to look at it more closely, and then turning to the baron, who smiles coldly, as he carelessly remarks:

"The blood of young Lord Carmorgan. We met in Turkey. He was buried in Stamboul, I believe. A careless second

PUSHING AHEAD....

Everyday finds us steadily advancing and requiring more and more men to do our work.

And we get the workmen—workmen of the best type, too. Just the kind you want to do your work, that's the style of men we are looking for.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here,

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

C. B. Scantlebury
Belleville's Decorator.

Worth Knowing.

When soot falls upon the carpet or rug never attempt to sweep it up at once, for the result is sure to be a disfiguring mark. Cover it thickly with nicely dried salt, which will enable you to sweep it up cleanly, so that not the slightest stain or smear will be left.

HEART PALPITATION AT NIGHT

Rattles even the strongest man, but to the average woman it is a taste of general purgatory. Take a little Nerviline in sweetened water and away goes the palpitation. You'll be saved lots of worry by keeping Nerviline on hand, which is a treasure for all sorts of pains and aches. Nerviline cures headache, stomach and bowel troubles quickly. Costs 25c for a large bottle.

NO DARDANELLES FOR RUSSIA.

It is again reported that Russia desire the Porte's authorization for the warships to pass through the Dardanelles. The Russian Ambassador at Constantinople has, however, not deemed it advisable to press the point, as he regards it as useless to make the request. There will be no Dardanelles for Russia, because Canada wants all the Dardanelles cigarettes that are manufactured. Dardanelles are fine Turkish cigarettes, and can be had at all dealers, with cork, silver or plain tips.

"AS BOLD AS A LION."

Rather Say Bold as a Partridge if You Would Be Exact.

The only explanation of the adage, "As bold as a lion," is that the lion's magnificent, muscular body, his noble head, great mane, the fact that he is a wild beast and—still more probably—his deep throated roar that sounds so extraordinarily bold have made him feared for generations. But the lion belongs to the family of cats and is not bold. To those who know best he is not brave even in the hour of danger. The lioness, who is smaller, less terrible to look upon and is without a mane, is brave in defense of her young, but she, too, is not bold. She is merely bolder than the lion. In comparison with any animal that can face danger and fight "fair" the lion is a coward. To prove it let us see for a moment how it is that the lion chooses to hunt his prey.

The lion does not hunt. In the reeds and grasses near some pool in the jungle he lies hidden where he knows that other animals will go to drink. Catlike, he leaps upon his victim, striking it with his powerful paws. Then his great jaws break the neck of the unfortunate creature he has taken by surprise, and the lion boldly carries off the carcass to devour it where he will. The folk who live on the outskirts of jungles in the lion's country sometimes lose their sheep and goats when a hungry lion can muster courage to go near a human habitation in his search for food. He goes at night and stealthily. Who knows but that his heart goes pit-a-pat and his big limbs tremble at every sudden noise? The natives of India and of Africa know, however, that they can frighten away a thieving lion by fire and torches. If cornered and forced to fight he will do battle savagely, but he doesn't seek an open fight, and any traveler will tell you that as a rule the "king of beasts" bolts on sighting a man.

To be as bold as a partridge—as brave, unselfish, daring, heroic, as a partridge—is something one might be proud to boast. No lion defends its young with the courage of a partridge. The lioness at bay will turn in defense of her cubs, will fight the enemy, will spring at him furiously; the partridge will leave its little ones quite unprotected in the nest, or wherever they may be in hiding, and will offer herself to spare them. It is not the unthinking heroism of excitement. The bird knows what she is doing and the danger. She schemes to attract attention to herself, but she manages to lead the dogs on, and she escapes. We at least have never heard anything in the life history of the partridge so sad as that the mother bird has been taken at that supreme moment. Under the very nose of the dogs she will flutter and limp, with drooping wing, to deceive them into the belief that she is lamed and cannot fly.

The King and the Preacher.

Dr. South on one occasion after preaching before Charles II., who, by the way, did not care any more than the humblest dissenter to listen to a read sermon, was twitted by the king of having read from a manuscript. "How is it, Dr. South," said his majesty, "that you, who are so famous for preaching without book, should read your sermon when you preach before me?" "May I answer your majesty with another question?" replied the witty doctor. "How is it that your majesty always reads your speeches to your faithful commons?" "Odsfish, doctor," said Charles, "because I have asked them for money so often that by this time I am ashamed to look them in the face." Dr. South, it must be admitted, had fairly laid himself open to the retort.

He Kept His Seat.

The nearsighted man, comfortably ensconced in the corner of the car, looked up at the woman who was holding a large bundle in one hand while she clung to the strap with the other.

"Madam," said he, a wave of sudden generosity sweeping over him, "I make it a rule never to give my seat up to any woman, but I will be glad to help you. Let me hold your bundle for you."

"Oh, thank you, sir," replied the fair passenger; "I hope you know how."

Whereupon she deposited a gurgling six-month-old infant in his lap, to the undisguised joy of the rest of the strap holders.

Monopolies In Old England.

Monopolies were quite common in England long before the days of the Stuarts, while it was under a Stuart, James I., that an act was passed declaring void all monopolies for the sole buying, selling and making of goods excepting patents for fourteen years for any new process or new manufacture. This indeed was the first step toward free trade. The Tudors were really the great creators of monopolies, and Elizabeth was the greatest developer of them.—All the Year Round.

Plain Enough.

"What was the trouble?"

"He couldn't swim."

"What has that to do with his failure?"

"He got into a company where the stock was all water."

The Paternal Idea.

Miss Roxley—I lost my heart last night, pa. I accepted Mr. Poorman.

Mr. Roxley—Huh! You didn't lose your heart. You must have lost your head.

Spare Others.

"You talk an awful lot about yourself, Catherine."

"Well, it keeps me from talking about other people."

"Mirth is God's medicine," said Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedella."

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

Look out for the man with an imagination strong enough to draw a dollar out of your pocket.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed) T. S. McINTEE.

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

INSTAL COAL RETORTS

GAS COMMITTEE WILL SO RECOMMEND TO THE CITY COUNCIL.

A meeting of the Gas Committee was held last evening, presided over by the Chairman, Ald. Sinclair. The other members present were Ald. McFee, Green and Gordon.

Ald. Green moved that Mr. Baxter, of Detroit, be asked to prepare plans and specifications for a new coal retort system to suit the city's requirements.

After some discussion the motion was unanimously adopted.

A motion prevailed that the manager be instructed to open a bank account and deposit all monies making payment to the City Treasurer with his own cheque.

Some other business of a routine nature was discussed, after which the committee adjourned.

AFTER THE POSTMASTER.

GRITS OF MAYNOOTH WANT THE OFFICE FOR ONE OF THEIR PARTY.

Some of the leading Grits of Maynooth have for some time past been looking for a chance to lay complaints against the management of the Maynooth post office, and Mr. E. A. Wootton, postmaster, who has held the position for the past eight years.

A number of the leading members of the party met Mr. H. Merrick, Post Office Inspector, at Maynooth on the 10th to try to have a change made and to get the Post Office in the hands of one of their pets.

It is well known that Mr. Wootton is a Conservative, with considerable influence, but has been taking no active part in politics and should the Post Office be taken from him he will leave it with the satisfaction of feeling he has done his duty like a man.

SPLENDID PARADE.

RINGLING BROTHERS' SUPERB STREET DISPLAY DIFFERENT FROM ALL OTHERS.

The circus parade has at last, thanks to Ringling Brothers, reached the dignity of good taste, instructive feature and discriminating approval. This street display, peculiar to all circuses, until Ringling Brothers came into the field with fresh ideas, was a rather stale parade, in which the tawdry and unkempt laid heavy and gloomy hold of everybody and everything. With the advent of this famously successful circus firm came the well groomed man and horse, the splendid chariot and cage of distinguished style and tasteful coloring, the numerous open dens of the rarest wild animals, the inventive and never vulgar clown, squadrons of symmetrical equines of aristocratic breeding riders modishly dressed, and erect with the hall mark of culture, allegorical waggons picturing historic persons and scenes, liliputian cages and tableau flotas for children's eyes and hearts, army types in companies and correctly uniformed and equipped, elephants strung out for a wide city block, and numbering forty or more, herds of sleepy eyed camels, trained domestic animals, musical vehicles of different kinds, the only cathedral pipe organ—the largest portable one ever made, and used in a street pageant, a mounted band, and many other unique and exclusive features, which separated the Ringling Brothers free circus pageant from all others, and made it the most fascinating event of each year. This season Ringling Brothers street parade is longer than ever, and more radiantly beautiful in costuming, decorative cages, and chariots, and splendid exhibit of handsome wild animals and shapely, highbred equines. All of the 1,280 men, women and children employed with the enormous shows take some part in the pageant. This procession leaves the show grounds at 10 o'clock sharp, and follow the usual route over the principal streets.

The death occurred in Sidney yesterday of Mrs. Mary Grant Ostrom, widow of the late I. B. Ostrom, who was in her 80th year. Deceased was born near Port Hope, and was a daughter of the late R. P. Elliott, of the Front of Sidney, who are daughters of the deceased. Death was caused by no special illness, the good old lady just failed and died of old age.

THAT KINGSTON TRIP.

FIFTEENTH "MAY" GET AN INVITATION FOR VICTORIA DAY.

(Kingston Whig.)

This morning E. E. Horsey, of the Bay of Quinte Steamboat Company, received a letter from Lieut.-Col Halliwell, asking if an invitation could be extended to the 15th Regiment of Belleville to visit Kingston on Victoria day. The regiment is eager to come and would pay their own transportation if Kingston would give them a place to sleep and feed them. They would not care to pay all the expenses of the trip. Mr. Horsey interviewed Secretary Martin, of the celebration committee, but the latter could not issue an invitation until he had called the committee together. At the first meeting it was decided to invite no Canadian corps, as Kingston alone can turn out 800. The decision was to have only United States soldiers, and an invitation was given for the visit of 1,000 bluecoats from across the border. If 700 come, that will be all the committee can afford to pay for. At least it would be unwise to invite more for if the day should turn out rainy the committee would be sadly "in the hole." Kingston would like to have the Belleville regiment here and entertain it, but it seems a little late to arrange the matter now.

Secretary Martin wired to Mr. Gridley, of the New York Central Railroad company, to let him know precisely the number of United States soldiers who would be here. So far companies aggregating 300 have formally accepted. If the number is not more than 500, the committee may extend an invitation to Lieut.-Col. Halliwell's regiment.

A SCHOOL INSPECTOR GETS A CALLING DOWN.

CHRISTIAN GUARDIAN FINDS FAULT WITH MR. J. L. HUGHES' UTTERANCES ON MORMONISM.

The Christian Guardian, in the current issue, makes the following terse comments:—

We cannot but express our grave regret that a gentleman in so prominent and responsible a position as Mr. Jas. L. Hughes, Inspector of Public Schools of this city, should have written the article entitled "My Misconceptions Regarding the Mormons," which appears in the current number of the Canadian Magazine. We might go even further and say that we are surprised that a periodical of the high character of our contemporary should have admitted to its pages an article so palpably one-sided, and so certain to be insidiously harmful in its influence. We have no doubt that Mr. Hughes had a good time in his visit to Salt Lake City a couple of years ago; we have no doubt that he was received with effusive hospitality and permitted to hobnob with the hierarchs of Mormondom to his heart's content; we have no doubt that all that was brightest and best in Mormonism was spread out before his rapt and eager gaze, and that its seamy side was adroitly and successfully kept from his view. We have no doubt, too, that he felt flattered by and grateful for the marked attention which he received. But we must question the propriety of a public official, particularly a public official in such close and influential touch with the young people of this city and province, lending his name and influence to what is to all intents and purposes an illustrated advertisement of Mormonism, and a glowing panegyric of its institutions. Mr. Hughes' sees very, very much to praise, and he tells us so at considerable length; he sees apparently nothing to blame. His "misconceptions" have been removed, "a series of revelations" has cleared the darkness from his mental vision, and he shows the light to his countrymen—and women—who are still in the midnight from which he has happily emerged.

For many long years the leading statesmen, educationists and religious workers of the United States have recognized Mormonism as one of the greatest menaces to the political and social well-being of the country. We are surprised that a high educational functionary of Canada shows no more sympathy with them, and with the vast majority of the people of the great republic, in their efforts to rid themselves of what they believe to be a social pest-house and a source of moral contagion and national danger and disgrace.

Fine Horses Purchased.

The prices paid, we are informed, were exceptionally good.

JAPANESE TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYED BY A MINE.

First Warship Japan Has Lost in the War—Bad State of Affairs in Russia.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Tokio, May 13.—The Japanese torpedo boat No. 48 was destroyed while removing mines from Kerr Bay, north of Port Dalny yesterday. Seven men were killed and seven wounded. This is the first warship Japan has lost in the war.

Rome, May 13.—A secret report received from St. Petersburg depicts the internal situation of Russia as becoming most serious as regards the preservation of the present institutions. The military failures in the Far East have strengthened the opinion that the evils are due to the present organization of their country, in which a change is necessary, and unless the Emperor himself, seeing the danger, is induced to grant the country a constitution, it is feared that Russia will be obliged to face latent, if not open, revolutionary movements at home depriving her of the assistance of the most progressive elements of the Empire, such as the Poles and Finns.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE CLASS TO BE FORMED—THE REPORTS ENCOURAGING.

A large number of ladies were present at the regular monthly meeting of the auxiliary, in connection with the Y.M.C.A., yesterday (Thursday) afternoon, Mrs. W. W. Chown presiding. There was a discussion on the advisability of starting a class in domestic science in connection with the Y.M.C.A. auxiliary. It was decided to organize such a class in the fall.

Mrs. Moynes gave a most encouraging report of the strangers' teas which had been held the first Sunday evening of each month, and the good that had been derived from such gatherings was most encouraging to those who had helped to make them a success. A communication was received from the Trenton auxiliary, inviting the Belleville auxiliary to unite with them and visit the Y.M.C.A. camp in August. The invitation was graciously accepted.

Mr. Wilkie gave his usual encouraging report of the work accomplished during the month.

After singing a hymn a profitable meeting was brought to a close.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

A fair audience only witnessed Mr. Reeves-Smith's presentation of "The Tyranny of Tears" last night at the opera house, though the performance deserved a crowded house. This clever English comedy was splendidly presented. Mr. Reeves-Smith is himself a finished artist of the best school of comedy and he is supported by an admirable company. There was not a weak spot in the cast last night, and the play, full of effective situations and scintillating epigrams, moved along with a smooth and natural action. It is a clean and wholesome comedy, abounding in wit, and yet teaching a sound lesson upon domestic life, based upon the experience of a husband, a literary man, who freed himself from the petty and exasperating tyranny of a capricious and lachrymose wife. Mr. Reeves-Smith as Clement Parbury, was, of course, a star; Mr. Herriott, as Geo. Gunning, the cynic, who subsequently succumbs to the pretty stenographer; Henry Rich, as Col. Armitage, the gay old father-in-law, and Mr. Lillford in the minor role of Evans, the butler, were all good. Miss Wilkinson, as the tearful Mrs. Parbury, and Miss Rawson, as Clara Woodward, one of a country parson's family of thirteen, who knew the bitter pinch of poverty, both gave finished pictures of their parts. It is a genuine pleasure to witness so witty and refined a comedy presented by a clever company. The only regret is that the theatre was not crowded to the doors as it deserved.

S. H. TEACHERS' CONVENTION

PROCEEDINGS OF THURSDAY AFTERNOON AND THIS MORNING—MANY INTERESTING PAPERS.

Thursday Afternoon Session.

Writing, by Prof. Campbell, of the Deaf and Dumb Institute, was the first subject taken up in the afternoon.

Prof. Campbell explained the different systems in vogue and the advantages claimed by each. He expressed his condemnation of the vertical system and recommended the right oblique, or Spencerian, system, giving his reasons why he considered that system preferrable. He gave his method of teaching the various steps requisite to the production of good writers, and showed himself to be thoroughly conversant with his subject and well able to make a success of teaching it. He was listened to with close attention, and at the close of his address answered a number of questions asked by the teachers.

On motion of Mr. Barragar, seconded by Mr. Hardy, a hearty vote of thanks was accorded Prof. Campbell for his able and instructive address.

Participles and Infinitives, by Mr. Ross, of Wallbridge, was next discussed. He handled his subject with ability, and as usual the subject elicited a great deal of discussion, in which many teachers took part.

The next subject was the "Teaching of History," by P. W. Fairman, Principal of Trenton Public School. Mr. Fairman gave an instructive address, outlining his plan of assigning the lesson, questioning and reviewing. He endeavors to create an interest in the subject by means of stories or facts outside the text books, concerning the persons and places connected with the lesson, emphasizes causes that led up to the events and the results that flowed therefrom as of more value than the events themselves.

The Institute then adjourned until Friday morning.

Friday Morning Session.

Institute opened at 9 a.m.

The first subject taken up was "Reading," by Mr. Simpkins, of Canifton, who explained his method of teaching, audibility, expression, emphasis, accent and inflection. He illustrated by one of his class, Miss Helen Simpkins, showing how he would assign a lesson and how he would hear the class read it. The reading of Miss Simpkins drew forth the hearty applause of the teachers present, for the manner in which she read the extracts assigned. Mr. Simpkins expected to have a class present, but, owing to the closing of his school on account of the smallpox, he was not able to get the class together.

"Map Geography," by Miss Urquhart, was the next subject. She illustrated her method of teaching this subject by giving a lesson on the map of Europe to a Fourth Class, consisting of Jean Boyce, Claire Allen, Elva Buchanan, Florence Thompson, Marjorie Waters, Jessie McGie, Helen Masson and Laura Bone. Before giving the lesson Miss Urquhart explained that she taught pupils to locate places on the maps, spell all names, but never gives a list of names to write down and memorize. The lesson was an exemplification of the thorough manner in which Miss Urquhart teaches this and all other subjects.

"Mental Arithmetic," by O. S. Hicks, Bayside, followed, who gave an explanation of his method of teaching this subject.

Mr. Ross, of Wallbridge, followed with a talk on the same subject.

"Arithmetic," by Mr. Bell, of Tweed, was next taken up. Arithmetic should at first be oral entirely, afterwards slowly introduce written arithmetic. Pupils should be made thoroughly and intelligently acquainted with the tables of weights and measures, which should be taught practically as far as possible. He would precede all written work by mental drill.

RUSSIANS BLOW UP CITY OF PORT DALNY

To Obstruct the Landing of the Japanese, They Say.

Viceroy Alexieff Telegraphs the Cheerful Intelligence That the Commercial Centre Is No More to His Master, the Czar—Docks, Piers and Wharves, Constructed at a Cost of Many Millions of Dollars Destroyed.

St. Petersburg, May 13.—Viceroy Alexieff telegraphed early yesterday to the Czar announcing that the Russians have blown up the docks and piers at Port Dalny, Liaotung Peninsula, presumably to render more difficult a Japanese landing at that point.

Blew Up the Whole City.

Later telegrams received here indicate that the whole of Port Dalny has been destroyed by the Russians.

Sketch of Port Dalny.

Port Dalny, on Talienwan Bay, on the east coast of the Liaotung Peninsula, was intended by Russia to be the chief commercial emporium of its eastern dominions. Fully equipped with all modern improvements, docks, warehouses and railroad facilities, it was opened to commerce in December, 1901.

Talienwan Bay is one of the finest deep-water harbors on the Pacific. It is free from ice in winter. Five large piers had been constructed, each supplied with numerous railroad tracks and immense warehouses and elevators, and a large breakwater was being constructed. Docks extended between the piers and along the shore for two miles. There were two first-class dry docks, one intended for ordinary ocean steamers, and the other designed to accommodate the largest vessels of war or commerce.

Constitution of the City.

The City of Dalny consists first of the administration portion, in which are located railroad shops, for making cars, etc., repair shops, shops for steamship construction and repair, with various offices of the port, steamships and railroad, residences of mechanics and general employes, together with hotels, parks, churches, schools, clubs and places of amusements. Then there is the foreign residence section, joining the general mercantile section, but further off towards the hills and on gradually sloping higher ground commanding a beautiful view of the bay.

Over $6,000,000 had been expended on the harbor system before the end of 1902, and it was estimated that the cost of completing the works would be nearly $20,000,000, but this does not in any way represent the total cost of the erection of this great commercial port, which, with Port Arthur distant about 20 miles, was leased by the Chinese Government to Russia in 1898.

Japs Spreading Out.

London, May 13.—Information yesterday came mostly from Russian sources, and appears to relate to the movements of three Japanese armies—that which crossed the Yalu River, another which landed in the neighborhood of Takushan on the east coast of the Liaoyang Peninsula and the third which occupied Pitzewo half-way between Takishan and Port Arthur.

From their general tenor it appears probable that the Japanese are advancing northward and eastward on various lines and presenting a wide front, having as an objective the line of the Manchurian Railway. More than the usual amount of mystery hangs around, the Japanese plan of campaign, and the action of the Pitzewo force, who were admittedly in possession of the railway at Polandieu in retiring without apparently attempting to damage it is inexplicable. That the situation is regarded as serious by the Russian authorities is evident by the abandonment of Dalny and the blowing up of the docks.

Japs Pursuing the Russians.

Tokio, May 13.—Later details of the Russian attack on Anju last Tuesday state that the fighting lasted all day. Japanese reinforcements arrived from Pingyang at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The Russians retired Wednesday morning with the approach of further Japanese reinforcements from Kosen. The Japanese are pursuing the Russians in the direction of Kaichong.

Clearing Harbor Entrance.

New York, May 13.—The World, quoting the St. Petersburg correspondent of The London Daily Express, says: "I learn from official sources that so far from blowing up their warships, which would be done only at the very last extremity, the garrison at Port Arthur is engaged in clearing the entrance of the harbor, which was more or less completely blocked by the stone-laden ships sent in by the Japanese for that purpose."

Russians Lost 50.

Tokio, May 13.—According to an official report the Russian casualties in the fighting at Anju on May 10 amounted to over 50 men. One officer and 12 men were killed, the others were wounded. The Russians engaged numbered 700, and were from the 15th Cossack Regiment. They reached Liaoyang by train and marched thence to Anju. "A majority of the enemy disliked fighting the Japanese," the official report says, "and their morale is low."

Battle Rumors.

St. Petersburg, May 13.—Rumors are widely current here that fighting is in progress at Port Arthur, but there is no official news confirming the reports. The Russians still hold Newchwang.

The Jap Purpose.

Shanhaikwan, May 13.—The main force of the Japanese army is said to be concentrated near Port Arthur with siege guns, and their intention is believed to be to attempt a repetition of the strategy of the naval and military forces of the United States before Santiago, and to drive the Russian fleet out to battle.

Firing South of Newchwang.

Shanhaikwan, May 13.—Firing is reported to have been heard to-day south of Newchwang.

Alexieff Drew Long Bow.

Tokio, May 13.—Official inquiry shows that Viceroy Alexieff's report, that railroad communication with Port Arthur has been restored since Monday, is untrue.

Junk Heard Explosions.

Seoul, May 13.—A junk that has arrived at Chemulpo brings a report that heavy explosions were heard at sea early yesterday morning. It is believed that these explosions occurred either at Port Arthur or Dalny.

Telegram That Failed.

St. Petersburg, May 13.—An attempt to send a response to a private telegram from Port Arthur, received yesterday (May 12), failed, the postoffice officials refusing to accept it.

Japan As Before.

Ottawa, May 13.—The following cablegram was received at the Japanese Consulate at 2.30 yesterday afternoon from Tokio:

"All transportation services in Japan, whether on land or sea, are being carried on without interruption. There has been a considerable influx of visitors into Japan recently, but the hotel accommodation in all the principal cities is quite ample. In other words, the condition of affairs in Japan to-day is perfectly normal. Since the war broke out peace and order have been absolutely maintained, there have been no disturbances, and intending visitors to Japan need fear neither danger nor inconvenience."

FUTURE FOR ELECTRICITY.

Hon. A. G. Blair Talks of the Railways That Are to Come and of the Commission's Work.

Toronto, May 13.—Hon. A. G. Blair of the Railway Commission was in two yesterday on business connected with the Commission. Before leaving for Ottawa at 10 o'clock last night, he stated that the business accumulating for the Commission was quite beyond expectation. He had not had time to pay any attention to the House in Ottawa, but believed it would be the end of June at least before Parliament rose. The appointment of a sub-committee of the Ontario Council had no connection, he said, with the Railway Commission, and, he supposed, would be occupied with the railways directly under the Ontario Government.

Electric Roads Have a Future.

Mr. Blair foresees a great career for electric railroading, but not in the immediate future.

"One thing that will tend to protract the period before the adoption of electric power, is the enormous investment of capital in the present system. The companies could not afford to relegate their locomotives to the scrap-heap until it has been clearly shown that greater profits can be acquired by new machinery. A good deal is being accomplished in an experimental way, but something more than experiment is necessary."

Concerning Freight Rates.

Enquired of about the Grand Trunk's hoist on freight rates, the result of threatened taxation and other causes.

"My position in regard to matters of that kind is judicial," Mr. Blair replied, "and I can say nothing about special cases. The Commission has power, of course, to fix rates for the railways, which they must not exceed, but each case must be settled on its merits. The railways must understand that they only injure themselves by making rates which discourage traffic.

"But the whole question is an exceedingly complicated one and full of difficulties."

KILLED HIS BROTHER.

Francois Marret Is Held at Canmore, Alta., on This Charge.

Canmore, Alta., May 13.—One of the most cold-blooded murders that have ever occurred in Alberta has just come to light here. About 5.30 Wednesday morning, Francois Marret, a Frenchman, went to his brother's ranch near here, and, it is believed, murdered his brother John. The murderer used an axe, while John was asleep, and his brains were scattered all over the bed. From evidence secured by the police, it appears that Francois, after killing his brother, threw the body out of the window and then carried it to a near-by creek, where he threw it into three feet of water with the face downwards. He then returned to the house and turned the mattress upside down. The body of the murdered man was found in the creek by Mine Physician Richardson, who immediately started the officers on the trail. The supposed murderer was found in a town hotel, and is now locked up in the barracks.

Gould Sent For Trial.

Toronto, May 13.—Joshua Gould must stand trial for alleged incendiarism. He entered no evidence for defence before the magistrate yesterday, but intimated an alibi. The fire occurred in his store, 227 Yonge street, at 3 o'clock on the morning of April 20, while the firemen were fighting the conflagration. Gould was allowed bail in two $500 sureties.

Big Land Sale.

Winnipeg, May 13.—It is rumored that the Local Government have disposed of 256,000 acres of Provincial lands to a Duluth company. The price is said to be over $1,600,000, and the sale is regarded as fairly satisfactory in price, and as showing the continued confidence of the American investors in values of Manitoba farm lands.

C.P.R. ELEVATOR BURNED

Fire at Fort William, Ont, Caused $2,000,000 Loss.

Half a Million Bushels of Wheat Destroyed—Heavy Rainfall Prevented One of the Worst Conflagrations in the History of the West—Incipient Fires in the Vicinity Drowned Out By Heaven's Waterworks—Citizen's Worked Well.

Port Arthur, May 13.—A heavy rainfall was all that saved Fort William from one of the worst conflagrations in the history of the west. A pile of debris is all that remains of elevator B of the C.P.R. system. About 12.45 p.m. yesterday an employe discovered fire in the eastern portion of the elevator. He gave an immediate alarm, elevators and locomotive whistles pealed forth warning notes and some hundreds of citizens hurried to the scene. At first only a faint glow of fire could be seen, but as the raging element gained headway the whole interior of the building became a fiery furnace and burst through the roof, shooting hundreds of feet into the air, resembling a volcano. It was one of the most wierd scenes imaginable.

Burned Rapidly.

The brigade turned out in quick order, but in five minutes after the alarm it was plainly seen that the great structure was doomed to destruction. By 1 o'clock the elevator was a mass of flames. As the collapse occurred fiery brands were hurled hundreds of feet, and only the great work of the firemen and citizens saved the town from a great conflagration.

Rain Prevented Spread.

Incipient fires sprang up in the vicinity, and if it had not been for a heavy downpour of rain, which had drenched everything, the result would have been terrible. Citizens worked like trojans throughout the night, and finally the fire was beaten back.

The collapse of the cupola and walls of the building sent up a mass of flames, and the wind increasing in strength sent sheets of flames across to Simpson street, breaking windows in stores and driving the spectators to shelter.

Subway Cut Off.

It was feared during the fire that the boilers would explode. To prevent the spread of the flames to the steel elevator adjoining the cement subway through which the conveyer belt runs was broken through and the subway filled with earth. If the fire had ever reached this, the city would have been demolished. The building collapsed about 4 o'clock, the debris falling into the tracks of the company and for hours congesting traffic, which was cleaned off in the morning.

In the elevator were stored five hundred thousand bushels of wheat, most of which went into the river. The loss will be two million dollars.

PAPER BOX FACTORY ABLAZE.

The Telfer M'f'g. Co., Toronto, Will Lose $18,000.

Toronto, May 13.—The Telfer Manufacturing Company's premises, corner Duncan and Pearl streets, was badly gutted by fire last night. The place is of three storeys and basement, and was built about two years ago. The firm moved in on July 1, 1902. The Telfer Company were manufacturers of paper bags and boxes. The contents were very inflammable.

The firm is composed of G. E. Shaw and Robert Northey. Mr. Shaw said that they were fully covered by insurance, on the building $13,000, and $22,000 on the plant and stock. The firm carried about $12,000 in stock, and valued the plant at $12,000. The building cost $18,500, and the loss to it is estimated at $8,000. It is thought the loss to stock will be $10,000. The plant is not damaged to any extent.

CHARTERED ERIK.

Steamer Will Convey Stores For Capt. Bernier's Expedition.

St. John's, Nfld., May 13.—The Canadian Government has chartered the sealing steamer Erik to proceed to Hudson Bay in July next with supplies for the steamer Neptune, now with the Canadian expedition sent for the purpose of enforcing the Canadian laws against American whalers.

The Erik will also convey stores to the north for the steamer Gauss, recently purchased from the German Government by Canada, in which ship Capt. Bernier will proceed to the north and annex a number of Arctic islands for the British crown, and will then attempt to reach the North Pole.

Banquet to Mr. Stratton.

Penetanguishene, May 13.—Thirty people attended a banquet at the Canada House here last night given by D. Davidson, M.P.P., in honor of the visit of Hon. J. R. Stratton, who came up to inspect the new asylum. Among the guests were: Thos. McCrossin, Esq., J. B. Tudhope, M.P.P., Orillia; Rev. S. Card, chaplain of the reformatory, and some of the friends of the Ontario Government.

Rumor From St. John.

St. John, N.B., May 13.—A rumor is in circulation here that former Governor McClellan will be re-appointed to the Senate. That Hon. H. R. Emmerson will be a candidate in Kings and Albert, and that C. W. Robinson, Speaker of the Assembly, will run in Westmoreland.

Ask no man's advice, but study the people you meet and avoid the habits and manners which you find annoying to you in others and cultivate the qualities you find are helpful and pleasing.

A Chance for Investors.

The Cherry Creek Copper King Mines, Ltd., owns and operates the O.K. group of six mineral claims situated about four and a half miles south-west of Kamloops, B.C.

The property has exceptional advantages and is exceedingly valuable, and as the surface indications on this vein are identical with those at the workings on the Iron Mask, a property owned by the B.C. Exploring Syndicate, and adjoining it on the west. The following extracts from the Chairman's address to the shareholders at their general meeting held in London, Eng., on the 18th Sept. last, will give an idea as to the prospective value of the O.K. group:

"On the Iron Mask at Kamloops we have expended £26,000 and I think we may allow that this item is splendidly represented by the mine we have in process of development at Kamloops, and I believe you will credit us with having given you twenty shillings for every pound expended on that mine. * * * * * *

"If it is true that we have as we believe we have, a practically unlimited body of 5 per cent. ore in our mine at the Iron Mask, then in the words of one of the most eminent smelting millionaires in America, whom I had the pleasure of meeting at Salt Lake City, 'You have got millions.' * * * * "Kamloops is an absolutely ideal position for the erection of a smelter and the working of a mine. The railway, the water, the fuel and the grade of the earth surface, and the self fluxing nature of the ore all seem about as desirable as they could be. * * *

These extracts are from an address by a hard-headed London financier to equally hard-headed business men, who are developing their property with a view to large profits, under the direction of an expert mining engineer.

Owing to the proximity of the mine to the railway, a short line of aerial tramway would be easy of construction and would enable the company to transport their ore to the railway at a cost not exceeding ten cents per ton. Freight and treatment charges for the class of ore obtained are exceedingly favorable and are quoted by the Trail and Granby smelters at $6.25 per ton, so that the entire cost of mining, freighting and smelting would not exceed $5.00 per ton. The ore is a high grade copper gold assaying from 10 per cent. to 24 per cent. copper and from $6 to $22 gold per ton, and is in great demand at the smelter owing to its fluxing qualities.

The near future will see the erection of a large copper smelting plant to treat the ores of this district, both the B.C. Exploring Syndicate and the Inland Smelter Company having already selected and purchased sites. The completion of these enterprises will insure the lowest possible rates for reduction of local ores. The company has secured a clear title to the property on the most favorable terms, the former owners showing their confidence in the mine by accepting the entire purchase price in fully paid up shares of the company.

After paying all the expenses in connection with the incorporation, the amounts due on options secured by the company and the purchase price of the O.K. group, there remains in the treasury two hundred thousand shares, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be applied to the development of the properties, now owned or to be hereafter acquired by the company. There is absolutely no promoters stock, and the issue advertised in another column is the first opportunity offered the public to invest in the shares of the Company.

MIKADO'S MEN ARE NOW MARCHING ON LIAOYANG.

Japanese Are, However, Moving Forward With Great Care.

First Army Erecting Strong Fortifications Six Miles Below Lieu-Chenkuan—Kuropatkin Informs the Czar That the Jap Advance Has Begun in Earnest—Jap Torpedo Boat No. 48 Blown Up Near Dalny.

[illegible]g, May 14.—The advance [illegible] the 1st Japanese army has [illegible] six miles below Lienchen[illegible]n the road to Liaoyang. It [illegible] making any further advance, but is erecting strong fortifications. The Japanese movements were made with the greatest care.

A persistent report is current here that a Russian squadron of cavalry succeeded in getting behind the Japanese, who were several squadrons strong, and in occupying Kuandiansan. The unexpected appearance of the Russians caused the Japanese to immediately evacuate the town and retire toward the Yalu. The report is believed to be correct.

Prof. Karavieff, who has arrived here on a train from Port Arthur, claims that he saw near Polandien station the body of a Russian soldier, one of the railway patrol, cut into quarters.

In a skirmish near Polandien, one of the patrol was wounded. On the Japanese approaching the soldier feigned death and a Japanese officer passing shot him in the mouth.

Col. Elshen, who has returned from a reconnaisance of the district near the River Taitsi was attacked May 9 by Chinese bandits. One Cossack and two porters were killed by the bandits, who were driven off.

Kuropatkin Sees Them.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—From a despatch received by the Czar from Gen. Kuropatkin, it is evident the Japanese advance towards Liaoyang has now begun in earnest. At dawn on May 11 the Japanese moved out of Fengwangcheng by the Liaoyang road and proceeded to drive the Russians out of the villages held by them in that neighborhood. The Cossacks sustained some loss.

On May 10 Japanese infantry detachments about 10,000 strong, with fifty to eighty guns, advanced towards Siuyen, an important town about twenty miles due west of Fengwangcheng. In this movement they were supported by the force landed at Takushan, who are evidently designed to form the left wing of the Japanese united army of invasion. The effect of the combined operations will be the turning on the south of the chain of mountains behind which Gen. Kuropatkin is massing the Russian troops.

A private telegram also announces that a Japanese force has been landed near Newchwang and was within twelve miles of that town. The Russians have now only two regiments in Newchwang, the remainder of the garrison having been withdrawn to Mukden. In their retreat the Russians are burning the railroad stations and such foodstuffs as they are unable to take with them.

Where Japs Are.

London, May 14.—The Morning Post's Shanghai correspondent says: "The Japanese first army has occupied Aiyang.

"Viceroy Alexieff has sent a note to the Tartar general of Manchuria, complaining that the Chinese villagers refused to sell supplies to Russian troops, and demanding that the general issue a proclamation ordering the natives to supply foodstuffs.

"Some of the Chinese Viceroys are anxious for war with Russia."

LOSE THEIR FIRST WARSHIP.

Jap Torpedo Boat No. 48 Blown Up Near Dalny.

Tokio, May 14.—The Japanese torpedo boat No. 48 was destroyed while removing mines from Kerr Bay, north of Talienwan (Port Dalny), Thursday. Seven men were killed and seven were wounded. This is the first warship Japan has lost in the war.

How the Boat Was Lost.

The torpedo boat was lost during a series of bombardments and surveying operations at Talienwan, Deep and Kerr Bays, by Admiral Kataoka, commander of the third squadron. The Admiral arrived at Kerr Bay early in the morning and detached the cruisers Itsukushima, Nisshin and Miyako, ordering them to bombard the land batteries, while a flotilla of torpedo boats swept the harbor of mines. A second flotilla of torpedo boats, which had been engaged in guarding Port Arthur the previous night, joined the squadron and began the work of surveying the harbor. The Miyako discovered a company of Russian infantry, with a detachment of cavalry, on shore, and dispersed them. The survey was completed at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Cut Telegraph Line.

Two torpedo boats that were reconnoitering and removing mines in the west shore of Kerr Bay discovered a telegraph line running along the Takushan peninsula. In order to destroy it Lieut. Hotte and four sailors landed and scaled the heights under the protection of the guns of the torpedo boats and cut the line. The Japanese vessel then discovered three bodies of Russian troops, one large and two small ones, whereupon the squadron advanced close to the shore and shelled them. The Miyako, which was reconnoitering in Deep Bay, discovered a Russian guard post on a mountain the northwest of Robinson promontory and destroyed it.

Dispersed Russian Force.

A Russian force, estimated at 10 companies, took refuge behind a eminence, but it was dispersed by the Japanese. Torpedo boats numbers 48 and 49 discovered a large mine in Kerr Bay. The various attempts to blow it up failed, and it suddenly exploded itself, cutting No. 48 in two. The torpedo boat sank in seven minutes. The squadron hurried boats to the rescue and picked up the wounded. Three other mines were discovered and exploded. The squadron completed its operations at 6 o'clock in the evening and returned to its base.

Port Arthur Cut Off.

St. Petersburg, May 14.—Both telegraph and railroad communication with Port Arthur have been cut off.

TURKS BURNED VILLAGES.

Armenians Slaughtered Throughout the District of Sassoun.

Paris, May 14.—An official despatch to the Foreign Office from Constantinople confirms the reports that Turkish troops have burned villages throughout the Sassoun district of Armenia, killing the inhabitants. The French Ambassador, M. Constans, has joined with the Russian and British Ambassadors in sending Consuls to Erberum, in the hope of limiting the destruction and bloodshed. However, the official advices, although brief, indicate the work of exterminating the Armenians occupying the mountainous district of Sassoun is practically accomplished.

Joint Affliction.

When the Halliday twins were babies their mother always referred to them collectively. This was natural enough, for they shared everything, from their baby carriage to chicken pox.

As they grew a little older, however, there were slight differences between Elnora and Eudora, but Mrs. Halliday took no account of them. When they had reached the age of seven, she still referred to them in a way which struck casual listeners as amusing.

"Where are Elnora and Eudora?" asked a cousin, who had come to spend the afternoon.

"The twins have gone with their father to have one of their teeth out," said Mrs. Halliday calmly. — Youth's Companion.

Success may sometimes come unexpectedly, but work alone can hold it.—Murray.

CANADA'S MILITIA FORCE.

The Militia Gazette is apparently growing anxious about the chances for successful recruiting this year. The country is as busy or busier than ever. The farmers, mindful of the pinch of last year, are already beginning to cry out because of the shortage of farm labor. In the villages and small towns all those not already employed will have good opportunity for work in railway construction, if they do not care for the factory or the farm.

These are facts, says the Gazette, to which we cannot shut our eyes and recruiting officers may just as well admit to themselves at once that they have a hard task indeed before them. On the other hand, however, the promised increase of pay should do not a little to counteract the difficulties, for many a man will go out for seventy-five cents a day who would stay at home if offered but fifty.

Just what the increase will be is not yet settled, but the general opinion seems to be that it will reach the seventy-five cent mark. Now we shall find at once whether seventy-five cents a day is enough to get what we require. If it is not, let us have the dollar, and if that be insufficient let us go on raising the amount until we get the men or are forced to the conclusion that a militia force is impossible in Canada.

There is no use mincing matters, forty thousand men is a force all to small as it is to stiffen up the large body that would be called to the colors in case of war, and to permit a continuance of a paper force of that number with only about thirty thousand effectives would be an unpardonable blunder.

HOW FREE TRADE WORKS IN BRITAIN.

The London Daily Mail tells the following story illustrative of Cobdenite folly and madness:—

> "The methods of free trade are sometimes hard to understand, but a certain incident which has occurred at Glasgow seems to cap the record of Cobdenite illogicality.
>
> "A tender for certain electrical machinery was recently awarded by the municipality to the lowest tender. This was made by a German firm, whose price was £10,076, against the lowest British tender of £11,750. Thereupon the statistics in which the free traders rejoice were produced and used against them. They prove, of course, that the German worker earns a fabulously small sum by fabulously long hours of work; that he lives entirely on black bread, horseflesh and other horrors, and is generally a cruelly-exploited person. The municipality was driven by this tempest of literature to stipulate that the wages paid by the German firm should be the same as those paid in Glasgow, when a surprising fact was disclosed. Instead of being lower than British wages, the German rate per hour was actually a farthing higher.
> "We ascertain not the slightest doubt that the members of the Glasgow corporation would strongly resent the suggestion that they were protectionists. The essential free trade idea is that the purchaser should be free to buy in the cheapest market without troubling himself what price is paid in that market for labor. But here we have an attempt made by a political body to dictate the rate of wages in a foreign country, where it can exercise no authority or supervision, at the demand of the worker in England. In other words, the Scotch worker rebels against free trade as Cobden knew it, and to oblige him the Glasgow corporation acts as a solemn farce."

Yet the orthodox Cobdenites (and we have some of them in Canada, more's the pity) will go on blaming the falling-off in British industry to everything except the right thing. The fact that German manufacturers are able to undersell them in their own markets would convince any sensible man, but a Cobdenite will not see anything but that which he wants to see.

At this charming season of the year, when nature is putting on her brightest tints, the love of gardening, latent in the breast of every man, becomes so strong that only the thought of the work attached to it prevents him from digging up his premises and going in for horticulture. It is pleasant, as we watch our neighbors handle the spade and rake, to read the following tribute to gardening, from the pen of the immortal Francis Bacon: "God Almighty first planted a garden; and, indeed, it is the purest of human pleasures; it is the greatest refreshment to the spirits of men, without which buildings and palaces are but gross handiworks; and a man shall ever see that, when ages grow to civility and elegancy, men come to build stately, sooner than to garden finely; as if gardening were the greatest perfection."

The following table of the main estimates since 1896-97 shows how reckless the Liberal party became after being returned to power:

1896-97	$41,230,681
1897-98	44,607,238
1898-99	44,912,571
1899-00	46,286,550
1900-01	49,068,391
1901-02	50,398,823
1902-03	53,361,638
1903-04	57,109,974
1904-05	62,935,338

This is not all. Supplementary estimates have to be brought down yet, when it will be found that $70,000,000 will be nearer the mark. Who will dare say now that the Liberals are not liberal in dealing with the people's money?

• • •

A prominent gentleman of this city is very much exercised over a certain matter which is alleged to exist, namely, the forcing or "cramming" of children who attend at least one of our public schools. This gentleman, talking to The Intelligencer, says it is a fact that boys and girls, some under, some rather over twelve, are made to attend school from 8 to 9 in the morning, and also on Saturdays, in order to do extra "cramming" for the Midsummer examinations, this being done, as the party in question expresses it, "to enhance the reputation of some teacher who, perhaps, thinks he or she must "pass" a certain percentage of pupils in order to hold his or her job."

If there is truth in the above story, and it is vouched for on what we consider gilt-edged testimony, it seems to us that the authorities should deal with the matter at once. Education is a great thing, but the boys and girls of Canada are not hothouse plants, to be brought to a certain point of perfection by artificial methods. The question of health is one which should, and does, override that of education. The regular school hours are quite long enough; to lengthen them might be to draw on the vitality of growing children and bring about anaemia, St. Vitus' dance and other maladies which follow in the train of too hard study and close confinement on the part of children.

Many teachers have expressed the opinion that the system of judging a teacher by the number of pupils he or she "passes" is altogether wrong, "but what," they say, "can we do? The system is not fixed by us. So long as results of that kind are expected from us we must continue to do all in our power to keep up with the procession."

• • •

We note that the South Hastings Teachers' Institute, at its session yesterday, appointed a committee to deal with the question of promotion examinations. It can reasonably be expected that the committee, being composed of experienced and capable ladies and gentlemen, will bring in a report fairly covering the case, and that the authorities, when the recommendations embodied in that report are placed before them, will give them the consideration they deserve. The report in question, we venture to believe, cannot be brought in too quickly and in the meantime the "cramming" and working over hours to which certain children of this city are alleged to be subjected should be stopped, and stopped short.

• • •

A writer in the Toronto News says: "The ballot used in the provincial elections of Ontario is one of the greatest frauds ever perpetrated on the electorate, and it is to be hoped that steps will be taken at once to have a secret ballot introduced in its place." This writer should know that the Conservative minority in the Ontario Legislature has repeatedly tried to amend the law and has as repeatedly been voted down by what is called the Liberal majority. Turn them out and a cure will be found.

• • •

The Montreal Star says: "It is not Parliamentary to say on the floor of the House that an honorable member lies. But unfortunately it is quite Parliamentary, and getting more and more Parliamentary for an honorable member to lie."

• • •

Then it adds: "The only people whom the law does not hold responsible for their utterances are lunatics and members of Parliament."

• • •

Fortunately for the Star, the law of libel has been changed. Formerly the greater the truth the greater the libel. Now truth can be pleaded in justification.

• • •

Mr. Ingram, M.P., has a level head on his shoulders. In discussing in Parliament the proposition of the manager of the Grand Trunk Railway to increase rates, he said he "believed the extravagance of the Ontario Government, which had led it to impose $75,000 additional taxes on the railways per year, would prove a barrier to the Railway Commission in fixing lower rates." Certainly if Ross taxes the road the road will take it out of the people.

A despatch from Montreal says that at least 3,500 Italian railway laborers, thrown out of work by the retrenchment on the railways, are stranded in Montreal, sleeping in the open air and on the verge of starvation, many of them having little to eat but dandelions. They are victims of the "padrone" system, which is a curse to any country.

The fickle French! A few years ago they were ready to almost idolize Col. Marchand, the hero of Fashoda; now he has just served 30 days in prison and been kicked out of the army for a breach of discipline. Marchand's reputation lasted almost as quick as that of the Yankee idol, Dewey.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more pone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Billious headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

DR. TANNER WAS BEATEN.

Wonderful Survival—Dog Lived 47 Days Without Food.

Mr. Thomas Curry, who lives four miles below Prescott, has probably the most remarkable collie dog on record. This collie being a household pet was not addicted to roaming, and never left the farm where he was useful rounding up cows in summer. But on January 28, Collie having got ponderously fat from lying round the kitchen stove, took a trip out around the premises. He sniffed around behind an old shed, and suddenly felt an earthquake. When he came to after his fright, he found that he was down in a nine-foot hole, half buried with snow and a few rotten timbers. Above him he saw the bright blue sky, and about him the walls of an old dry well that used to water the cattle long before he became a dog.

Collie had never been in a well before. He howled at the sky till the stars came out. Then he rolled himself in his fat and went to sleep, dreaming that he was behind the kitchen stove. He woke to find himself still in the well, with not even a toad or a worm to keep him company. He howled again till his lungs were sore and the stars came again! Nobody came.

Collie decided that he would peacefully glide off to the land where all good doggies go. But he didn't. He stayed hungry four days. Then his stomach went to sleep, and he began to live on the fat he had stored up round the kitchen stove. He kept on doing this while the moon got full twice and waned again. He didn't notice the moon. He just slept and let it snow on him.

Now this was a Scotch collie; but on the 17th of Ireland he heard a bumping sound. A little girl's face peered down the well. She was looking for a puppy that had got lost. By accident she had discovered Collie, whose peepers were just about done blinking. The farmer came and pulled him out. He was as thin as a washboard, but still breathing—after forty-seven days without food!

A Series of Continental Ifs.

Canadians who are worrying about the possibility of annexation to the United States may soothe themselves with the following ingenious chain of reasonings by Charles M. Harvey in The National Magazine:

"If at a certain critical juncture Presidents Madison or Monroe had shown a little less timidity or a little more historical imagination, the Alaskan boundary controversy recently settled would never have taken place, and all of the present British North America would probably be United States territory today. All this would have come about if either of these Presidents had given to John Jacob Astor the slight measure of recognition which he requested for his fur-trading post at Astoria, near the mouth of the Columbia River, and which he had good reason to assume ought to be furnished. . . . .

"To sum up the follies of the Washington Government and their consequence, had Madison in 1812 granted to Astor the permission to arm a vessel in his defence, the post at Astoria would undoubtedly have maintained itself throughout the war. Failing in this, had Madison in 1816 given to Astor the protection of the flag and a squad of soldiers, the Astoria post would have been re-established. Had Monroe done this when the appeal was made in 1817, the same thing would have taken place. In either case, the long wrangle with England about the title to the Oregon country, which lasted till 1846, when she withdrew from the region south of the forty-ninth parallel, would have been averted, and our claim would never have been seriously disputed. Another consequence would have been that Astor would have extended his posts up to the line held by his ally, the Russian Fur Company, up in the territory of Alaska; all of the present Provinces of British Columbia and Yukon west of the continental divide, with an area of 400,000 square miles, would have been United States territory, and England would have been shut out from access to the Pacific."

Travels of Whales.

Addressing the Academy of Science of Christiania, Professor Goldlob said recently that the whales that swim about the islands which lie off the coast of Norway and Finland in March and April travel immense distances. In May they turn up at the Azores or even at the Bermudas, and sometimes pay a visit, to the West Indies. They swim fast, for in June they are back again off Norway. Some of these whales have been known to bring back evidences of where they have been, for harpoons of the peculiar kind used off the coast of South America have been found stuck in them.

Brain Weights.

Professor Marchand of Marburg has accumulated the largest number of brain weights ever published. He gives a thorough analysis of 1,169 cases. He says he finds the average weight of the brain at birth of a male child is 360 grams and of a female child 353 grams. The maximum brain weight is usually attained about the twentieth year, when the male's average is about 1,400 grams. The female maximum is usually reached about the seventeenth year, when the average is 1,275 grams.

The Modern Dandy.

Lord Arthur Hill, says a London cable, is anxious to relieve the ordinary sombreness of the masculine grab. He appeared at a public function the other day wearing light check trousers and a cutaway black coat of original style. In the waistcoat bright crimson was the predominating hue, while across its wide expanse he wore a large watch chain. A black and white tie of ample proportions was adorned by a turquoise and diamond pin.

Commands British Forces in S. A.

The St. James' Gazette says of General Sir Henry Hildyard, who has been appointed to succeed Sir Ian Hamilton in command of the British forces in South Africa: "General Hildyard is something more than a hard-hitting fighter. He is a strategist and tactician of the first order. His reputation was immensely enhanced by his brilliant work in South Africa. Although he had men who could not, as he told the War Commission, take a hand at snap-shooting, and many who were soft and unformed, he did wonders. 'Linesman' summed him up in one of his admirable appreciations: 'There is no general officer in this army who has more speedily, certainly and deservedly won the confidence of his subordinates than General Hildyard, from the day when he saved as many lives of his brigade as could be saved from the devastating inferno raging around them at Colenso, by his timely adoption of extended order, to the moment when that same brigade, with others, was triumphantly nursed by him on to the knobby summits of Almond's Nek.' "

Startled the Englishmen.

A London paper relates that an enterprising Yankee came over to England and decided to open a shop in Birmingham. He obtained premises next door to a man who also kept a shop of the same description, but was not very pushing in his business methods. The methods of the Yankee, however, caused the older trader to wake up, and with the spirit of originality strong upon him he affixed a notice over his shop with the words, "Established fifty years," painted in large letters. Next day the Yankee replied to this with a notice over his store to this effect: "Established yesterday. No old stock."

Licorice.

Licorice was once highly esteemed medicinally, and its cultivation in England began early in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. It was thought a sovereign remedy for coughs and at one time was a very profitable crop. Its name comes from two Greek words signifying "sweet root." The root was first imported from Spain. The extract of licorice is still used in candy and lozenges and, it is said, must be made from the dried roots, otherwise it is not so bright and clear in color.

The Polite Formula.

Little four-year-old Margie was a model of politeness.

"How is your baby brother this morning, Margie?" asked the doctor when she opened the door in answer to his ring.

"Oh, he's dead, thank you!" she replied.

Knows It All.

"Biggins is very opinionated. He thinks that nobody can teach him anything."

"Well," answered Miss Cayenne quietly, "I guess he is about right."

Time never drags, nor does life ever seem monotonous to those who are always working, thinking, learning and growing.

YOUNG LADIES, READ THIS.

If you are bothered with pimples, rashes or ugly blotches on your face, if your complexion is sallow, it's an evidence that you require Ferrozone to tone up your blood. One Ferrozone tablet taken at meals makes the complexion like peach bloom, cheeks soon become rosy, eyes bright, you'll be the picture of health. Thousands of ladies keep up their youthful appearance with Ferrozone, why not you? Price 50c at druggists.

Are you feeding your pigs on the food that develops brain and muscle and your children on the food that simply produces fat and heat?

No farmer wants to increase the brain and muscle elements in his cattle. Yet through ignorance of the laws of Nature he feeds them on the outer coatings of wheat (which contain the brain and muscle-producing elements) only grinding the starchy kernel of the grain (which practically contains only the fat and heat-producing elements of wheat) into white flour to make bread for human beings.

To be physically and mentally fit you require every element in the whole of the wheat. The only food you can get it in is —the only naturally organized food in the world. The shredding process makes it light and porous, thus presenting the greatest surface to the action of the digestive fluids, which makes it easy of digestion.

SHREDDED WHOLE WHEAT BISCUIT AND TRISCUIT

The Natural Foods

As whole wheat contains in exact proportions every element required by the human body, it follows that it must necessarily nourish every element of the body.

Triscuit the electrically baked whole wheat wafer, which contains no yeast, fats or chemicals, takes the place of ill-nourishing bread or crackers and makes ideal toast.

Make Triscuit your daily bread.

Biscuit and Triscuit should be heated before eating.

The Kidney Pill

No Questions Asked.

Old Brother Cooley is a colored philosopher, but he is superstitious in the extreme. He tells this story:

"I once wuz in a house that wuz haunted, but I didn't know it. Dar wuz a bright fire burnin' in de room I wus in, w'en all er a sudden de do' opened, en a man with his throat cut shuck his head at me! Now, I knowed right well it wuz a ha'nt, en de only thing ter do wus ter ax him, 'In de name er de Lawd, what does you want?'"

"And did you ask him?"

"No, suh! Bless God I wuz too feared dat he'd tell me!"

Mortified to Death.

"Of course, doctor, German measles are never serious."

"I never met but one fatal case."

"Fatal?"

"Yes. It was a Frenchman, and when he discovered it was German measles he had mortification set in."

Stuck on Himself.

Kate—Charley and Bessie are very fond of each other. Bertha—Rather say they are both very fond of Charley. It is a case of two souls with but a single thought, you know.

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER FIVE HOURS.

Dr. Bouchard, the eminent French physician, has furnished facts which show that if food is retained in the stomach more than five hours it becomes fermentative and putrefactive,—not digestive,—and that this is the starting-point of disease.

Eating too much starchy foods

This food mass becomes putrid.

Generates gas.

The stomach dilates.

There is a seeming lump-weight, burning, or belching.

Blood, fibre, tissue, and cells begin to absorb poison from the stomach and alimentary canal instead of nutriment, and right here is the producing cause of Constipation, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, Uterine and Ovarian troubles, Rheumatism, Gout, Nervous and Mental Distress, Bronchitis, Heart Affection, Pulmonary Consumption, Jaundice, Liver and Skin Diseases.

Inability of the stomach to properly handle food is mainly caused by overeating, drinking too much liquid, gases generated from slow digestion, preventing the mixing of food with gastric juice to properly prepare it for use in the body.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt worked for years in perfecting Anti-Pill, so that it would guarantee regular stomach action, and its astonishing cures are proof of its mission being fulfilled; of its being the greatest System Treatment in the world. 50 cents of druggists, or mailed to any address by WILSON-FYLE Co., Niagara Falls, Ont. FIREBUG AT PORT ARTHUR.

Citizens Aroused By Many Signs of Deep Laid Plans.

Port Arthur, May 14.—A firebug is at work in town. Lately several incipient fires have occurred, which have led to the belief that some person is engaged in the nefarious work of setting fire to buildings. Thursday suspicion was turned to certainty by the discovery of a blaze, which occurred at Dalton's warehouse. Oil had been poured in an opening around the door from the outside and a match applied. The miscreant had barely done his work and escaped when the fire was discovered. The same night an attempt was made to burn Victoria Rink, but the fire was put out in time to save it from considerable loss. On investigation a pile of chips covered with oil was found in the building ready to be set on fire.

Fire at Port Arthur.

Port Arthur, May 14.—The Superior Brewery and Malting Company's Brewery was gutted by fire last night, entailing a loss of $8,000. It is thought to be the work of a firebug.

Twenty Houses Burned.

Montreal, May 14.—Shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a fire broke out in the block of residences in St. Margaret street, St. Henri, and before the firemen could get the flames under control some twenty small houses of the block had been destroyed. The loss will fall upon about twelve proprietors and three families have been made homeless. The loss will be heavy, as the houses were only partly insured.

Shingle Mill Burned.

Uhthoff, May 4.—The lumber, stave and shingle mill belonging to G. H. Smith at this place was burned down early yesterday morning. It is a complete loss of $3,000. No insurance.

MORE TROOPS FOR THIBET.

Forces in India Warned to Prepare For Service.

Simla, British India, May 14.—Half a battalion of Fusiliers and half a battalion of naval infantry with four ten-pounder guns have been warned to prepare for service in Thibet.

The British force, which is halted at Gyangtse, about seventy miles from Lhassa, consists of 850 infantry drawn from the Eighth Gurkhas and the Twenty-Third and Thirty-Second Pioneers, Sikh Regiments, two ten-pounder screw guns, two seven-pounders, two Maxims and 150 mounted infantry. This force is under the command of Brigadier-General Macdonald, and acts as escort to Colonel Younghusband, the Indian Government's political agent. General Macdonald, being for the moment employed on the line of communications with forwarding the supplies, the actual force with Colonel Younghusband is about 500 men.

At the Y.M.C.A. Convention.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 14.—An important question of policy was decided at yesterday's sessions of the thirty-fifth international convention of the Young Men's Christian Association. Those who favored taking the power of dealing with the railroads for the railroad Y. M. C. A.'s from the international committee, and placing it with the State and local committees were defeated by a large majority.

At the Y. M. C. A. Convention, Hon. George W. Ross, Premier of the Ontario Legislature, spoke during the day.

AN AFRICAN ADVENTURE.

Paul du Chaillu's First Encounter With a Monster Gorilla.

In his "Explorations and Adventures In Equatorial Africa" Paul du Chaillu tells of his first encounter with a gorilla.

"We saw an immense one coming straight toward us out of the woods," he wrote. "As he came he gave vent to terrible howls of rage, as much as to say, 'I am tired of being pursued and will face you.'

"It was a lone male, the kind which is always the most ferocious. This fellow made the woods resound with his roar, which is an awful sound, resembling the muttering of distant thunder. He was about twenty yards off when we first saw him. I was about to take aim and bring him down where he stood when my most trusted man, Malaonen, stopped me, saying in a whisper, 'Not time yet.'

"We stood in silence, gun in hand. The gorilla looked at us for a minute or so, then beat his breast with his gigantic arms—and what arms he had!—then gave another howl of defiance and advanced upon us. How horrible he looked!

"'Not yet,' whispered Malaonen.

"Again the gorilla made an advance upon us. Now he was not twelve yards off. His face was distorted with rage. His huge teeth were ground against each other so that we could hear the sound. The skin of the forearm was drawn forward and backward rapidly, making his hair move up and down and giving a fiendish expression to his hideous face. Again he roared, a sound which shook the woods like thunder. It seemed as if I could feel the earth trembling under my feet. The beast, looking us in the eye and beating his breast, advanced again.

"'Don't fire too soon,' said Malaonen. 'If you don't kill him he will kill you.'

"This time he came within eight yards of us before he stopped. I was breathing fast with excitement as I watched the huge creature. Malaonen only said, 'Steady!' as the gorilla came up. When he stopped Malaonen said:

"'Now!'

"And before the beast could utter the roar for which he was opening his mouth three musket balls were in his body. He fell dead almost without a struggle."

Looking For Daughter.

Brantford, May 14.—Mrs. Charles Truckle of Vanessa township is looking for her daughter, Rosa Truckle, who disappeared from home Wednesday. She telegraphed the local police, requesting them to arrest W. McDonald, who is supposed to know something of the girl's whereabouts. Rosa Truckle is about 14 years old, and the police are working on the case.

Wanted in Dawson.

Ottawa, May 14.—Lieut.-Col. Sherwood, C.M.G., Commissioner of Dominion Police, has returned from St. Louis, where he served the necessary papers for the arrest of T. Burpee, wanted in Dawson on a charge of theft. Mr. Burpee intends fighting extradition and is under arrest in St. Louis.

Drowned in Sturgeon Creek.

Winnipeg, May 14.—F. Pelletier lost his life in Sturgeon Creek, near Edmonton, recently. He attempted to shoot Saskatchewan Rapids, but the boat upset and he was drowned.

Albert Kumple, sectionman, aged 22 years, was killed by a train near Savane.

Will Recover.

Kingston, May 14.—George Shortt, son of Prof. Shortt, was resting quietly yesterday afternoon and the doctors announce that all danger of the shock proving fatal is at an end.

THE BIG SHOW COMING.

RINGLING BROTHERS EXHIBIT THE RAREST COLLECTION OF ANIMALS IN THE WORLS.

The announcement that Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows will exhibit in Belleville, June 4, is one that will be hailed with delight by every man, woman and child in our city and the surrounding country. "All the world loves a circus," and this is especially true of the one owned by Ringling Brothers, which is transported from city to city in five splendidly equipped trains—85 double length cars in all —which are equal in size and carrying capacity to 170 ordinary cars. The Ringling Brothers, scrupulously honest in their various systems of advertising have long made the unchallenged claim of possessing the biggest, best and most entertaining collection of high class novelty features and rare wild animals in all the world. This is especially true of the mammoth menagerie, which contains 108 cages, lairs, dens and tanks of beast, fowl and aquatic species from every jungle, plain and ocean on the face of the earth. Prominent among the hundreds of perfect zoological specimens in this unrivaled department are two beautiful giraffes, the last of an almost extinct race. These animals were secured at an enormous cost and to the Ringling Brothers they are priceless. Scientists and students of natural history say they are the lone living members of their kind. In order to keep them alive in the trying climate of the United States they are given even more attention than a baby secures from it proud and loving parents. The giraffes are transported in specially constructed cages, the tops of which can be raised and lowered at will. Cages of this kind are indispensable on account of the great height of the animals. The walls of the cages are thickly padded with curled hair and fine wire springs to prevent possible injury to the occupants. Their food is prepared according to scientific rules laid down by famous veterinarians. Another feature of this colossal menagerie, one that is in keeping with the progressiveness that is a part of the Ringling Brothers' success as amusement projectors, is "Baby Boo" the only baby elephant bred, born and successfully reared in captivity in North America. "Baby Boo" was born at Baraboo, Wis., is just 30 inches high, weighs but 119 pounds and is as cute and full of life as a fox terrier puppy. She is the pride of the menagerie attaches and with her fond mother is the pampered pet of the herd of forty big and little elephants carried by Ringling Brothers this year. The forty brutes, the largest in all animal creation, are more than half of all the elephants in America. The infant member of this big herd is as fat and as round as a butter ball fresh from the churn, and greatly enjoys the attention showered upon her by the thousands of children who daily visit the big tent. The rhinoceros is another rare animal in his interesting menagerie. It has been many years since an animal of this kind has been exhibited in either a circus or a zoological collection, and the one in Ringling Brothers' circus is said to be the sole survivor of his kind. The gnu or horned horse, the eland, the yack from the highlands of Thibet, the monster hippopotamus, the black vlarch from South Africa, the cassowary seals, and sea lions, the pure white Chinese pea fowls, and the sacred cattle of India are to be found only in this menagerie, which also contains magnificent specimens of the lion, tiger, puma, hyena, buffalo and panther, herds of camels, fifty species of deer, and other animals and birds from every quarter of the globe. This collection of the flower of the animal kingdom is worth a fortune alone and stands alone in its magnitude and diversity of subject. Ringling Brothers present also 375 aerial, menage, equestrian and acrobatic artists in their circus performance, 50 famous clowns and the most lavish spectacular production ever attempted, a superb presentation of Jerusalem and the Crusades, in which 1,200 characters are shown. Two complete performances and a magnificent free street pageant are given daily. Admission tickets and numbered reserved seats may be purchased on show day at the same prices as charged on the show grounds at Riggs' music store.

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

failed to wipe the blade, and it is such a good set that I hate to part with them."

These words had not the slightest effect upon the American, who holds the two swords, one in either hand, weighing them thus.

"Choose the one that is stained—that has stood the test, and may be lucky," whispers Sandy.

"Say rather accursed, my friend, since it is marked by the blood of a brave man. I'll take the same blade Lord Carmorgan handled. Since a Briton failed to teach the Russian bear a lesson with it, we'll see what Brother Jonathan can do. Hold it for me, Mr. Grimes."

No one makes any remark, though secretly the baron is fuming, while both Mr. Grimes and Sandy chuckle at the words of the traveller. It is patent that Mynheer Joe has gauged the make-up of his antagonist to a dot, and will be able to take care of him.

Both principals in the contemplated affair proceed to business. Coats and vests are removed. Joe arranges his attire just as in the gymnasium, placing the footholds over his shoes, tightening a belt around his waist and fastening up both sleeves.

The baron observes his movements with a curiousity that shows itself upon his face. He discovers that his American antagonist knows more than he gave him credit for and perhaps for the first time the startling thought flashes through his brain that this man may be a revelation to him.

His practical eye takes in the wonderful wrist of Mynheer Joe and the superb forearm. These points give promise of astonishing supple sword play if in the possession of a master.

The baron feels concern—something that never bothered him before when about to enter a little affair of this kind, for the duello has been a pastime to the Russian, feeling that he was a sure winner from the start.

Both are now ready.

Their seconds place them, and as there is really no advantage in the ground, this requires little effort.

"One moment before we begin! It is Mr. Grimes who speaks, and all eyes are at once turned upon him. "Let us understand the conditions of this affair. Will the gentlemen's honor be satisfied with the first blood, or is it to be a duel to the death?"

The baron opens his mouth to declare for the latter, remembering the disgrace put upon him when the wine was dashed into his face. Just then his eyes rest upon the countenance of the American. What is it in Mynheer Joe's looks that causes a spasm to pass through the frame of the duelist? He hardly knows himself, save that for perhaps the first time in his life he has had an undeniable twinge of fear.

"The first disabling wound will satisfy me," says the baron, coldly, secretly meaning that when he himself gives this it shall be the coup de grace through his foeman's heart.

Mynheer Joe inclines his head.

"What the Russian says suits me. I am ready for any conditions," he remarks.

"It is understood, gentlemen, a disabling wound brings the little affair to a termination, and we, the seconds, are to be the judges. Are you ready for business?" calls Mr. Grimes.

Both swordsmen assume favorite positions and make affirmative responses. Mr. Grimes nods his head to the Frenchman.

"Begin!" calls that worthy, sharply.

Hardly had the word left his lips than the sword blades kiss with a ringing sound, and the extraordinary duel among the hills of Mokkatam has begun. It is the baron who assaults; he is eager to discover the mettle of his antagonist, and throws some fire into his attacks, though not forgetting to keep his guard intact, and retain some reserve.

The spectators group around, and prepare to witness one of the most astonishing scenes that ever took place upon the bank of the historical Nile.

It does not take an experienced swordsman long to learn that he has met a foeman worthy of his steel, and ere they have been at it ten seconds the Russian allows a look of surprise to be seen upon his face.

This is succeeded by an expression of terrible ferocity. He has discovered the calibre of his antagonist, and is more than ever determined to kill him then and there. Fortunately, the object of this solicitude has something to say about this matter himself, and he speaks with no uncertain sound.

For perhaps a minute or so, the swords meet and writhe and twist like gleaming snakes. Then the agile baron springs back beyond reach. He has failed in his first attempt. What will he endeavor to accomplish now?

He knows better than to display any signs of alarm. On the contrary, he forces a sneer upon his lips and appears unconcerned.

Again he advances, to adopt an entirely new system of tactics, which the American meets as becomes the favorite pupil of Monsieur Duval, the famous swordsmaster of all Paris.

The baron is amazed to find that each of his little tricks is met is rapid order. He gains no advantage. If Joe were surrounded by a wall of steel he could not be more secure apparently from the onslaught of his antagonist.

On his part, the American admits that never has he met one who could wield the blade with such power and skill as this Russian duelist. He is kept busy repelling attacks, and when he finds an opportunity to make a lunge on his own account it is met and parried by the clever work of the baron.

Mr. Grimes looks on and smiles; he thinks he can afford to, knowing well what a surprise will yet come upon the Russian. As for the French captain, he rubs his hands together in great glee; such a spectacle as this appeals to everything that is martial in his composition. He forgets that two men are battling for life, and only sees the marvelous skill brought to bear in manipulating the swords. All the while fervid exclamations escape him, as if he cannot keep his feelings under control; he is like a kettle of boiling water—when the heat reaches a certain stage he bubbles over.

"Sacre! Look at that lunge! Magnificent! And that return! Charmant! It is worth losing a night's sleep to gaze upon such lovely play. Mon ami, observe the blades kiss and twine about each other. My friend has met a noble adversary. Mon Dieu! Such coolness, such wonderful arms, I have not seen in all my life. I am proud the Americans are the friends of the French. But it is one great pity—he must go down. The baron tires them all out—his arm is made of steel. I trust it will only be a flesh wound. Parbleu! I should hate to see that brave man die."

Thus he mutters and exclaims in starts, as he watches the fierce engagement. Mr. Grimes hears him. Mr. Grimes does not share his apprehension one iota. He simply utters in the Frenchman's ear, the one word:

"Wait!"

Meanwhile the second bout between the two men has proven as fruitless as the first. As if through mutual consent they spring back to recover themselves.

"Time!" says the Frenchman.

They rest upon their swords, and during this brief interval keen eyes are upon them. The French captain contrasts the two. He has declared that the baron, in the past, has won more than one victory because of his wonderful endurance, which has enabled him to wear his antagonist out. To his surprise, he now discovers that the Russian has put forth such tremendous force in the attempt to beat down Joe's guard, that he shows more signs of exhaustion than his antagonist.

What does Mynheer Joe do, as if to show his contempt for the man against whom he is pitted, but take a cigar and place it, unlighted, between his teeth.

The baron's eyes flash lightnings when he sees this act. He realizes that the mistake of his life has come upon him. When Mynheer Joe entered Cairo the Russian's star began to decline. It is now going down with a rush.

"Ready!" he cries, raising his sword.

The American meets him half way, and for the third time the weapons clash together. Now the baron exhausts his repetory of curious strokes and tricks, hoping to discover some weak point about the other's defense.

In this he signally fails.

As yet he has felt no twinge of fear, trusting in his own skill to defend himself. If it comes to the worst, the duel can be called a draw, and he sucks consolation out of that fact, while not omitting to keep a close watch for the opening he still hopes to discover.

A new phase in the duel is about to take place, what Mr. Grimes has been so anxiously awaiting. He wonders why Mynheer Joe delays so long, and can only lay it to that strange feeling of fine humor which causes a cat to play with a mouse.

It comes at last.

Joe springs back a pace, passes his sword from his right hand to his left, and it at the Russian like a tiger. His trenchant blade flashes before the baron's eyes, and a cry of wonder and dismay is forced from the latter's lips, when he realizes a new arm is matched against his wearied one; that the marvelous attack must now be met in a different manner than before, since it proceeds from the left shoulder.

Mr. Grimes hears a groan beside him. It is the French officer, who realizes that the day is lost to his cause.

The baron is game. He battles desperately to save himself. Mr. Grimes notes the sallow hue that has crept over the man's face, and he knows the duel is already decided. For the first time perhaps in his life, the Russian feels the cold clutch of fear at his heart. Once a man allows this feeling to come over him in a duel, his chances are gone. At the same time, over-confidence is just about as fatal to success. The only safe course is a line between, cautious and wide-awake, ready to do his best and leave the rest.

It becomes apparent that the baron weakens. His defense is no longer the marvelous one he put up while Mynheer Joe continued the right hand movement. These flashes from the uncouth side dazzle him. He has never been drilled to meet the attack of a left-handed swordsman, and finds his brain unable to successfully cope with the new problems thus suddenly presented for solution.

The baron is lost.

He might still save himself by springing back and sullenly refusing to con-

Orders for bookbinding should be left at this office. It is surprising how nice a volume can be made of these magazines, even though they are somewhat soiled from much handling. Books, magazines or periodicals bound or rebound in any style at very reasonable prices. Blank books, such as journals, ledgers, day books, with any kind of ruling, made to order. All work warranted first-class. THE INTELLIGENCER, Belleville.

PUSHING AHEAD....

Everyday finds us steadily advancing and requiring more and more men to do our work.

And we get the workmen—workmen of the best type, too. Just the kind you want to do your work, that's the style of men we are looking for.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

Sunshine Furnace
Some Furnaces, try to heat the whole neighborhood by sending 90 per cent. of the heat up the chimney. What you want is a Furnace that will heat your whole house, and send only the smoke up the chimney.
And this is just what the Sunshine Furnace does. It has more radiating surface than any other Furnace made, and all the heat is forced through the hot-air pipes—not into the smoke pipe and up the chimney.
The most economical, the greatest heat producer, the cleanest and simplest heater on the market.

ENCAUSTIC PAINTING.

The Art Was Practiced by Ancient Greeks and Romans.

The use of paint brushes is of great antiquity. But as late as the fifteenth century it was customary to apply varnish by smearing it on with the fingers or with a bit of sponge, as the varnishes then used were too viscid to flow well with a brush and could be put on more thinly and evenly with the fingers. This practice was used in the earliest times of which there is any record. The Egyptian mummy cases bear evidence of having been varnished in this manner.

The use of fresco, or water color paints, though the oldest, was not the only method known to the ancients. The Greeks and Romans especially practiced encaustic painting. Encaustic paints were made of clarified beeswax, with which, when melted, pigments were mixed. These paints were applied hot with brushes or spatulæ, and when cold they were given a glazed surface by holding a torch or a hot iron near them. The hot iron was called the "cauterium."

Another method is said to have been to melt the wax with rosin, and after the pigment was added the compound was allowed to cool to a hard and brittle mass, which would be pulverized. The colored powders made in this way were mixed with water, so that they could be applied with a brush like fresco paint, after which they were melted by the cauterium. If rosins were thus used with the wax, a sort of varnish was the result. If the wax was used alone, the finished painting was sometimes varnished. These colored waxes were also used for writing. The red especially was used for royal signatures, whence the use of red sealing wax for a seal. And this "incausticum," as it was called in the middle ages, is the origin of our word ink.—Cassier's Magazine.

THE ALBATROSS.

Curious and Elaborate Dances In Which It Participates.

It is well known that many of the cranes and other long legged wading birds indulge in curious antics that partake closely of the nature of the human dance, but it is not known to many persons that the albatross has the most elaborate and ceremonious dance of them all.

Only very few have ever seen the albatross on land; probably nine persons out of ten who have seen the wonderful birds at all have observed them only on the ocean.

One of the nesting places of this great winged creature is the island of Laysan, in the Pacific ocean, and there at times the ground is absolutely covered with their nests. It is on Laysan that the albatross dance was first seen by a lucky scientist.

The ceremony begins when a lot of the birds are grouped in a circle. Two will advance toward each other, bending and nodding their heads in exact imitation of the human bow. Then they spar with their bills, crossing them gently and still making funny little bows. Then one bird will lower its head and stand quite still in that pose, while the other throws its head back till the bill points straight into the air. It puffs out its breast and advances with a queer, fantastic strut, uttering a curious grunt. The other bird begins to snap its bill till it produces the sound of castanets.

So the two will alternate, advancing and retreating and bowing to each other by turns. Sometimes one will pick up a bit of grass or a feather and offer it to the other. Then a second couple will join the dance, and at last as many as forty of the huge birds may be engaged in the queer pastime.

Campbellford, May 13—There were 750 cheese boarded, 650 white and 100 colored; all sold to Magrath at 6 13-16c; board adjourned until May 24, after which it will meet on Tuesdays, as formerly.

Found Dead in Canal.

Cornwall, May 14.—Early yesterday morning the lockmen found the body of a man floating in the canal at the lower docks. All the clothes were gone except the shoes and socks. The body had evidently been in the water a long time. The head was crushed and both arms were missing. It is possible that it may be the remains of E. McClusky, the G.T.R. operator, who mysteriously disappeared from here last October.

Brain workers know the penalty of ill-health. Let the bowels become clogged—the liver sluggish—the stomach upset—the blood impure—and that "tired, overworked" feeling steals over the brain.

ABBEY'S SALT clears the brain by cleansing the system. It sets stomach, liver and bowels to do natural work in nature's own way. It is the ideal blood purifier—the perfect stomachic—the unfailing liver regulator.

THE BRAVE BOYS IN RED.

HAD A FINE PARADE LAST EVENING—MAY GO TO KINGSTON ON MAY 24.

The Fifteenth had a parade and march-out last evening, which, considering that it was the first march-out of the season, was excellently attended. The regiment went to the Hospital lot, where they were drilled for some time. Both bands were in attendance.

At a meeting of the officers, held after the parade was dismissed, the proposed trip to Kingston was discussed, but no final decision was arrived at. The matter, we are told, will be definitely settled on Tuesday evening next.

On Sunday, May 22, there will be a church parade to St. Thomas' Church.

Quartermaster-Sergt. Mills is very busy these nights issuing uniforms, and says that the demand for them this year is so far much above the average.

New serges for the regiment are expected about the end of next week.

WIFE DIED SUDDENLY.

MR. J. P. McCONNELL, FORMERLY OF THIS CITY, IS A GRIEF-STRICKEN MAN.

Toronto, May 13.—Mrs. J. P. McConnell, wife of the business manager of Saturday Night, died suddenly at her home at 448 Manning avenue about 9 o'clock this morning, just after Mr. McConnell had left for the office. Her death was entirely unexpected. She and Mr. McConnell were preparing to go on the excursion of the Canadian Press Association to St. Louis, which leaves to-morrow morning. She had, however, not been in the best of health for some months past, and her sudden death is ascribed to an affection of the heart. She leaves one child, a little girl of four years.

Ed. Note.—The Mr. McConnell mentioned above was at one time employed on the defunct "Sun," of this city, and his many friends will sympathize with him in his affliction.

S. H. TEACHERS' CONVENTION

THE CONCLUDING SESSION YESTERDAY AFTERNOON — COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO CONSIDER THE QUESTION OF PROMOTION EXAMINATIONS.

The last paper read at yesterday morning's session of the South Hastings Teachers' Institute was one on "questioning," by Miss Harold, of Octavia Street School. Miss Harold said that to be successful in questioning, one must be thoroughly conversant with the subject, so as not to hesitate and thus lose the interest of the class. The questions should be asked rapidly, and rapid answers should be demanded. Pupils should stand when answering, and in general should give answers in full sentences. Classes should be constantly reviewed.

The Closing Session.

On reassembling in the afternoon, Mr. Luck, of Deseronto, moved, seconded by Mr. Fairman, that a committee consisting of Mr. Johnston, I. P. S., Messrs. Hicks, Mott, Luck, Simpkins, Gardner, Barragar, Miss Urquhart, Miss M. A. Northcott, Miss White, of Trenton, and Miss Armstrong, of Deseronto, be a committee to meet at the call of the Inspector, to consider the whole matter of promotion examinations, and report at next meeting of institute.

The subject of "Letter Writing" was next discussed by Mr. Johnston. Mr. Johnston advised teachers to hold public examinations twice a year.

Miss Gowsell, Mr. Hicks, Mr. Ross, Mr. Mott and Mr. Simpkins also spoke on the benefit to be derived from holding such public examinations.

Mr. Johnston also advised teachers to take a part of the afternoon on Friday for recitations, reading, etc.

On motion of Mr. Fairman, seconded by Mr. S. A. Gardner, a hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Johnston and Mr. Hicks for the good programme arranged by them, by which we have been so much benefitted during the last two days—Carried.

The Institute then adjourned.

Christian Scientists Puzzled.

Christian Scientists are somewhat puzzled as to the exact meaning of a by-law which has lately been received from headquarters, as follows:

"Members of the Mother Church shall not be made members of clubs or organizations, the Free Masons excepted, which exclude either sex, or are not named in the Manual of the Mother Church. God separates the tares and wheat, to garner the latter in his storehouse."

This is recognized as placing the ban on certain societies and associations which limit their membership to either men or women, and many members of the C. S. Church are said to be affected.

DEFENDS ENGLISH FARM LABORERS.

PRINCE EDWARD MAN WHO WRITES SOUND SENSE TO A PICTON NEWSPAPER.

The following letter, signed "D.W.K." and dated Cherry Valley, appeared in the last issue of the Picton Times:

"Dear Sir,—I am not a Quaker, but I have some Quaker notions about me, and when the spirit moves me to say a thing, it hurts to keep it back. I was informed last Saturday of a nice little row that was kicked up in Picton a few days previous about these emigrants that are being brought out by the Prince Edward farmers' labor association. It is said our worthy president, R. J. Crothers, threatened to apply his boot to the posterior of a scalawag who was interfering in a matter in which he was not concerned. I was pleased to hear thta the president was backed up by a prominent citizen of Picton, who soon showed what he thought of said interference. Isn't it astonishing that there are so many individuals in our midst who are never content unless they are stirring up discord. They will acknowledge that there is a scarcity of laborers in this place, and yet as soon as there is any new help brought in they will begin to meddle. They will go to the man who thinks of employing one of the new comers and try to persuade him that they are no good and that it don't pay to employ such help. Then they will go to the new comer and say to him "don't you take the wages they offer, you can get more wages." Then there is the same disposition manifested in some of the new comers, content with nothing. We are persuaded that we have the best bit of country on God's earth, and yet there are individuals amongst us who will not be contented unless they can have all their eyes behold. Such individuals would not be contented in heaven, but would try to stir up discord as did old Cloven Foot. The only way to deal with them is to kick them out. I am glad to know, Mr. Editor, that this new movement, the P.E.F.L.A., is on the whole a good thing for the farming community, and R. J. Crothers deserves great credit for the way he took hold of it and especially for the way he is hanging on to it. Of course there are some failures—men who might better have been left in the old countries—but there are some splendid fellows, just what we want to see; lads who are willing to take hold of anything and want to earn their money. I know of two such chaps who came to this country some thirty-five years ago and went to work on farms at $7 per month and now they own the farms they worked on and are counted well off, worth at least $10,000 each, and are respected citizens."

January 27, 1903.

I cannot express in words the praise that is due to Iron-ox Tablets, which I got as a trial package from our druggist, Mr. McDonald, who told me they were just what I wanted. I took them more for fun, but before I had finished one box I got great relief. I was subject to great misery after meals, with bloating, and would rift up bile of the bitterest taste, and always woke up in the morning in the same way for the last twenty years. Had tried all medicines, but now I am completely cured, and it was by taking Iron-ox Tablets. Words cannot express my gratitude to you.

Insurance Losses at Toronto.

Toronto, May 14.—The total amount of insurance losses reported adjusted at the close of yesterday's sitting of the general committee was $3,681,206.37, based on the "sound" value of the stock and buildings, of which the insurance companies will be called upon to pay $3,108,866.90. The figures up to Thursday totalled $3,351,881.22, and $2,835,974.60, respectively, so that the results of the appraisements handed in yesterday were $329,325.17 additional valuation of property and stock damaged, and $272,892.30 in further insurance losses.

Ottawa, May 14.—A despatch was received at the Department of Public Works yesterday stating that the Government steamer Eureka while passing down the St. Lawrence Thursday night collided in Lake St. Francis with a barge and a Dominion Coal Company's vessel. James Sutherland, Minister of Public Works, was aboard the Eureka making an inspection of the canal.

FOR PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Member For East York Gives the House of Commons Notice.

Will Move at First Opportunity to Have Railway Act Amended to Provide For the Public Ownership of Telephones and Telegraphs—He and Dr. Sproule Advocate Such a Measure—Mr. Fitzpatrick in Answer.

Ottawa, March 14.—When the orders of the day were called yesterday in the House, Mr. Maclean arose and moved the adjournment of the House in order that he might bring to its attention what, he said, he considered an important and urgent question, and one which came home to everybody, viz., the nationalization of the telephone and telegraph systems of this country.

"Every day's delay," said Mr. Maclean, "will increase the difficulty and involve a greater national expenditure and bring in a greater number of interests to be dealt with. The Postmaster-General gave the public in a way to understand some years ago that he had such a project in view, and the Minister of Justice is on record as having pledged the Government to introduce a general act dealing with the telephone service, in which act he was expected to provide for at least the nationalization of existing lines by the Government, in so far as the trunk lines are concerned, and for the municipalization of local telephone services. So far, however, no progress has been made, and if for no other reason than this delay, I am warranted in making this motion and calling the attention of the Government to their pledge.

After discussing at length the convenience of the telephone in modern life, and the progress made in the direction of nationalization in other countries, Mr. Maclean said:

"Public ownership will give every farmer in Canada a telephone in his house at $8 or $10 a year, and he cannot get it to-day for less than from $40 to $100. I know cases where farmers have been asked from $100 to $150 a year for connection with the Bell Telephone service. If we can give every farmer in Canada who desires it a telephone in his house for $8 a year and business men in towns and cities a telephone at $20 a year, as they have in other countries, let us try to do it. A progressive Government would have taken this question up long ago. The P.M.G., who was following what the heads of other postal systems in other countries have taken up long ago, should have dealt with this matter. The Minister of Justice, who had promised to give relief with regard to the telephone situation, if he had studied the situation and desired to keep his pledge, would have brought in a bill long ago curing these grievances either on the line of a general act regulating the telephone system or by an act making the telegraphs and telephones the property of the State. . . . . There is no way to break the monopoly and extend the use of the telephone except by nationalizing the lines and making provision for the municipalities to take over the local services."

Mr. Fitzpatrick Answered.

The Minister of Justice wanted to know when he had promised a bill to nationalize telegraph and telephone lines.

Mr. Maclean answered that the Minister had prepared a general bill and he understood one of its clauses would provide for regulations of that kind.

Mr. Fitzpatrick said that he had introduced a bill in 1902, which, with Mr. Maclean's bill, was referred to a committee, and both were held over. Subsequently he was met by representatives of the municipalities, and no two of them could agree what should be done. There was no general opinion among them in favor of nationalizing the telephones. Mr. Maclean was alone of that opinion in the House. "Why does not my hon. friend bring in such a measure?" Mr. Fitzpatrick asked.

"I cannot, as a private member, introduce a measure involving the expenditure of money. The Minister of Justice is paid to study the progress of events throughout the world, and he must see what they are doing in England, in Sweden, in Australia and other countries."

Mr. Fitzpatrick asked what was the deficit on the national telephone system in England in the last two or three years.

"There has not been any," was Mr. Maclean's reply.

The plea of the member for East York was seconded by Dr. Sproule.

No other member spoke on the question. Mr. Dyment, in whose constituency are the Towns of Fort William and Port Arthur, most vitally interested on the subject, not only refrained from speaking, but actually got up and left the Chamber while the discussion was in progress.

Employment of Aliens.

About 10 o'clock Sir William Mulock read the correspondence between the Minister of Labor and the Grand Trunk people on the subject of the employment of aliens on the G. T. Pacific survey.

The correspondence showed that Mr. Griffith of the Amalgamated Association of Civil Engineers wrote to Sir William Mulock, April 2, giving him a list of United States citizens employed on the surveys, while many qualified Canadian engineers were out of employment. A copy of this was sent to Mr. Hays, who replied that 96 per cent. of the C.P.R. survey engineers were Canadians or British subjects. This, Sir William said, he regarded as an unsatisfactory answer, and with that he went on to speak of the necessity of observing the spirit and the letter of the Alien Labor Law in the case of the G. T. and C.P.R., which, he said, was also employing United States engineers.

Mr. Clarke denounced the dilatoriness of the Government in the matter, and discussion continued until 12.20 this morning, when the House adjourned. It will be resumed when the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill is taken up again.

Tuesday week will be Empire Day, and when the House adjourns next Friday night, it will not meet again until Wednesday afternoon.

Something On.

Ottawa, May 14.—Hon. J. M. Gibson of Toronto, who has been here all day and most of the day in consultation with Hon. William Mulock and Hon. Mr. Hyman. There is something on. Premier Ross was here a few days ago. A reconstruction of the Toronto Government is near at hand, and probably, also a change in the Ontario section of the Laurier Cabinet. Perhaps Mr. Gibson is going on the bench and Mr. Hyman to get a portfolio. But who is to be Attorney-General of Ontario?

Want Provincial Control.

Ottawa, May 14.—Yesterday morning a deputation presented a largely-signed petition to the Government, requesting legislation enacting that electric railways holding Dominion charters should be subjected to provincial legislation, with the special object of enabling the provincial authorities to control the operation of such lines, so far as Sunday is concerned. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, Sir William Mulock, Hon. William Paterson and Hon. C. S. Hyman were present. The Premier promised consideration.

Transvaal Not Mentioned.

London, May 14.—The Anglo-Chinese Labor Convention was signed by Foreign Minister Lansdowne and the Chinese minister at the Foreign Office yesterday afternoon. The convention applies to all British possessions. The word "Transvaal" is not mentioned.

MONTAGUE'S DONATION

Sir Alex. Peacock's Acceptance Should Cause Him to Resign.

The Melbourne Age Declares a Psychological Puzzle—Proposed English Floating Exhibition, in the Interests of Preferential Tariffs, Has Failed—Major Seely, M.P., Says Chamberlain's Policy Is Parochial Instead of For Empire.

London, May 14.—(C. A. P.)—Justice Hood, in the report of the Victorian Bribery Commission, acquits Sir Alexander Peacock of any corruption in the case. The Melbourne Age declares it a psychological puzzle why Sir Alexander Peacock made use for party purposes of the Montague donation which Mitchell rejected, and suggests that it would be good taste on his part to stand aside from politics.

Floating Exhibition Fails.

London, May 14.—(C. A. P.)—The proposed English floating exhibition, which was scheduled to visit the colonies in the interest of preferential tariffs, has fallen through. Attempts had been made to get the British Empire League to assume the scheme but without success.

Chamberlain Policy Parochial.

London, May 14.—(C.A.P.)—Major Seely, M.P., speaking at a meeting of the Free Trade Educational Committee, when a paper was read on free trade as the best foundation for the Empire, condemned the Chamberlain policy as parochial, instead of in view of the whole Empire. Under the old colonial preference preferential duties were continually evaded. Baltic timber was shipped to Canada and back again to England, so great was the preference given colonial timber.

Secretary of Defence.

London, May 14.—(C.A.P.)—Sir George Clarke was appointed secretary of the Defence Committee.

The Light Dues Bill.

London, May 14.—(C.A.P.)—In the House of Commons, the bill proposing to abolish light dues and to throw the cost of coast lighting upon the Exchequer was carried by a majority of 28 voters. The Standard decalres it impossible for the light dues bill to be carried further this session, owing to the opposition of the Government. The light dues bill has passed its second reading.

Canadian the Donor.

London, May 14.—(C. A. P.)—The donor of the prize offered for a fable on the British Fire Prevention Committee is Col. Goad, a Canadian. The maximum length of the fable is 1,200 words.

More Than Half.

London, May 14.—(C. A. P.)—The number of British emigrants, 250,950, for 1904, is greater than for any year since 1889. The increase is chiefly due to the large number going to Canada and South Africa. Rather more than one-half went to the British colonies.

Coffee to Dye Eggs.

London, May 14.—(C.A.P.)—British egg dealers are greatly interested in Lord Onslow's advice to use coffee to dye home eggs to compete with the tinted article from abroad. Colored eggs run a shilling higher per 100.

Three Years in Kingston.

Cornwall, May 14.—Two weeks ago J. C. Stewart, fourth concession of Lancaster, engaged a couple of young Englishmen to assist about the farm. On Friday, while Mr. and Mrs. Stewart were absent attending a funeral, the two men ransacked the house and decamped with some jewelry and $140 in cash. One of the thieves, who gave his name as Percy Jones, was arrested in Montreal and was brought to Lancaster. The prisoner admitted his guilt. Jones was sent to Cornwall and was tried Thursday before Judge O'Reilly, who sentenced him to three years in Kingston Penitentiary.

Anthracite Coal Production.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 14.—The annual report of the United States Department of Mines for 1903, relating to the anthracite coal trade of Pennsylvania, shows a total production for the year of 67,000,000 tons. This output is valued at $135,000,000 at the mines and $300,000,000 at the points of distribution. There were 518 fatal accidents in the anthracite region. There are 151,827 employes in and about all mines, and they worked an average of 211 days in the year.

Sister of Lady Jette Buried.

Ottawa, May 14.—The funeral of Sister Marie de la Nativitie, who was for fifty years connected with the Grey Nunnery, took place yesterday morning. The deceased lady was sister of the late Hon. Rodolphe Laflamme, Minister of Justice in the Mackenzie Government, and sister of Lady Jette. Sir Louis and Lady Jette, Lady Laurier, Rodolphe Lemieux, Solicitor-General, and S. F. Lemieux, were present at the funeral service.

7 Sutherland Sisters' HAIR GROWER

MISS IDA ROADHOUSE, Peterboro' Ontario
Seven Sutherland Sisters' Hair Grower and Scalp Cleaner shows results from the very first. Here is more proof that we have the greatest hair grower science ever produced.

Seven Sutherland Sisters
Dear Ladies,—Having been benefited by the use of your Hair Grower and Scalp Cleaner, I take much pleasure in recommending same. At the time of your visit to Peterboro' last October, I showed you my head, which I thought was a hopeless case, and after looking at the bald spot on my head which was then about the size of a fifty cent piece, and enlarging more every day, you advised me to try your wonderful remedy, which is worthy of being termed so. I did, and to my surprise, before I had used one of your large sized bottles of Hair Grower and only half a package of Scalp Cleaner I could see a covering of a sort of scales and upon continuing to use it the scales fell off without leaving a mark of any kind. My hair now on the bald spot is about three inches long and growing more and more every day to my delight. I cannot really recommend it enough and am thankful that such a remedy came to my rescue.
Yours truly, IDA ROADHOUSE,
Peterboro' Ont., Box 858.

Two sizes, Hair Grower 50c and $1.00; Scalp Cleaner 50c. The only dandruff cure. For shampooing it has no equal. At all druggists.

BRITISH CAMP IN PERIL.

Llamas Preach Holy War—Thibetans Have Found the Range.

Gyangtse, Thibet, May 16.—The country in front of the mission is in a ferment. The Llamas are going from valley to valley preaching a holy war. Two thousand Khamba warriors are marching to join the army in the Gyangtse fort.

The bombardment of the camp continues. The Thibetans have found the range of every building in the camp, but the British are all well under cover and communications with the rear are still open to St. Johann.

struck 26 Miles of Ice.

Halifax, N.S., May 16.—The Norwegian steamer Verdande, Captain Olsen, from Newcastle, England, for Quebec, with a cargo of coal, arrived at North Sydney yesterday with three of her bow plates stove and her forepeak filled with water. While crossing the Grand Banks on May 10 the Verdande encountered heavy Arctic drift ice and had to steam through 26 miles of it. A survey has been ordered, and it is possible that the cargo will have to be discharged to effect temporary repairs.

Five Eaten By Cannibals.

Vancouver, B. C., May 16.—Mail advices on the Australian steamer Miowera yesterday are that five men were killed and eaten by cannibals of the Admiralty Islands in the South Sea. The British warship Condor was sent to the scene and set fire to the village where the cannibals lived. The Condor threatened to annihilate the village if the cannibals were not surrendered. This was done and the cannibals were shot.

JAPANESE ARE ADVANCING IN SOUTHERN MANCHURIA.

Marching Slowly and Remaining in Close Touch With the Reserves.

Movement is Aimed Partly at Haicheng, But Chiefly at Liaoyang, Japanese Main Force Being 40 Miles From It—Great Crop of Rumors on Saturday—Unconfirmed Story That 10,000 Were Killed in Capture of Port Arthur.

Liaoyang, May 16.—The Japanese army in Southern Manchuria is marching slowly, evidently being desirous of remaining in close touch with the reserves. The movement is aimed partly at Haicheng, but chiefly at Liaoyang. The Japanese main force is only 40 miles from Liaoyang.

The Russian troops are in excellent health and spirits and anxious to do duty. The inspiring sounds of the Russian soldiers re-echo through Liaoyang the whole day, varied by the music of the bands of freshly arriving regiments.

Saturday's Wild Rumors.

London, May 16.—The telegraph and cable lines were kept busy Saturday with rumors. The capture of Port Arthur, where ten thousand men lost their lives, was a contribution by Paris; Newchwang sent word of fighting at Liaoyang and Shanhaikwan reported a battle at Sinyen, ending in the capture of the town and a Russian loss of fifteen hundred killed and wounded. None of these reports were confirmed. General Kuroki announced the occupation of Wangtiensien, and General Pflug its evacuation by the Japanese. The other official advices showed that the invading force were advancing and strengthening their positions in Manchuria, and were continuing their raiding operations on the Liaotung Peninsula. Japanese warships, according to a despatch from Che Foo, had bombarded Dalny in connection with a land assault. It was believed that the town had fallen.

Rising Against Christians.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—Gen. Pflug reports under date of May 15: According to information from the frontier guards and missionaries, Topatesatse, twenty-five miles southwest of Huptchentsi, a Chinese rising against Russians and Christians, is being prepared.

Bandits Hired By Japanese.

Liaoyang, May 16.—Among seventeen prisoners taken by the Russian troops Saturday were two Japanese officers, who had escaped from the Russians. One of the bandits taken prisoner confessed that the bandits had been fired by the Japanese, whom they were supplying with information.

Again Cut Off Port Arthur.

Liaoyang, May 16.—The Russians, on May 11, apprehending that the presence of a Japanese squadron meant an attempt to capture Dalny, blew up the piers and quietly evacuated the place, Two thousand Japanese have re-occupied the road to Sanchilipu, again cutting off Port Arthur. A strong force is advancing against Polandien.

Dalny Garrison at Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—The garrison of Dalny, after destroying everything that would have facilitated a Japanese landing, joined the troops in Port Arthur. The train which Col. Spiridonoff rushed through to Port Arthur from Liaoyang on the 11th, when the railroad was temporarily open, took to Port Arthur a submarine boat in sections.

Jap Troops Move.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—Lieut.-Gen. Sakharoff has sent the following report to the general staff, dated Liaoyang, May 14; "The enemy's advance guard on May 12 reached Touintsou, on the road between Fengwangcheng and Liaoyang. Our two sotnias of Cossacks retired towards the Village of Kantsaendiantig.

"A Japanese force of three battalions of infantry, ten guns and two squadrons of cavalry, from Zeludschthan, on the road to Miaotien Pass, was seen on May 11 in Tafanoon Valley. Since then there has been no news of the force, which leads to the conclusion that it has branched off westwards towards Haicheng.

"A detachment of the Japanese vanguard left Touintsou May 13 southward and was pursued by our Cossacks, who exchanged shots with the Japanese rear guard for half an hour, and having in the meantime discovered an ambush prepared by the Japanese, retired.

"Our scouts ascertained that a Japanese force of two regiments of infantry, eight guns and three squadrons of cavalry, had approached Lindiapoutse and Errtaoufan.

"Our line of patrols between Lanshanhouan and Samadza had a skirmish with Japanese bandits, in which three Cossacks and three horses were killes, three Cossacks slightly wounded and four missing."

Alexieff Reports.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—The Emperor has received the following report from Viceroy Alexieff, dated May 14:

"I beg respectfully to communicate to Your Majesty a report from Rear-Admiral Wittzoeff, on the state of affairs at Port Arthur from May 6 to 12. The report was brought by express runner from Dachichao station on the eve of the second interruption of communications by the enemy's squadron. It follows:

"'The enemy's squadron, composed of ironclads, cruisers and torpedo boats, appeared off Port Arthur, May 5, and continues to blockade without undertaking active operations.

"'The work of repairing the ironclads Czarevitch and Retvizan is proceeding with unabated energy and with every success.

"'During the examination of the roadstead and fairway at the spot where the battleship Pobieda was damaged by a mine, we found one of the enemy's defence mines, which had been exploded by the force of the hurricane.'"

Russ Prisoners at Tokio.

Tokio, May 16.—Four hundred and fifty Russian prisoners, 16 of them officers, arrived at Matsuyala yesterday morning on the steamer Colombia. Nine officers and 286 men were wounded. All of the prisoners expressed great satisfaction at their unexpected kind treatment.

U.S. Cruiser at Che Foo.

Che Foo, May 16.—The United States cruiser New Orleans with Rear Admiral Stirling on board arrived yesterday from Shanghai. The orders were simply to come to Che Foo. Rear-Admiral Stirling said the reason for his coming and his future movements are unknown to him. In view of the previous order that no ships should come north of Shanghai, the movement of the New Orleans is considered significant here. One interpretation of the arrival of the cruiser is that the United States will insist upon the neutrality of Newchwang when the Russians evacuate that place. The New Orleans is too large to ascend the Liao River.

King Peter May Abdicate.

London, May 16.—Writing from Belgrade, a correspondent draws a gloomy picture of the condition of King Peter and the country. He says political and social circles are under a cloud of apprehension as to Servia's future. The air is full of rumors of dissensions in the great Radical party, the resignation of the Cabinet, the eventual abdication of King Peter and the possible occupation of Belgrade by Austrian troops. The rumors of abdication are declared to be premature, but it cannot be denied that the King's health is not good.

Newspapers on the Ocean.

New York, May 16.—Signor Marconi arrived on the Campania of the Cunard Line Saturday, and told of the daily newspaper which will shortly be published on the vessels of that line. "I have arranged," said Signor Marconi, "to supply the steamships of the Cunard Company with a certain amount of news—two hundred words—each day, and this will be printed in the Cunard Bulletin."

Goldwin Smith Talks of Arnold.

Sir Edwin Arnold, the English author and journalist, who died recently, was a personal friend and former pupil of Dr. Goldwin Smith, of Toronto.

To a reporter Dr. Smith stated that while he had been a warm friend of Sir Edwin, he had very few reminiscences of the late author to relate.

"He was a pupil of mine while at Oxford," said Dr. Smith, "where he obtained the University Prize for English verse. I remember the poem which he recited before the University Convocation. It was called 'Belshazzar's Feast,' the last two lines of which ran as follows:

Crownless and sceptreless Belshazzar lay,
A robe of purple on a form of clay.

"He became the editor of The London Telegraph, which was at first a very sensational paper, but developed into a more popular journal, and later took on superior rank. In The Telegraph he strongly supported Mr. Gladstone. The proprietor of The Telegraph was a Mr. Levi, who, upon being given a baronetcy, changed his name to Lawson.

"During his journalistic career he was engaged in writing poetry, but never obtained a great reputation as a poet. He had, however, a remarkable command of luscious language. 'The Light of Asia' was a great success, partly because it was new to most readers. Another work, 'The Light of the World,' was not so great a success; it was not new, and was exceedingly difficult to handle.

"He visited Japan, where he became enamored with Japanese character and civilization, and married a Japanese wife.

"He was a successful journalist, judged from a pecuniary point of view, while his general success as an educationist earned him a knighthood."

"Was Sir Edwin not a guest at the Grange?" querried the reporter.

"He was upon two occasions, the last of which was on Nov. 26, 1891, when he was on a lecturing tour," replied Dr. Smith, in conclusion.

Story of Seton Thompson.

M. S. Clark writes from Toronto to The Montreal Witness as follows: "The other day at the closing exercises of Palmerston Avenue Public School I heard Mr. Hughes, Public School Inspector, tell the children the following story of Ernest Seton Thompson:

"Thompson was a pupil at the Victoria Street School in this city, and seems even at that time to have acquired some skill in animal sketching. One day while the teacher was out young Thompson went up to the board and made an excellent chalk crayon picture of some animal, giving it, however, a man's head easily to be recognized as that of the teacher of the room. When the latter came in and saw the picture, he sternly asked who had made it. When Thompson owned the deed, the teacher punished him for daring to leave his seat without leave. 'And thus,' added the inspector, with strong facial expression, 'instead of taking the incident as a joke and complimenting the young artist on his excellent drawing and thereby winning the heart of every boy and girl in the class, he thr-r-r-a-s-h-ed' (crushing frown here) 'him, and did his best to beat out of his young heart the splendid talents which God had given him.'

"While wondering what the moral effect of such a story would be, when told to a room full of boys and girls before their teachers, it occurred to me that Seton Thompson had not yet got over the habit of putting men's heads on the animals he has known and sketched, but his own most frequently, rather than that of his teacher's. It is hardly to be expected that any other students of nature will meet such creatures in the wild wood or flowery vale as Seton Thompson claims to have known."

To Clean Benares Brass.

Many of our flower pots and vases in the fashionable "Benares brass work" will soon lose their luster, and readers may be glad to know that they can be kept bright by the following method of cleaning: The skins of lemons that have been used for culinary purposes may be utilized by turning them inside out and dipping them in silver sand. Apply these scourers to the cut brass, but never to a polished brass surface, and rub and polish afterward with a soft cloth. If lemons are not handy, powder some bath brick in a saucer, pour over it some vinegar and apply this with a piece of coarse flannel to the cut brass surface and polish with a soft duster.

The Kitchen Apron.

For the woman who must go into her own kitchen, even in afternoon dress, there is an apron to be had that will protect the daintiest gown from contact with pots and pans. It is made of heavy gingham in Mother Hubbard shape, the neck being cut out square and buttoned behind, reaching to the floor, where it is finished by a ruffle that makes it stand out from the gown to catch the drops that might fall. To go with these aprons are sleeves of the same material that cover the bottom of the dress sleeves, and then, too, there is a cap to cover the hair.

For Meritorious Conduct.

On March 16 at the Citadel, Quebec, Conductor J. H. Wood of the Ordnance Stores Corps and formerly Regimental Quartermaster Sergeant of the R. C. G. A., was presented with the military medal for meritorious conduct. The presentation was made by Col. J. F. Wilson, commander of the fortress, at a special parade of the R. C. G. A., the Ordnance Corps and the complement of the Canadian fishery fleet now undergoing instruction at the Citadel. Conductor Wood's military career has extended over a period of nearly 24 years, and during that time he has never been brought to "office" for any offence. He formerly lived in Toronto.

THE WORST KIND.

After Piles have existed for a long time and passed through different stages, the suffering is intense—pain, aching, throbbing, tumors form, filled to bursting with black blood.

Symptoms indicating other troubles may appear to a thoroughly Pile-sick person.

This is when Hem-Roid, the only internal, the only absolute Pile cure, brings the results that has made its fame.

It will cure the most stubborn case in existence and a bonded guarantee to that effect goes with each package.

It is to be had at the drug store.

THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC AGREEMENT.

An amendment was proposed by the Opposition in the Commons to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway bargain, to the effect that the Grand Trunk should own the rolling stock "outright."

To this the Minister of Justice objected, declaring that "the company "could not carry out the terms of "the contract without owning the "rolling stock, so as to be able to "give the Government a first mort-"gage."

In reply to this, Mr. Borden quoted the language of Sir Charles Rivers Wilson at the meeting held in London, when he was urging the Grand Trunk shareholders to accept the terms of the agreement with the Government of Canada, he then saying:

> "As Mr. Hays, perhaps, will tell you, the rolling stock is to be furnished by a trust"

To this the Premier, Sir Wilfrid, gave the following extraordinary answer:

> "As Mr. Hays had not said a word about it, that indicated that the subject had not been discussed, and too much importance should not be attached to it."

What inference is to be drawn from the version of the statement made by Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson — and quoted by Sir Wilfrid? Only this, that Sir Charles made a statement which was not correct, for the purpose of misleading the shareholders, as evidence of which Sir Wilfrid argued that, "as Mr. Hays said not a word about it, no importance should be attached to it."

Not very complimentary to the President of the Grand Trunk.

Either Mr. Hays acquiesced by his silence in Sir Charles' statement, or he allowed the statement to remain uncontradicted for the purpose of deceiving the shareholders, and by that means secure their support to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway scheme.

The fact is apparent, the Government dare not make the contract clear. The Grand Trunk, through the superior ability of Mr. Hays, has dictated its own terms, and has the Government bound hand and foot. All that is left for the people to do is to pay and grumble.

MINING IN NORTH HASTINGS.

It is very gratifying to those who have been faithful to the mining interests of the North Hastings district to know that never since the great mining boom of 1867-70 have the prospects been so bright as at present for that section. The refractory ores, which at one time in the history of this district were the great cause of the collapse of mining—as it was then considered impossible to treat them, either by amalgamation or any other process then known—are now considered as easy to treat as free milling ores. This fact has at last given confidence to investors and at present there are some ten or twelve American and Canadian companies interested in that district, and almost daily we hear of properties having changed hands.

In the Marmora district the Messrs. Cook-Lamber Co., of Toronto, have been developing their properties for the last three years, and have decided to erect a twenty-stamp mill near the site of the old Dean and Williams mill. They are also negotiating with the Atlas Arsenic Company to have 4000 tons ore milled from the dumps close to that property.

The Sovereign Company at Malone have been working for the last two years, and have, it is stated, over 4000 tons ore of a high grade ready to mill, and expect to start milling in the course of a few weeks.

The Cordova Gold mine, which has been temporarily closed down for the last four months, owing to internal troubles in England, is to start work again in a few weeks.

The Craig mine in Tudor, which is considered the finest property in the district, is to continue work on a large scale. The compressor plant, boilers, etc., will be in place by the 15th June, and a twenty-stamp mill will be erected during the summer. A very large amount of development work has been done on this property, and the results have fully realized the most sanguine expectations of the owners. It is known that this great fissure vein can be traced for over three miles, is over twelve feet in width at the present levels, and shows high values in gold; also in copper. Fine buildings have been erected on the property.

The old Bannockburn mine, which has been closed for several years, has changed hands and is to be operated during the summer.

The Helena lead mine is also in full blast, and the lead smelter which has been erected is to start by 1st June.

About four cars of sulphides is shipped daily from the sulphur mine at Bannockburn.

These are only a few facts connected with mining in North Hastings, but it is our intention to in future keep our readers fully informed regarding this most important industry.

This is alleged to be untrue, and naturally Hamiltonians are wroth about it. It does certainly appear that the attempt to promote Sabbath observance by alleged deceit should be frowned down.

The general Methodist conference of the United States, now in session in California, is discussing the expediency of removing the ban of the church from dancing, cards and the theatre. Keep an eye on your old rubbers. It is a fact that there is more commercial value to rubbers to-day than ever, and the man who assiduously lays aside all his discarded rubbers, rubber coats, boots and other articles of general use, may find the waste heap a small savings bank. The reason for this is that rubber is getting scarce, owing to the rapid increase of manufacturing interests, and to the gradual exhaustion of the supply of crude rubber. The past severe winter had also a great effect upon the market, as the sale of rubbers was unprecedented. The rubber scrap heap is becoming an important factor in the situation.

"Your remarks about the over-working of school-children were timely and well advised," said a citizen on Saturday night, "but it is the principle which is wrong." That, it may be remarked, is something we do not deny. But why over-work growing children for the sake of a principle? If they cannot pass into another book without working extra hours, let them stay in the same one for another term. They'll be all the better for it in the long run. After all, is it not quality we want in the matter of education, rather than quantity? A boy or girl who knows the three R's, and knows them well, is much better off than one who has a smattering of different other things, many of which they will never use and a whole lot of which they will forget as soon as possible.

A NOTED HORSEMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

Mr. Antoine Wendling, owner of Deveras, 2.11 1-4, and proprietor of the Clifton House, Brockville, says no liniment compares with Nerviline for general use around the stable. For strains, sprains, swellings, internal pains and especially for affections of the whirl bone Nerviline is unequalled. Mr. Wendling believes Nerviline is indispensable as a horse liniment; it has strength, penetrating power and works thoroughly. Every horse and stock owner should use Nerviline. Cheese Board

At the Cheese Board on Saturday afternoon, which was largely attended, 1,300 boxes of white and 350 boxes of colored cheese were boarded. The majority was sold at 7 1-16c, Mr. Magrath being the buyer.

During the meeting the following motion was brought up:

Dr. Simmons moved, seconded by Mr. Anderson, That whereas there were a number of factories, a part of Belleville Cheese Board of Trade, who refused to employ an inspector or instructor during the season of 1903, that in the interest of the cheese business of this district, we believe that all members of this Board should co-operate by every legitimate means in procuring a proper inspection of cheese.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

THE INTELLIGENCER is printed and published for The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing House (Limited) by CHARLES JAMES BOWELL, of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, at their Office, No. 403, Front Street, Belleville, Ont.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more pone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Billious headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedelia."

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

T. S. McINTEE.

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

TEN THOUSAND HOMELESS.

Earthquake in Balkans on Easter Monday Unreported.

London, May 16.—A man who recently returned from Sofia writes to the newspapers giving a description of the results of a Balkan earthquake on Easter Monday, which has practically not been noticed by the press.

Two thousand houses were destroyed and 10,000 people made homeless in a fertile valley in which lies Jumabala, the scene of the disaster. The writer describes a ride through the villages a week after the seismic disturbance. Houses were levelled to the ground and there were huge cracks across the streets. Sulphurous streams of mud and water were ruining the crops.

The smashed arsenals of the Khan were crumbling to the ground, and the Government buildings littered the earth like rubbish heaps. Amid the tragic confusion the poor people, who were dazed and confused, were silent, but were striving to repair the damage to their homes, although this was almost hopeless, as they have little capital and meagre resources.

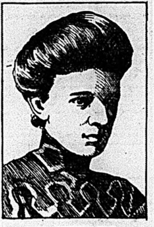
MRS. ANTOINETTE FUNK.

A Professional Woman Who Advises Women to Remain Domestic.

Mrs. Antoinette Funk is one of the cleverest women lawyers in Illinois. Mrs. Funk really grew up in the law office and the courtroom. Her father practiced law at Dwight, Ill., and when he died she went to live with her uncle, C. C. Strong, at Pontiac. In her uncle's law office she began her studies simply because she was fascinated with the business and not because she ever expected to enter the profession. In time she was married. After her two daughters were born she moved to Bloomington and there resumed her studies in the Illinois Wesleyan university. Before she finished her course she decided to take up the practice of law as soon as she could be admitted to the bar. Five years ago she was admitted to practice and since then has continually followed the profession.



MRS. ANTOINETTE FUNK.

For a professional woman Mrs. Funk has some extraordinary opinions about women in the professions. She does not believe in it. She is herself a lawyer by accident and not by design, and she deplores the fact that women ever chose to enter public or semipublic life. She takes great interest in her work, but she says any woman is out of place in any of the professions.

"A woman is better off with a few babies at home than in a law office," says Mrs. Funk. "Woman's place is in the home, as it has always been. No change in social or economic conditions can alter that. The woman who enters a profession and assumes the duties and the hardships of public life gets out of her natural environment. The continual and increasing drift of women toward public action is working an ill effect upon society, and the ill will grow greater as the proportion of professional women increases.

"I have two young daughters. Both of them were born before I took up the practice of law. I shall do everything in my power to turn those girls from the thought of entering any profession. I shall teach them all the domestic arts so far as I can, for that is what they should know.

"The professions rob women of their domestic tastes. It cannot be denied that woman loses interest in her home duties the minute she begins her public work. Housework, which the old fashioned woman delighted in, has come to be scorned by the great majority of the well to do women. Of old it mattered not how much money a woman had at her command she did at least a considerable part of her own work. The same condition should exist today, but it does not. The only semblance of it left is fast disappearing under the influence of new tastes acquired by women."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Be Careful How You Sit.

In sitting women are guilty of a number of sins of awkwardness. The stout woman, for example, invariably sits squarely, with feet planted about twelve inches apart and her toes turned out.

The lean, long legged woman, on the other hand, winds her feet round the legs of her chair or else crosses her legs and thrusts her feet out in front of her.

Now, the stout woman should "poise" herself and sit very erect. The lean woman should choose the highest possible seat and plant her feet firmly on the ground, thus reducing her excessive angularity.

The small woman also does some peculiar things. She either sits with her small feet dangling in a helpless way or perches herself on the edge of a high seat, with the toe of one foot touching the ground and the other foot hooked round the ankle of the first. Instead of aggravating the smallness of her stature she should choose the lowest chair in the room and sink gracefully into it.

But the greatest offender against this physical art is the mannish girl. Her very attempt to assume man's ease and freedom is the cause of her downfall. Her exaggerated attitudes indeed become absurd mimicry.

Beautifying a Door.

In a room recently seen tapestry was utilized in a most attractive way. The owner of the room explained that the doors of an otherwise promising apartment which she wished to convert into a library were of cheap wood with an ugly finish and hopelessly spoiled every decorative scheme that was tried. In this dilemma an artist friend suggested covering them with tapestry, which was done. The material is the good upholsterer's variety, to be had almost anywhere in satisfactory reproductions of antique designs. This was put on the doors to cover them entirely and evenly. Small invisible tacks were used, and afterward a narrow cord braid of so dull a shade that it was almost invisible was put on over the tacks. The casings were stained in a dark tint corresponding to the background of the tapestry, and outside of them, flat on the wall, was placed entirely around each door frame, from the floor at one side to the floor at the other, a band of the tapestry about six inches wide.—Table Talk.

Lighting the House.

In the lighting of houses plenty of light judiciously shaded is what best suits the majority. The idea in artificial lighting is to suggest the brightness and warmth of sunlight within the house walls. The only real sunlight color being pale yellow, this should be used largely. It is far more comfortable and more economical to have the light down low, surrounding and warming the occupants of the room, than to have it standing out cold and chill from a distance. The wax candle is untidy, and its light is not practicable for reading purposes, but for general purposes there is no purer or softer light. Many women prefer to have their drawing rooms underlighted.

The easiest way to outwit a liar is to tell the truth.

THE BLACK SEA FLEET.

That Russia earnestly desires to send the Black Sea fleet through the Dardanelles there can be no question, and the most elementary knowledge of geography is sufficient to show the advantage the passage would give in enabling these warships to reach quickly the scene of the conflict with Japan. The rumor is again revived that Russia will ask the Porte or Turkish Government for permission to use the Dardanelles, but the Russian ambassador at Constantinople has not, it is stated, any hope that the request will be granted. How different it is in Canada, where smokers can get all the Dardanelles they want. All tobacconists keep Dardanelles Turkish cigarettes, with cork, silver or plain tips.

A GIRL SUICIDE.

Selected Rosedale Ravine, Toronto, As the Place of Death, and Used Carbolic Acid.

Toronto, May 16.—Lying dead from her own hand, a two-ounce bottle, one-third full of carbolic acid, by her side, the body of a young woman was found in the Rosedale Ravine yesterday afternoon. It was about 4.30, when Richard Noble, 219 Victoria street, and Isaac Johnstone, rear 10 Centre street, were walking along the ravine drive, when they made the discovery. The body was lying a few feet from the fence, under which she had evidently crawled, as there was an opening sufficiently large enough for her to pass through. The spot she selected to take her fatal potion is about midway between the Sherbourne street and Huntley street bridges. Noble and Johnstone notified the police, and Constables Follis and Scanlan took charge of the body, which Chief Coroner Johnston ordered removed to Millard's undertaking rooms.

Description of Dead Girl'

The body is that of a young woman 18 or 20 years of age. So far she has not been identified, nor is there any report to the police of any one missing that answers her description. She was dressed in a black serge skirt, heavy cotton corded shirtwaist, black satin ribbon around her neck, with a bow in front, heavy laced walking boots, black hat, grey cloth jacket, with check lining. Her hair was light brown, worn pompadour, and tied with a black ribbon. The shirtwaist was fastened with two flag pins., On one was the word "Toronto."

Her Chatelaine's Contents.

The bottle which contained the poison was of blue glass, with a glass stopped, with a label marked carbolic acid. Near her was a small black chatelaine bag, containing a farthing piece, two "good luck" tokens, an American cent, set in white metal, a receipted bill for 12 cents for "drug," an opera house seat coupon, dated Jan. 2, Saturday matinee, a program of the "Bonnie Briar Bush," and the business cards of Dr. Rowland O. Dickson, dentist, Carleton and Yonge streets, and Sebastian H. Barnett, baritone. There was no money nor letters.

It is not thought the body had been lying there long, as the clothing, while damp, was not thoroughly soaked. The mouth and lips were burned from the acid.

Coroner Johnstone had not decided last night whether he would hold an inquest or not.

Later.—The young woman is believed to be Norah Golden of Mount Forest.

THE INEVITABLE CHOICE.

Parting of the Ways as Illustrated in the Downfall of Young Harold Webster, of Toronto.

Gold and diamonds; pearls and precious stones. Easy to conceal: readily converted into cash. Will he become a thief for their sake, revel for a brief time in unwonted affluence, and ever afterwards hate himself for his folly, or will he win respect, confidence, and an enviable reputation by adhering to the principles of strict integrity?

This is the question to which young Harold Webster, the Ellis jewelry pilferer, gave the wrong answer, says The Toronto Mail and Empire. His case is typical of many. In all lives the choice must sooner or later be made. The bait is not always the same, but the hook is ever there. It is worth while considering, from a purely business standpoint, what it costs to be caught by the snare, and what it means to avoid it.

Debt and Credit Account.

There is no greater fallacy than to suppose that anything in this world can be obtained for nothing. If it is earned one gives his labor. If it is bestowed as a gift one assumes an obligation which he will be bound to discharge. If it is stolen, be it of great value or small, the highest possible price of all is paid. The thief gives his character in exchange for his booty. That character may not be worth much in the later stages, but at the outset it is a priceless possession, the very best that any man has to give—better, indeed, than life itself. Let us, therefore, place on one side of the account a man's character, his future, his entire life's earnings, and, on the other side of the account, whatever the circumstances of the moment may place within his power. This, no doubt, is lowest in the plane on which the subject may be discussed, but it does not prevent one from rising to higher considerations. It enables one to declare with unqualified certainty that ill-gotten gains demand a sacrifice representing in hard cash ten times, a hundred times, nay, a thousand times, their apparent value.

Value of a Character.

What shall a man ask in exchange for his character—the one asset that is greater than all other assets? In every walk of life the man who is sought after is the honest man. To him all things are possible. Not only in banks, but in every branch of the manifold activities of business and of daily life, the strictly honest man is indispensable. He may have many good points, but unimpeachable integrity is his great qualification. Confidence is the corner-stone of business. Reputation is the superstructure, and it can be raised only on a well grounded foundation.

Slavery at Its Worst.

But the worst of all fates is the slavery of the dishonest. One false step may have been taken, and regretted so soon as taken. How often does it happen, however, that in taking that step a young man places himself within the power of another who is older in crime and has less scruples? Then exposure is threatened unless there are other betrayals of trust. Thus in the end the unwary become the slaves of those who are lying in wait to goad them to dishonesty and profit by their folly. In all such cases, and they are numerous, the bulk of the profit, if indeed it can be called profit, goes to the more crafty and experienced partner in the venture. The middleman establishes a supremacy over the operator, and reduces him to a condition of abject, trembling slavery, forcing him by increasing demands nearer and nearer the brink beyond which are ruin and desolation.

Value of Self-Respect.

Whether the wrong is immediately detected or not, the greatest penalty paid for the crime is the loss of self-respect. A man may be misjudged by his fellows, he may pass as genuine coin when he is really counterfeit, but in his own unerring consciousness he is known as he really is. What is to be compared in mere dollars, or their equivalent, to the ability to look the world unflinchingly in the face and to fear none? The folly of the thief who hopes to escape detection is past understanding. He is his own detective, his own judge and his own jailer. Be he ever so bold, there are nameless terrors for him on every street corner. Every eye penetrates into his secret. Every footstep alarms him.

Honesty as a Policy.

Better reasons for unvarying integrity might be advanced. There is the eternal command, and also the altruistic aspect of the question. But the point that is emphasized by daily experience, repeated over and over again, is that a life that is not steadied and guided by an honest purpose is doomed to become a worthless wreck, and that character is the pure gold coin of business life, that nothing can compensate for the sacrifice of reputation, freedom and self-respect. This means, of course, as the old proverb has it, that honesty is the best policy. It were better that men were honest for honesty's sake, but whether that suffices or not, it is always well to remember that honesty is the watchword of business success.

Why Young Men Fall.

Young men fall because they fail to weigh in the balance the ultimate cost of the first wrong step. They fall because they mistake the real source of happiness in life, and strive to acquire that which is not so precious as good reputation, with its accompanying pleasures—peace of mind and the confidence of their fellow-men. Money is not wealth. The greatest assets are a clear conscience and a good character. These conceded, all that a man can reasonably desire, certainly more than can be dishonestly acquired, is sure to follow. The prohibition of covetousness is not a meaningless law. He who is content with what he has or what he honestly earns is avoiding a great temptation, and is preparing for riches which no man can dispute, and which he can enjoy as long as life lasts.

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

tinue the engagement with a man who has such a wonderful advantage over him, in that his left arm is as dexterous as his right.

Perhaps such a thought flashes into the mind of the Russian; he is human, and life is sweet to him; but he does not take advantage of the idea. Pride rises against it. He comes from a race that would meet death rather than appear a coward.

So he battles on, doing his best to longer hopes to assault in turn—his arm is too tired for that. He suffers excruciating pain every time he makes a move. More than once can Mynheer Joe, if he chooses, drive his blade through the body of his foe. He lets the chances slip by; perhaps the time may come when he will regret this mercy, but he does not like to have the blood of a white man on his hands.

At last the opportunity he looks for comes; there is a quick movement, a sudden cry, and the sword of the American protrudes through the right arm of the baron at the shoulder.

Lord Carmorgan has been avenged with the weapon he handled in vain!

CHAPTER XV.

With another quick movement the American withdraws his sword and steps back a pace to avoid any punishment, but the baron is in no condition to deal such. He sinks back, and only that the French captain springs forward and catches the baron in his arms he must fall in a heap.

There is no sign of fainting, only exhaustion. He stands there, sustained in part by his second, looking at the first man in all the world who has proved his master, and the gleam of those eyes can be termed nothing less than diabolical.

Mynheer Joe leans on his sword and coolly surveys his antagonist. Then he calls for a match and applies it to the cigar which he has held between his teeth all this while. It is evident that he has no fear of the future.

The tableau remains unbroken for perhaps a full minute.

"Time!" says Mr. Grimes, clearly.

Mynheer Joe, still smoking calmly, elevates his sword. The plucky baron makes a move to follow suit, when his second, the French captain, throws himself between.

"Mon Dieu! You would not finish this affair with murder, comrades? It was agreed that a disabling wound would end it. What served him so well is now almost as useless as a dead member. You will call it quits, or I shall offer myself his substitute!" he cries with commendable enthusiasm and pluck, since he knows he is no match for the Yankee.

"On one condition," returns Mr. Grimes, who also produces and lights a cigar, while the irrepressible Sandy is scribbling away for dear life in shorthand at the rate of a thousand words a minute, more or less.

"Name it, monsieur."

"The baron provoked this duel by an insulting allusion to the American flag. It has had a trial by arms, and the decision rests against him. Let him frankly apologize, not to my friend only, but to Americans everywhere, and I am sure Mynheer Joe will be satisfied as well as myself."

The proposition is reasonable.

"Parbleu! I see no reason why it should not be done in common justice, since it has been decreed that my principal was in the wrong. It was a grand sight though; a superb spectacle that will haunt me always. What say you, monsieur le baron—do you withdraw your allusion to the flag under which this gentleman serves?"

The Russian smiles.

"I am compelled to, since I declared that it covered only cowards, for he has proven very plainly that I made a mistake. Mynheer Joe knows my allusion was made only to provoke him to a meeting, so that I need retract my words no further than this."

"You have had the meeting; are you satisfied, baron?" asks Joe, himself.

"For the present, yet," returns the other, between his teeth, "but this does not end it, my American friend. No man has ever yet run across my path and lived. Your time will come!"

"No man up to now has ever worsted you in a duel, Russia, but you met your match here. Take care it is not your life that is snuffed out like a candle. We Americans shoot to kill when we engage with wolves or tigers," says Mr. Grimes.

The baron does not answer, but if looks can do deadly execution, then would our three friends drop on the spot.

By this time the surgeon has taken the baron in charge, and leaving open his shirt which is already saturated with blood, he proceeds to bind up the wound in a business-like way.

It will prove painful for some little time, but not dangerous, unless the baron's blood is in wretched condition, when blood-poisoning may set in. A wound of this sort is of a more serious nature in a hot country than if received where the air is bracing.

Mynheer Joe quietly resumes the garments he cast off when preparing for the duel, and in five minutes one would not imagine he has been engaged in any such business.

It is time they returned to the river. Sandy, in particular, is anxious to reach Cairo for some reason or other.

Just as they are about to bid the others a courteous good morning and withdraw from the scene, the silence that broods over the place is suddenly and rudely broken.

Shrill cries, filled with anger, ring out, coming from the direction of the river. It sounds as if a dozen men or tiger cats are endeavoring to see which can make the most noise.

"They're coming!" exclaims Sandy, whipping out his revolver, and selecting a good-sized palm as a base of defense.

It flashes through the minds of all that the baron has made a threat when he declared the duel did not end the feud between himself and Mynheer Joe.

Then again, they remember their conversation in the cabin of the dahabeah, when the possibility was mentioned, of a conspiracy to overwhelm them in case the baron lost the fight.

When they hear those fearful shouts, it comes to the mind of Mynheer Joe as well as Mr. Grimes, that the Arabic crews of the two boats have combined and are rushing upon the scene to down the enemies of the baron. Perhaps some prearranged signal has been given to let them know the result of the duel, and that it now rests with them.

Hence, acting under this belief, the two Americans instantly draw their weapons. They do not stand in their tracks, but immediately leap forward to meet their expected foes.

Sandy, seeing the new state of affairs, quits his beloved palm, and follows after them as rapidly as his shorter legs will allow.

To their surprise the enemy does not show up; their fierce clamor still continues, but it seems to be in the quarter where the boats have both been left. Mr. Grimes is the first to guess the truth.

"Bless my soul, I believe they're having a small war among themselves!" he says.

"Yes, we're not in it," gasps Sandy.

Another moment, and they turn an angle of the rocks that allows them a clear view of the battlefield. Sure enough, the rival crews of the two dahabeahs are at it, hammer and tongs. How the affair started may never be known, for these rascally Arabs cannot be hired to tell the truth when there is a chance to lie; nor do the Americans care materally about this point.

Mynheer Joe, without a moment's hesitation, bounds away, heading for the boats as though it is his intention to join in the melee, where broken heads will soon be the order of the day.

"He'll be killed!" cries Sandy, hurrying along at the side of Mr. Grimes.

"Don't you believe it, my boy. Joe is used to quelling such disturbances among the blacks of the Soudan; and, my word for it, he'll bring this affair to a sudden close. Watch! There he goes now."

The explorer has leaped aboard the dahabeah nearer the shore. It is upon the deck of this all the Arabs are gathered in a noisy crowd, pulling one another's froway hair and threatening to make blood flow.

Mynheer Joe's voice is heard like a trumpet above the clamor, which gradually dies down as different members of the mob quail before his eye and terrible appearance.

"Back to your boat, all who belong there! Back, or you shall die like dogs!" he shouts in the Arabic tongue, which, in his long service in the Soudan, he has fully mastered.

They hear his words, they see his threatening manner, and as the mobs of blacks obeyed the slightest wish of the magnetic hero Gordon, so a portion of his reflected light is placed, like Elijah's mantle, on the shoulders of the man who saw him die and avenged his fall.

First the old reis jumps across to his own deck, and he is speedily followed by one and another of his crew.

The will-power of a single man has ere now controlled thousands, and Mynheer Joe is possessed of this personal magnetism, that draws men to him, and even affects his enemies.

When Mr. Grimes and Sandy pull up at the rocky landing, peace has fallen upon the crews of the rival river boats. Though they glare at one another and make threatening gestures, they do not longer call out.

Some of the Arabs look rather the worse for their little tussle, and one in particular seems to be such a wreck that Sandy proceeds to draw his picture for the great book which he expects to issue some day, and which will illustrate all that a wide-awake war correspondent has seen during his travels in times of bellowing cannon and piping peace, the world over.

They cast off and are soon beating against the contrary wind. As the current of the river favors their return to Cairo, they make fair progress, and the glittering city, with its mosques and minarets, its ancient buildings and modern quarters, seems to draw closer all the while.

Mr. Grimes seems thoughtful, while Sandy can hardly keep quiet, so exuberant are his spirits over the success of his friend.

When Mynheer Joe notices this, he does not hesitate to speak to the pseudo silver king.

"You don't look satisfied, Mr. Grimes?"

"That's a fact," replied the other.

"Didn't the affair turn out to suit you?"

"Not exactly."

"Ah! you wouldn't have had the boot on the other leg, my friend?"

"Never! But that man should just now be lying there under the palms. They used to say out West, the only good Indian is a dead Indian; and I'm sure the only time the baron will be a gentleman in the true sense of the word, is when he is laid out."

"Well, we needn't worry; we leave Cairo before many hours, bound for India. Let the baron fume and the heathen rage; we'll sail away over the seas and be happy."

Joe is thinking of Molly, for he already knows she and her father are to be members of the company on board the Alhambra, when the steamer leaves Alexandria for Port Said and the Suez Canal.

"Don't count on that, milord," remarks Sandy, looking up from his drawing.

"What d'ye mean, old fellow?" asks Joe, while Mr. Grimes, who already knows, nods his head and looks very wise.

"The baron goes to India by the steamer, the Alhambra."

Mynheer Joe frowns; he sees trouble ahead, knowing as much as he does of the man.

"That is too bad. It will spoil all our pleasure on the voyage. I am sure Miss Molly will regret to hear of it," he says.

"Like a death's head at a feast," from Sandy.

"If we could postpone our flitting until the next steamer," suggests Mr. Grimes.

Joe shakes his head.

"Impossible for me," he says, soberly.

"I've got it?" exclaims Sandy, beginning a war dance on the roof of the cabin, paper in one hand, pencil in the other. "Yes, I've got it!"

"What! The Nile fever?" demands Mr. Grimes.

"A subject for a dancing dervish," suggests Joe.

"Wrong, both of you, gentlemen. What I've got concerns us all. It's an idea!"

At this moment Mr. Grimes and Joe make out to be dreadfully excited, appealing to Sandy not to let it get away and to be very careful lest his brain should burst.

"These sudden ideas are dangerous," declares Grimes, with great soberness.

"They may be for you, but my bread and butter depend on them you see," returns Sandy, not at all annoyed by their joke.

"Well, share it, old fellow."

"Don't you see we're anxious to hear all?"

But Sandy takes his time.

"It concerns you both, of course, but most of all, it interests the baron."

"Ah, yes: of course, it does."

"The next steamer after the one we take arrives a week later at Alexandria. It is called the Malwa. What I propose is that the Russian bear shall miss the Alhambra and be compelled to lie over a week at Alexandria."

The others soberly take his hand and squeeze it to show their appreciation of his brilliant idea, which appears to strike them in a favorable light. At the present they do not stop for investigation.

"How will you do it, Sandy?" asks Joe, his eyes bent upon the wonder city ahead on the east bank of the Nile, the environs of which they have now reached.

"I haven't bothered myself about that yet, but this brain of mine can be depended on to bring out the proper thought when the time comes. Count upon it as a settled fact. The baron will remain in Alexandria when the steamer leaves; more than that I do not feel able to promise."

It is just as well he does not, since he may be unable to fulfill the conditions.

Their attention is now directed in another quarter, and the conversation wheels around to different subjects. Both of Joe's companions have had their respect for the explorer increased on this morning, first by the brave manner in which he went to meet a foe, who, up to this time, has proven invincible, and in the second place by his dexterity in vanquishing that same individual. They have regarded him with respect before, but now their feelings are almost like those of a brother. He is a wonder and a marvel to them.

Other boats sail upon the broad Nile, and the picture is one that the student of nature and peculiar customs never tires of admiring; for what with the strange craft, their gaudily dressed passengers and the setting of old Cairo in the background, the scene is one that appeals to all that is romantic.

They see nothing of the rival dahabeah, but among the scores of similar boats in sight she may be nearer than they think. At any rate, the subject is one of indifference now.

A landing is made at the same spot where they embarked. Ere leaving they settled with the old reis for the use of the craft.

Different indeed are their feelings now; when going aboard, the near future was dark and forbidding; it was like a lottery from which they had just drawn a prize. Not one of the trio

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

Royalty Traveled Common Road.

The Duke of Connaught, the recently appointed first inspector-general of the forces, has traveled no royal road to that distinction. It is close upon 54 years ago since—to use his father's phrase—"a little boy glided into the light of day," and was received with jubilates by his sisters. "We are just as many as the days of the week," was the cry. So it was that the Duke got his first fond-name of "Sunday." This, as Prince Albert wrote to Stockmar, "was out of well-bred courtesy to the new-comer." To his mother it seemed "a singular thing that this so-much-wished-for boy should be born on the old Duke's 81st birthday." She prayed that "that, and his beloved father's name, might bring this poor little infant happiness and good fortune." She was to live to see the full-grown man in the enjoyment of both. The "William" in the Duke's font-names came from his other godfather, then the Prince of Prussia, and afterwards the German Emperor. "My name," Prince Albert explained, "the Queen insisted on retaining by way of coda." It is curious to remember that, a month or so before this auspicious event, the command of the army had been under consideration. After the Duke, who was to fill that office? "The Queen and I," the Queen's husband wrote to the field-marshal commanding-in-chief, "have been considering your proposal to join A.G. and Q.M.G. into one chief of the staff, with a view to facilitate the future assumption of the command-in-chief by myself." In the Prince's modest estimation every general officer with experience in the field would do better than himself who had not had the advantage of such experience. Moreover, most important duties connected with the welfare of the sovereign, which could only be performed by himself, would be left unperformed. And, on the whole, he felt that he must discard the tempting idea of being placed in command of the British army.

A Widow, a Girl And a Bear

By C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

Besides owning a farm of a hundred acres the widow Jenkins was the possessor of a one horned cow, a three legged sheep and a tame bear. All were curiosities in their way, but the cow and the sheep have nothing to do with this story. As the side show men say, they are thrown in without extra cost, and it is up to the bear to entertain the audience.

Besides owning a farm of nearly 200 acres, situated about half a mile below the widow Jenkins', Squire Davis was the proprietor of the only windmill for ten miles around and the father of a son twenty-two years old named Harry. The windmill was a good thing in its way, but it will be blown out of this story at once and make no reappearance. The squire was a pompous, aggressive sort of a man who wanted to do all the bossing and have other people do all the minding, while the widow was a woman with a mind of her own and didn't propose to be walked on by anybody. It thus came about that soon after she was left a widow she and the squire clashed. No lawsuit followed, but it was a bad thing for the cattle and pigs that strayed over the boundary lines, and there was always something doing to furnish the neighbors with talk.
